THE BEAUTY'S CHOICE.

Mrs. Hawley's prettiest boarder was the bit of a blonde girl named Florence Castleton. It was a roman name and she had a romantic history. Her parents were dead, she was the heiress of their property, and had a guardian. He had been in love with her mother, and was very jealous of the daughter's guardianship, treating her with arbitrary power, and teasing her quite as much as pleasing her with his affection.

Yet it was quite exasperating to the young men to see her hanging on his arm, and he a handsome bachelor of only 40. He boarded at a hotel; she had Mrs. Hawley's prettiest set of rooms. They were furnished by herself, and most charmingly, in rosewood and blue damask. She had canaries and a parrot, and a King Charles spaniel, and a maid under her authority, and it was but a short time after her arrival before every young man in the house was markedly subservient to her.

There were four young men in the house—Charlie Childs, Fred Grove, Leonard Martin, and Dick Manchester—all bright, agreeable, marriageable young men, and all admirers of Florence Castleton. Finally, there was another; but he was too plain and bashful to be admitted to the elegant ranks of Miss Castleton's galaxy of beaux, and no one thought of his being any one's lover.

His name was David Atwood. He was a book-keeper, was plain in dress, and evidently straightened in means. He had one of the smallest of Mrs. Hawley's side rooms, spent all of his days and most of his evenings in the office where he was employed; never went to theaters or the opera, and possessed not the slightest style of manner.

The others laughed at him—he was so shy and awkward and bashful! And Florence Castleton often joined the laugh, silverly; yet no one offered him any disrespect. Indeed, they all acknowledged him to be a good young man, but so homely and awkward!

Florence Castleton had a very pretty voice for singing, and used to play upon a guitar, a beautiful one, inlaid with pearl, which her guardian had given her.

One evening, after David Atwood had resided in the house about six weeks, she brought it down to the parlor and sat down to play.

The young men gathered around to sing with her. Young Martin sang very well, and Charlie Childs sang better. While they were singing David Atwood came in.

He slipped into a corner, and sat down in his shy way, and was unnoticed until Dick Manchester, who was restless for mischief, called out: "Mr. Atwood won't you come and sing with us?"

"I do not sing," he said quietly. "Nor play?" asked Dick. "Only upon the violin," he answered.

Florence was strumming her guitar carelessly.

"Won't Mr. Atwood let us hear him play upon the violin?" asked Dick, glancing shyly at Martin, as if he was starting game. All awaited Atwood's answer with a certain degree of interest.

"I have not used it since I came here. I will unpack it, and if none of the strings are not broken I will play," said Atwood, and he rose quietly and left the room.

"How could you say that, Dick? He probably plays execrably," said Miss Jeannette Manchester, Dick's sister.

"I never knew a country bumpkin who hadn't a fantasy for a fiddle," said Martin. There, he's coming back! Now, if any one has fastidious musical sensibilities I would advise him to decamp."

"I'll stay," answered Dick. "We'll all stay and see the fun," said Grove, sitting down by Miss Castleton.

David came in. I began to understand what was coming as he bent his head over the violin and drew the bow lightly across the strings. In a moment he glided into an air of Verdi's, so light and graceful that it was like the fall of sea spray. Every ear and eye was given in rapt attention; some in delight, some in troubled doubt; as if they could not believe their own senses; some in spleen and envy, and all in amazement. Astonishment was the prevailing emotion.

When he had finished the opera air, he asked: "Is there any tune you would particularly like?" And he glanced toward the side of the room where Florence sat, rather than at Dick and Martin.

"Will you play the 'Phantom Chorus from Faust?' asked Florence. And the mild, sweet tones came forth obediently, in beautiful perfection. Air followed air. The company sat spell-bound until the suddenly revealed musician laid down his bow. A chorus of eulogistic phrases and expressions of gratitude followed; but David Atwood smiled only at Florence Castleton's simple remark. "We thank you!"

He left the room. A little while after I went through the hall and met him.

"You have surprised and delighted us all with your performance Mr. Atwood," I said.

He smiled.

"I learned to play to please a little sick sister I had once," he answered. "Since she died I do not care to play much, although I love music."

Just then Florence Castleton flitted by and went up stairs. I thought she heard what he said.

"Do you think she liked it?" he said with amusing simplicity and directness.

"Yes, I am sure she did," I answered.

I soon became perceptible to all observing people how much David Atwood was in love with Miss Castleton. He would turn pale every time she spoke to him, and once, when he brought her a chair in an awkward hurry, I saw him trembling like a leaf under her beautiful eyes. They were together that evening with three or four others, in the parlor.

"Miss Castleton," said a pretty little school-girl, who idolized Florence for her beauty, after the manner of school-girls, "your eyes are just the color of the water off Coney Beach, where I saw it last summer."

Miss Castleton laughed. "They are like summer skies," said Charley Childs.

"I swear that they are just like the binding of 'Owen Meredith'—in blue and gold," said Dick Manchester.

"And what is your comparison Mr. Atwood?" said Florence, looking archly at David.

His answer was involuntary. "They are like the blue larkspur which used to grow in my mother's garden," he said.

Florence Castleton blushed; it was the only time I had seen her blush. Looking up, she suddenly met the eyes of her guardian, Mr. Gray, who was present. Raising quickly, she went to the piano, and seating herself, played a light air.

That night a cry of fire awoke me. I lay unaffected for a moment until I suddenly perceived the odor of smoke. Raising quickly, I opened my door; the hall was filled with smoke, and there was great confusion in the house. The cry of "Fire, fire!" arose.

I lunged on a wrapper, drew on slippers, and commenced putting my most valuable papers into my writing-desk. While I was doing this there came a quick step on the stairs, and a voice crying the name of all who slept on the landing. I opened my door and saw for the first time that the doors of all the other chambers were open, and the occupants had fled. It was a servant.

"Oh, come down, for heaven's sake!" she cried. "The back part of the house is afire from cellar to roof, inside!"

There were doors in the hall shutting all the back part of the house off from the front.

"Are all out?" I asked, flinging a coat around me, and taking up my precious writing-desk. Miss Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Blake, Miss Houston, and Miss Castleton?" said I, as we went through the smoky hall.

"Heaven have mercy!" cried the Irish girl, "but I don't think Miss Castleton is out! I haven't seen her! Oh, what will I do!"

Just then a figure came leaping up stairs.

"Go down!" he cried to me, as he sprang past me.

He flung open the door between the two halls. A volume of smoke poured out, and I retreated. It was David Atwood. He new instinctively that he had gone for Florence Castleton, and that she would immediately be safe.

Down stairs the people were carrying out furniture, and the greatest confusion and consternation, mingled with much active energy, prevailed.

Mr. Gray caught the arm of Mrs. Hawley, as she fled down the stairs with a pile of valuable clothing.

"Miss Castleton, Mrs. Hawley—where is she?" he cried. "I don't know! I don't know!" she exclaimed despairingly. "Some one went for her. I have not seen her—"

Mr. Gray interrupted her with an oath, and sprang to the stairs; but at that instant the figure of David Atwood emerged from the smoke on the stairs, with the senseless form of Florence Castleton in his arms. She had apparently fainted with fright, or been overwhelmed with smoke.

She was half-dressed; her beautiful hair swept over David's arm, her white, unconscious face was clasped to his breast.

They carried her into the air, and she soon revived, and was carried to the hotel where Mr. Gray resided.

The fire was finally extinguished, but the house was very much injured and rendered untenable until repaired. It was spring and I went out of town; but that summer I received the following letter from Jeannette Manchester:

"My dearest Ester: I've such news to tell you! Florence Castleton has married that horrid, awkward David Atwood, who is a fright even if he does play beautiful on the violin. It seems that he saved her from the fire, and she went into a passion of gratitude, and he told her that he loved her; and that was a pretty state of affairs for that aristocratic Gray, who is more than half in love with her himself, I believe. But they say that Florence said to him: 'Dear guardian, remember my mother,' and he gave right up and let her marry Atwood. I wasn't at the wedding, it took place at the Gray's county seat, and they say the bride wore blue larkspur in her hair. Horrid taste! and so forth. J. MANCHESTER.

I smiled. I was very glad.

The Only Rebel.

In five weeks' wandering over Virginia I found but one rebel; she was a woman living near Harrison's Landing. It was a hot day as I followed the track of McClellan's retreat from Malvern Hill, and I was both hungry and thirsty. The woman being at the gate, I rode up and asked: "Madame, can I get dinner here?"

She saw the "Yank" in me quicker than seat, and instantly replied: "The Yankees stole all I had to eat."

"I'll pay you well."

"But I haven't got nuthin' to sell." "If you had some potatoes and bacon—"

"Yanks stole 'em all!" she interrupted.

"But you can give me a drink of water, can't you?"

"No, sir! The Yankees filled up the well and carried away the dipper."

"Is there a spring around here?" "Used to be lots of 'em, but the Yanks toted 'em off!"

Below us was the muddy James, and the drought had lasted so long that there was hardly enough water to float a catfish. Pointing to the historic stream, I asked:

"Why didn't the Yankees steal the river too?"

She scratched her head with a sliver pulled-off the fence, and never uttered a particle as she replied:

"They wanted to do it, stranger—wanted to the wust way, and when they discovered that it wouldn't load up worth a cent they galloped their old gunboats up and down and washed so many shirts in Turkey Bend that the James has been ashamed to look a cow in the face ever since! Maybe you can get a drink down there, but this 'ere neighborhood won't stand by and see you carry off any of the sand bars! Be a little keeful how you paw around!"

Read only such things as you can afford to store in memory's treasury.

We lose the peace of years when we hunt after the rapture of moments.

Crape on the Door.

"Some one has gone from this strange world of ours. No more to gather its thorn with its flowers. No more to linger where sunbeams must fade. Where on all beauty Death's fingers are laid—"

"There's crape on the door?" A mother going by with her darling involuntarily tightens her grasp of the little hand, as she sees the banner of death furled so near, and the boy feels the pressure and says:—

"What is it, mamma?" "Some one is dead, Willie."

"What does 'dead' mean?" The mother looked about her for an answer to the child's question.

"It means—it means—why, Willie, you remember when your little sister died, and was cold, and we buried her under the grass—"

"And then?" queried the child. "Then she went to heaven."

"Where is Heaven?" "Mamma, who made God?"

"Poor child! his thoughtless questions get no more satisfactory answers than our researches into an older theology over which we vainly agonize, and he must remain contented with his limited knowledge that some one is dead and it is the custom to put crape on the door—a custom beautiful in itself, infinitely beautiful if we look upon the insignia as one of hope and glad acquiescence in a summons to rest.

"Some one is resting from sorrow and pain. Happy where earth's conflicts enter not in; One more departed to Heaven's bright shore; Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door."

We do not clap our hands and cry joyously. 'Tis the banner of immortality! No! We start and walk with slow step and bated breath, as the very wave of the crape meets our eyes, and we shudder instinctively in the bright sunshine. The green leaves are showing the green will bloom, the birds will—heart throbs with the faintest of a smile. Leaves have their time to fall, And flowers to wither at the north wind's breath, And stars to set—but all Thou hast, all seasons, for thine own, O Death!"

Custom has decreed that we shall thus inform the passer-by that death is present, and the solemn badge of the shadowy ambassador guards the portal from all idle intrusion. No social visits are paid to the house that shows that ensign; nor do people linger idle in the vicinity of the house that is thus set apart from its neighbors.

"Weary with mingling life's bitter and sweet, Weary with parting and never to meet, Some one has gone to the bright golden shore Ring the bell softly there's crape on the door."

Break off Bad Habits.

Understand the reason, and all the reasons, why the habit is injurious. Study the subject until there is no lingering doubt in your mind.

Avoid the places, the persons and thoughts that lead to temptation. Keep busy; idleness is the strength of bad habits.

Do not give up the struggle when you have broken your resolution once, twice, a thousand times. That only shows how much need there is for you to strive.

When you have broken your resolution just think the matter over, and endeavor to understand why it was you failed, so that you may be on your guard against a re-occurrence of the same circumstances.

Do you think it any easy thing that you have undertaken. It is folly to expect to break off a habit in a day that may have been gathering strength in you for years.

Brains cannot be measured by the size of head, nor eloquence by the extent of the mouth.

Strive to impress your children that the only disgrace attached to honest work is the disgrace of doing it badly.

There is authority for the statement that a good name is better than riches, but those who have neither should strive for both.

Many persons who are ashamed to do manual labor themselves are not ashamed to cheat those who do it for them out of their wages.

A Bad Memory.

"How much is your bill?" quietly asked Barlum Smith, as he walked out.

"We make no charge for lodgings at this hotel," replied his honor.

Mr. Smith looked all around, took notice of the bars across the window and the police attendance, and asked:

"What hotel is this?" "That will do, Mr. Smith," remarked the Court; you are charged with drunkenness. The police found you on a public stairway, and it will take you four weeks to get the dust off your back."

"Then I am in a police station! Great Scots! but what a comedy of errors; I must have been drugged."

"Like as not, but I'll bet it cost you ten cents a glass. When did you reach Detroit?"

"When did I? Let's see. Is this August or September?" "That's too old, Mr. Smith. Where do you live?"

"Where do I live? Let's see. Why, I can't think of anything this morning."

"What is your business?" "Business! Let's see. Why, I travel."

"You are a very poor traveler, sir. You came to the station-house last night in a cart."

"Did I? Well, I am amazed! The last thing that I remember was asking a boy to show me a first-class hotel."

"Don't you remember of stopping on the way and calling for brandy?" "Did I? If I did I don't remember."

"Is your memory good or poor on the average?" "Very poor, sir. Things of yesterday skip away from me as if I had dreamed them."

Well, that's all right; but I think by this time to-morrow you'll remember that I fined you five dollars for this drunk."

"Five dollars?" "I said five. If that's too small to be remembered, I'll make it ten."

"Can I go now?" "Yes, if you don't forget it."

"And I was really drunk?" "You were."

"And carted down here?" "Just so."

"Well, well, I'll try and remember it until I meet some of the boys. Drunk—locked up—fined a V—good morning, sir."

In calculating the profit and loss in poultry husbandry, it is seldom that any account is taken of the value of the droppings of the poultry houses. In fact, as poultry is usually bred much of their manure is lost while the farmer will pay $20 a ton for the very same article that he is too careless to save at home. At least once a week let the chicken house be scraped out; put the scrapings in barrels with alternate layers of road dust, and sprinkle a little plaster over all. Keep these barrels by themselves, mix the contents with coal ashes in the spring, and use it on corn fields. It is equal to guano.

Absence of Mind in Detroit.

Yesterday forenoon a citizen who was flurried and angry entered a grocery store on Antoine street and called out to the owner:

"Why do you keep a dog around here to eat folks up?"

"Did my dog eat you up?" was the innocent query in reply.

"Not quite; but he tore my coat half off my back, and you've got to pay for it!"

"How much?" "Well, it will cost as much as two dollars to get it repaired. You'll either pay it or I'll have the dog shot."

"Oh, I'll pay dot," said the grocer, and he did, but the man was ladsly out of sight before he jumped a foot high and called out:

"Dunder and blitzen, but I yhas der greatest shackass in America! Why, I sells dot dog to my fader-in-law more as six weeks ago."—Detroit Free Press.

Mother Died of Salt Rheum.

J. W. Adams, Newark, Ohio, says: "Cuticura Remedies are the greatest medicines on earth. Had the worst case Salt Rheum in this county. My mother had it twenty years, and in fact died from it. I believe Cuticura would have saved my life. My arms, breast and head were covered for three years which nothing relieved or cured until I used the Cuticura Remedies."

How Pilgrim Weakened.

It used to be said of Pilgrim, who was a resident of Clinton county, Mich., for thirty years, that he never paid a debt in his life, and further, that no one ever found a way to make him. The nearest he ever came to such a climax was when a neighbor found him mired in a swamp in the woods two miles from any house. Pilgrim was over his knees and slowly going down when accidentally discovered, and the situation offered the neighbor just the chance he had long wanted. Taking a seat on a log near by, he said:

"Pilgrim, you owe me $16."

"It's outlawed," was the reply.

"I can't help that. It was a just debt, and you've got to pay it or I'll leave you to sink out of sight."

"I never pay outlawed debts," was the grim reply.

"Then down you go," said the creditor as he started away.

Of course he did not mean to leave old Pilgrim to die, but he thought he'd give him a scare. He therefore hid in the bushes where he could see him, and during the two hours he was there, the debtor went down until only head and shoulders were above the swamp. It lacked only an hour of sundown when the creditor came forward and said:

"Pilgrim, you are in a bad fix."

"Yes, rather bad."

"Unless you have help you'll be out of sight in two hours."

"Looks that way to me, too."

"Now, then, will you pay that debt?"

"It's outlawed."

"I can't help that, you owe me $16. Will you pay it if I'll help you out?"

Pilgrim glanced around at the darkening forest, and seemed to fully realize his situation, but after a moment's reflection he called out:

"I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll wait till I go down to my chin, and then if no one else happens along, or the boys don't come this way after the cows, I'll give you my note for $10, payable in a year. How's that?"

"I'll let you go down and be banged to you!" roared the creditor as he moved away.

"Hold on! hold on! called Pilgrim. "I forgot to say that the note must be drawn without interest, and you must agree not to sue on it."

He was actually down to his chin when the neighbor returned with help, but he was not in a debt-paying mood. On the contrary when he found out that his boots had been left in the mire behind him he growled out:

"I don't say I shall sue any of you for the value of them boots, but I won't agree not to bring in the claim if we ever make a boss trade."—Free Press.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

The Sun for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy. Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its great warmth is for the good, while it puns hot discords on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1882 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world coming in the dozen years past has been modeled after the Sun. Every important journal existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper. By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with the Sun—Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of The Sun's political success.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete the Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed. Who does not read the Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Goldenrod of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good size book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little.

If our idea of what a newspaper should be please send for the Sun.

Our terms are as follows: For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-seven columns, the price by mail, post paid is 55 cents a month or $6.50 a year; or including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 per year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of the Sun is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages fifty-six columns, is $1 a year postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT

KNOXVILLE.

A City of Entertaining Business Men—A People Full of Push and Deserving Success—The Wholesale Trade.

Last Thursday, Friday and Saturday was spent by a representative of the PATRIOT AND HERALD in the City of Knoxville. The time has now come when our Southern Cities can compete with their sister cities of the North and offer as good inducements to the country merchants. But a few years back Knoxville was almost unknown in the wholesale trade. To-day she stands shoulder to shoulder with the eastern markets, and bids fair to take the lead. We have never met with merchants and business men more courteous and obliging and who took more pains to show their wares. The buildings are an ornament to the town, many of them massive and elegant structures. The City of Knoxville offers to the merchants of Southwest Virginia special inducements—while she sells as cheap as any city in the east, the freights are almost one-third less. We were kindly shown through all the large wholesale establishments of the city and though we expected much, "the half had not been told." Fronting on Gay street were large and commodious buildings with a display of goods which seemed to us enough to supply the universe. Here a large notion house and then Hardware, Saddlery, Furniture, Drugs, White Goods, &c., &c. Our visit was made more pleasant by having stopped at the HATRIE HOUSE, the largest hotel in the town, situated in the business centre of the town. The hotel is nearly 300 feet long and fitted up in the most elegant style. The table loaded with the best market afforded. We received the kindest and most polite attention.

The first establishment that claimed our attention was that of COWAN McCLUNG & Co.

Dry Goods, Notions, Boots Shoe and Hats. We were shown through this house by Dr. Ithen, brother to our townsman Mr. J. B. Rhea. From cellar to roof the house was packed. Standing in the elevator we viewed each floor. There's is what might be termed a Mammoth Stock. To undertake to describe their stock would be folly. They have it all and if you don't believe us go and see for yourself.

W. W. WOODRUFF & Co.

This old and reliable house in the Hardware trade has a stock that will be found one of the largest in the South. They will deal on the square, and any article ordered from them will be found as they represent it. Young mechanics who have just finished their trade will do well to call on this house if they want to go into business for themselves. They keep a large line of Shoemakers, Saddlers, Blacksmiths, Wagon-Makers and Tanners tools and are also agents for Dupont Powder.

ANGEL & JENKINS,

The Sewing Machine Men of Knoxville, are Sole Agents for Southwest Virginia, for the New White and Remington Sewing Machine. They also have everything in the sporting line—Guns, Rifles and Fishing tackle. They keep needles, attachments, thread &c., for every make of machine, and having a machine shop connected with their house, are prepared to repair sewing machines on short notice.

OATES, WHITE & Co.

We were shown through this establishment by the Senior member of the firm. On the first floor the display of Saddles and Harness was complete, and embraced everything from a plow line to a set of silver mounted harness. The stock used by them is the best, and work turned out of a superior quality. They have a large trade in this section of our State. We were also shown through the shops which are supplied with all the latest labor saving machinery. They give employment to a number of hands. We hope our merchants will give them all their orders for they can save money by so doing. They also carry a full line of Saddlery and Hardware.

SANFORD, CHAMBERLAIN & ALBERS Wholesale and Manufacturing Druggists, Family Medicines have the largest Drug House in Knoxville, (fronting on three streets.) They also carry a full line of glass and fancy goods. They have in the last few years built up a trade in East Tenn., and Southwest Va., which is truly marvelous. We were shown all over the establishment and were struck with the vastness of their business. Everything was arrayed in most perfect order, and every man connected with the house seemed to be an expert in his particular line of duty.

BURR & TERRY

Manufacturers of Sash, Doors and Blinds have a large establishment and do their work in a most satisfactory manner. All those who contemplate building this summer can save money by writing to them for their prices before sending their orders elsewhere. They keep a large stock of seasoned lumber, and everything turned out by them is done in the latest style and by the best of workmen. Their work will not warp and shrink and by sending them correct measures you will get perfect fits. Give them a trial order. We cannot close this article without saying something about the Music Emporium of Steen & Marshall. This is the largest house of the kind between Baltimore and New Orleans.

They have in stock nearly all the time from 75 to 125 Musical Instruments. Each of these gentlemen are professors of music, and are therefore competent to give information and conduct the business. Everything in the music line they have, or can get you on short notice. Their house is the headquarters of the musical talent of Knoxville. If you want a Piano or an Organ write to them for their terms &c.

Knoxville is a city that possesses many advantages and is destined to be the best wholesale market in the South, and we bespeak for her the support of the Southwest Va., trade.

A Smile of Satisfaction.

This from the Cleveland (Ohio) Penny Press, carries its own suggestion: Recently meeting Mr. H. G. Keffler, treasurer of the Cleveland Herald, our representative inquired of that gentleman, after stating his mission, if he personally knew anything about the Great German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil. A smile played across Mr. Keffler's expressive face and his eyes twinkled merrily as he replied in the affirmative, I will not refuse to state my experience with it and you may use it as you think best. Four years ago I sprained one of my ankles, an accident which, as you are aware, entails much suffering and sometimes leaves the limb in a condition to remind one frequently of hurt. Unfortunately this result ensued. Whenever the weather became damp or my system absorbed the slightest cold my ankles pained me. This went on at intervals for over three years, and I could not obtain relief. Last winter I applied the St. Jacobs Oil and it completely cured. I have not since felt a return of the pain.

A New Dollar.

A bill has been reported to Congress providing for the coinage of a standard metric silver dollar to be composed of a ternary combination of metals, gold, silver and copper, silver being the chief element. It is upon the French metric decimal system. The new dollar will be smaller, denser, and of greater sonority or ring than the present standard dollar; that it will be tougher and more resistant to abrasion; also, that it will possess the advantage of conforming to the metric decimal system of weights and measures adopted by most of the civilized nations of the world for use in all commercial transactions. The value of the new dollar will be somewhat more than that of the present standard dollar, and the cost of coinage somewhat less.

Knoxville Chronicle.

We receive this paper on the same day it is published. Our mail facilities with the East are so bad that the news is stale before it reaches us. The Chronicle publishes all the press telegrams and a special correspondent at the Virginia capitol so that we get our latest home news in a paper published out of the State 13 hours earlier than we do in our home journals. If you want to keep up with the times subscribe for the most excellent journal. We will take pleasure in giving you any information in our power and you can see a copy by calling at our office. The Chronicle is a large 8 column paper well printed and well edited.

Stauton Vindicator: We have seen a private letter from Ex-Gov. Holliday, in which he states that he has finished his visit to Cuba and Mexico, and was just leaving New Orleans on the steamer "R. E. Lee" for St. Louis, from which point he will go via the Southern Pacific Railroad to San Francisco and thence by steamer to the Sandwich Islands. From there he would return home leisurely.

Almost Raised From the Dead.

Thomas Johnson writes us that recent exposure gave him a terrible cold; the cold a bad cough; and the cough gave him what his friends thought to be consumption. He was induced to try a bottle of Symphyx, keeping his bowels open with Dr. Hart's Blood and Liver Pills. He says in two weeks he was nearly as well as ever and that he considers himself as almost raised from the dead.

ANOTHER REASON—Everybody likes to trade with GEO. F. CRUSH & Co., because they take such pleasure in showing goods, and because they have such a nice stock on exhibition. The ladies are especially invited to call and examine for themselves, as it is no trouble to show goods, and less trouble to sell them after they have been seen.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a regular communication of Seven Mile Ford Lodge, No. 79, A. F. and A. Masons held in their Hall February 2nd, A. L., 5885 A. D. 1882. The undersigned having been appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions, expressive of the unfeigned sorrow of the brethren occasioned by the sad and untimely death of brother Jes. A. Mercer, who was Steward and Thier of this Lodge, and one of its most worthy and beloved members; presented the following preamble and resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, By the decree of an All-wise, though inscrutable Providence, our beloved brother Jas. A. Mercer, has been suddenly removed from the midst of an affectionate family and a large circle of devoted friends and brethren to that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns," and whereas a long acquaintance and intimate association with him, in the varied relations of friend, neighbor and brother, have most sensibly impressed us with a high appreciation of his moral worth as a man, with a fond recollection of his generous kindness as a neighbor, and with a kindling admiration for his loyal devotion to the tenets of our order, he having been a true and faithful brother among us; therefore Resolved, That it is with the most profound feelings of regret and sorrow that we record the sad and untimely death of brother Mercer, and in view of the solemn truth, that is the common heritage of all, we submitively bow to the unalterable decree of Him who doeth all things well; with the fondly cherished hope that he hath been transplanted from this transitory existence to a state of eternal and blissful duration to the Celestial Lodge above, where the Supreme Architect of the Universe in his glory presides.

2nd, That by the death of brother Mercer this Lodge has lost one of its brightest jewels. Masonry a steady and brilliant light, his family a kind and affectionate husband and parent, and society a most useful honorable member.

3rd, That we tender our condolence and heartfelt sympathy to the family of our deceased brother, in their sad and unexpected bereavement, that we will cherish his virtues and in testimony of our respect for his memory, that we will wear the usual badge of mourning for 30 days, that a copy of these resolutions be presented by the Secretary to the family of our deceased brother, and that a copy be furnished the PATRIOT AND HERALD, also the Conservative-Democrat for publication.

Have you seen those beautiful china sets, at Geo. F. CRUSH'S? If not, you ought to go at once and see them. They have just arrived, and are attracting universal admiration. The moss rose, and gilt sets are "just too lovely for description."

Why?—Why is it that everybody goes to Geo. F. CRUSH & Co.'s, to buy nice shoes? Because they have a very fine assortment. Because they are cheap, and because every pair is warranted to be solid, and not to slip.

A beautiful stock of Hamburgs and Laces have just been received by Messrs. GEO. F. CRUSH & Co. Call and see them.

Dr. Jubilee Smith, of Richland, Ga., says Camm's Emulsion, in my hands, did well and I recommend it.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Ladies and Honey Bees

Says a writer: There are thousands of widows and with children, and other females, who need additional and suitable employment to increase their comforts and elevate their position. To meet the necessities of such, the following statements of Mrs. E. S. Tupper, of Iowa, to the Department of Agriculture, are very suggestive: "Within the last four years many women have turned their attention to bee keeping as an occupation—pleasant, easily managed and remunerative. We are glad to know that in every instance which has come to our knowledge, success the most marked has attended the undertaking. From reports that have been made to us, we condense the following: One young lady who had been teaching for several years, and whose health had failed, undertook the care of her father's bees, twelve colonies in number, that never had been profitably managed. Under her care the first year they increased to thirty colonies, and the third year after taking them in charge she sold $1,200 worth of honey, and had in the fall fifty-four strong colonies in good hives. She says: The time I devoted to them I did not miss, and the pleasure afforded by the work was so great that I would enjoy it even if no profit were derived. A widow of scanty means invested $50 in ten poor colonies, and about as much more for ten good hives for the bees. She got her money back the first season, and $36 over. The second year she received $900 for honey sold, and had thirty strong colonies in the fall. The largest apiary in all the West is managed entirely by a woman, who rear for market Italian queens, at a large profit, besides producing honey in a wholesome manner. Miss Kate Grimm, of Jefferson, Wis., managed one of her father's apiaries of 180 colonies, which she soon doubled in number, and sold $2,035 worth of honey one year, and $1,604 worth the next. She is a school teacher, and says from her experience, a person can earn ten times as much by keeping bees as by teaching school."

Raising flowers and honey is so congenial to ladies that all girls educated for teachers should have an opportunity to learn while at school or elsewhere the art and mystery of man aging bees in the best hives, with propagating apartments, honey extractors and other appliances. This industry as enlightened and enlarged by science, may become invaluable for the benefit of the better half of creation. Our old fields can be made into profitable bee pastures by seeding them to white clover and Alsike clover. Tulip blossoms yield much honey of a superior quality. Let us give our daughters and their mothers a fair start to make an independent living, without flirting, begging or street yarn. All should learn to mingle the useful with the ornamental. It has been fashionable to do justice to the education of the female mind and hands and then perpetuate this injustice by paying them about half the salaries for teaching school that male teachers receive, and half men's wages for other employment. This double wrong should be righted. There is no other soil in the world half so promising and profitable to cultivate as the female heart and intellect. Why then leave this garden spot half a desert, and too often a thicket of brambles and thorns in the flesh? Heaven is slow to forgive an outrage done to the mothers of mankind. A fair industrial education is women's rights. It is a simply to live a virtuous life, and raise children of the same virtuous and industrious character. If the Republic needs such men as George Washington was, it can have them in every State by raising such mothers as the great Washington had.

Don't neglect the bee hive. The cold driving easterly rain-storms of this season rarely fail to afflict nearly everybody with Colds. Use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup—the surest and safest Cough remedy made. Price 25 cents.

The truest physiological way of treating burns and scalds is to at once exclude the air, with cotton batting, flour, scraped potato, or anything that is handiest.

It is useless to deny that the brightest and fairest fall easy victims to consumption, and equally fruitless to ignore the fact that decline has its origin in many cases in neglected catarrh. Sandford's Radical Cure is a pure, sweet, balsamic specific.

Death to rats, mice, roaches and ants; Parson's Exterminator. Burns granaries and households cleared in a single night. No fear of bad smells. Best and cheapest vermin killer in the world. Sold everywhere.

THE BEST PREPARATION FOR THE HAIR NOW KNOWN!
For everything for which a hair tonic is required it has no equal. The highest testimonials of its merits have been given.
For sale by
R. W. POWERS & CO.
and FURCELL, LADD & CO.,
Wholesale Agents, Richmond, Va.
(From Rev. Chas. H. Read, D. D., Pastor Grace street Presbyterian Church.)
RICHMOND, VA., 1881.
For several years I have used no other Hair Dressing than the Xanthine, which had been warmly recommended to me by a friend who had tested its value. It has in my experience, accomplished all that is claimed for it as a wholesome preserver and restorer of the natural color of the hair and a thorough preventive of dandruff.
