The Doctor's Remedy.

BY MAGGIE BROWNE.

Arthur Latour, at the age of four and twenty, was about as low-spirited and discontented as man could be, and yet his fair weather friends accounted him the most fortunate dog in existence.
He had only himself in the wide world to care for, and his store of material wealth was greater than he could ever fairly spend.
He had been an only child, and his parents had died when he was a boy at school leaving him a fortune of hundreds of thousands.
The guardian appointed to care for the heir and for the property had been faithful, and at the age of one and twenty, the youth fresh from college, stepped into the life of manhood, and into full possession of more than half a million.
Those who had known with what honor Arthur graduated, predicted for him a useful and manly life.
But he had sadly disappointed them.
He had not been seriously dissipated, nor had he been criminally reckless in any direction.
He had sought pleasure in the glare and glitter of fashionable society.
He had given himself to the work of getting the joy from the trifling hours of trivial amusements.
He had thrown the whole of himself into the whirlpool of aimless feasting and excitement.
And in the end he had become heart-sick and melancholy, with no new joy at hand, and with an utter disrelish for the old ones.
Only three years of this bewildering enervating life, and we find Arthur Latour completely miserable and dejected.
Not physically prostrate, but mentally and morally broken.
He sat in his sumptuously-furnished apartment of a private hotel, where he had taken up his quarters—sat in dressing-robe and slippers, thrown back in a great lolling chair, with his head resting upon his hands.
He had a handsome face, and the broad, full brow, with its crown of clustering nut-brown curls, was indicative of more than common intellect.
His frame was not robust, but it was manly, and of faultless proportions.
As he sat thus, a rap sounded up on his door, and he bade the applicant enter.
"Well, well, my boy, how do you find yourself to-day?"
It was a cheerful voice, mellow and hearty and a new light and warmth seemed to pervade the room as its owner entered.
He was a portly, pleasant-faced man, with the silvery of three-score years upon his head, and the stamp of a broad experience in look and bearing.
It was Dr. Samuel Tapley.
He had been the family physician in other years.
He had been Arthur's guardian during his minority, and he had ministered to the needs of the youth since when called upon.
"My dear doctor," said Arthur, raising himself to an upright posture with an effort, "I'm glad you've come. I am growing worse."
"What is the matter now, my boy?"
"The same as before, only more of it. You told me two days ago that you would try to find a tonic that would give me time to my depleted system. Have you found it?"
Dr. Tapley sat down and regarded his patient awhile in silence.
While he spoke, there was seriousness in his look.
But the voice was very kindly and cheerful.
"My dear boy, I have been on the lookout since I saw you last, and I think I have found an application which will be of benefit to you."

"Have you brought it with you?"
"No; you must go with me and receive it at my quarters."
"Goodness, my dear doctor! You wouldn't take me to a hospital?"
"By my soul, no. I would take you to a friend. Will you trust yourself in my hands?"
"Is it far away?"
"No, it is as far as I wish it was."
"You are a riddle, doctor."
"There is a riddle in your life, my boy, which I propose to solve, if I can. Come, will you go with me?"
"Do you really think I shall gain any help?"
"If I did not, I would not ask you to go," replied the doctor.
"I want you to walk, Arthur. The air is pure and bracing, and the exercise will do you good. Come; if you wish me to help you, you must place yourself for the present wholly in my direction. Will you go with me?"
This last was spoken with a firmness and decision which indicated pretty plainly to one who knew him that Dr. Tapley desired no more argument.
"Yes, yes," said Arthur, slowly arising from his chair. "I will go with you. It can but kill me, and I might as well die as live if I must live at this poor suffering rate."
It was a bright, cold October day, and Arthur's first emotion, upon emerging into the open air on foot, was of fear and trembling.
But the cheerful conversation of the doctor brought him up out of the shuddering slough, and after a time the youth's blood began to circulate more freely, and he breathed more easily.
"Where in the world are you going, doctor?"
"To find a friend, Arthur. Be not alarmed. Surely you would feel safe with me."
"But this place—oh, it is awful! Where are we?"
"This is what is called The Dells. Were you never here before?"
"Never."
"Then you have missed a great study. Here, step careful!"
"But, doctor, you are not going in here?"
"Yes; don't be alarmed. Follow me. I promise you that all shall be well."
It was through a narrow, dark, dirty alley; in by a broken doorway, then up dangerous stairs, then through a gloomy, reeking passage, and finally they had entered a square chamber, with blackened walls and ceiling in which was one bed upon a bed frame, another bed upon the floor, and a small fire in the narrow fireplace.
There were two or three stools, and two old boxes, which might serve as seats.
The light struggled through a window, half the panes of which were of paper, and revealed upon the higher bed man, wasted almost unto death with consumption.
By the side of the bed a woman was sitting, and upon one of the boxes two children, a boy and girl.
For a time Arthur Latour was like one paralyzed.
It was to him as a pest-house, and he felt as one might feel who had suddenly trodden upon a deadly serpent.
"Well, well," broke in the doctor's cheery voice, "how is it to-day?"
"Ah, good sir, dear, kind friend, the end is nigh."
It was the woman who answered.
"A better, and than I can ever know in life," whispered the man on the bed.
The whisper was hoarse and hollow, and the effect produced a spasmodic cough.
The doctor approached the bed, and the woman made way for him.
"You are not gaining strength, are you, Eben?"
"No, doctor. I can't deceive myself any more. I know I am dying. But who came with you? Don't I see another?"
Meantime, the woman had met the doctor's companion, and at this moment had recognized him.
"Arthur Latour?" she exclaimed, in glad surprise. "God bless you, sir, for coming to us in such an hour."
Arthur beheld a woman, yet young and comely, though pale, hollow-eyed, and poorly clad.

And when she had spoken, he recognized her.
He remembered in his college days a young man who had built boats for the students, and who had piloted them in their voyages.
That man was Eben Burroughs.
And he remembered Eben's wife, Sarah, then fair-faced and buoyant, who had, in those other days, entertained him often at her frugal board, when a day's sport had kept him on the river.
And he remembered how kind the boatman and his wife had always been to him, and how many times they had done their best to please him.
And another thing Arthur Latour remembered.
He remembered a golden-haired, violet-eyed, sunny-faced maiden, a relative of Sarah's, whom he had met at the boatman's cottage and who had shone upon his path like a star that gleams with heavenly influence.
And this woman was Sarah Burroughs, and the man upon the bed was her husband.
The children he remembered, one as a pattering archer and the other as an infant in its mother's arms.
"Arthur Latour!" echoed the sick man, making an effort to raise himself upon his elbow.
"In mercy's name," cried Arthur, when he could find speech, "what's all this? Mrs. Burroughs—Eben! What does it all mean?"
"My friends," said Dr. Tapley, "Arthur did not know whom he was to meet when I brought him here. This is the first knowledge he has ever had of your misfortune."
"In heaven's name," pleaded Arthur, grasping the woman by the hand, all his manliness of heart and soul coming to the surface, and showing itself in word and look, "how is this come to pass? Why do I find you thus?"
He sat down upon one of the stools, and Sarah Burroughs told him the whole story.
Her husband had received an offer which had induced him to come to the city.
In time the party for whom he worked failed, and at about the same time his own health broke down.
Since then they had struggled on. Eben had sunk gradually and surely beneath the fell disease, and they had been reduced by degrees into their present state.
"And only yesterday," said Dr. Tapley, "I found them. I thought, Arthur, you would blame me if I did not give you a share in this work."
There was a strange meaning in the expression of his last sentence, and only Arthur understood it fully and accepted it gratefully.
His heart was in healthy tune now, and its throbbings were very strong and true.
He knew exactly why the doctor had brought him, and he accepted the situation.
"Take heart," he said, holding again the woman's hand. "I will do for you all that can be done."
He spoke cheering words to Eben, and then went away, promising to come again on the morrow.
On the morrow Arthur Latour visited the place without the doctor, and on this occasion he ventured to speak of Ellen Wilton, the sunny-faced maiden, whom he had met at their cottage in the happier days.
"My sweet cousin—bless her!" returned Mrs. Burroughs. "She does not know of this. I have not dared to write. I would not bring her here, and I would not beg of her father."
Arthur provided every comfort possible.
But there could be no earthly hope for Eben Burroughs.
In a few short days he sank into the sleep that knows no earthly waking, and when the mortal remains had been borne to rest in the old village churchyard by the river, Arthur removed the widow and her two children to a comfortable house in a respectable portion of the metropolis.
Sarah Burroughs wrote to her cousin Ellen, and asked her to come and see her.
And Ellen came, a bright, buoyant, happy girl, large hearted and lovely.
And her presence was like sunshine in the shadowed home. Arthur met her there.
When she knew what he had done for her kindred, she blessed him in her heart, and blessed him in words.

Only a month had passed from the day on which Dr. Tapley found Arthur Latour dying of inanition, and yet what a change had been wrought!
Under the influence of this blessed labor for the suffering ones, his heart had regained its pristine strength and vigor, and the world looked once more bright and promising.
He needed but one thing more to ensure his happiness for the coming time.
And one evening he stated his need to Ellen Wilton.
"It's only for you to say," he concluded, "whether my heart cure shall be complete, and my life be joyous from this time forth."
She rested her head upon his shoulder, and spoke to him the sweet word of promise.

Who has most? He who desires least.
Whoever abolishes justice cares for no religion.
A company attitude is rarely any body's best.
Every one who has a fair turn to be as great as he pleases.
Work with all the speed and ease you can, without breaking your head.
Failure in any good cause is honorable while success in any bad cause is merely infamous.
The thing most desired is not how to avoid the existence of parties, but to keep them within proper bounds.
The difference between pride and vanity is that one that capital and the other has not. Vanity was never known to pay a cash dividend.
Human calculation cannot limit the influence of one atom of wholesome knowledge, patiently acquired, modestly possessed and faithfully used.
To despise theory is to have the excessively vain pretention to do without knowing what one does, and to speak without knowing what one says.
A very large proportion of the proceeds from the simple feeling of discouragement. Besides the misery which it inflicts, there is the palsy effect it exerts on all human effort. As long as hope reigns in the heart, no exertion seems too great; it is when hope sinks away and despondency takes its place that labor of head or hand languishes.
The Pittsburg Trunk Mystery.
PITTSBURG, May 2.—The remains of the man found in a trunk in the Union depot yesterday have been identified by an Italian woman as those of her brother, Pietro Caruso. They were also identified by one of Caruso's former associates. Caruso was a pea-nut vendor of Chicago. Investigation shows the probability that Caruso died from the suffocation, but goes no further than this. The Chicago people can throw no light on the subject.

"Typical Western Fertility."
The following story of an engineer on a Western railway shows how fast the country is growing. We do not hold ourselves responsible for the truth of the story, but we do hesitate to say that it is not much of a story, compared with that told by the Western man who makes an effort:
"One day I was driving my engine over the prairie at the rate of forty miles an hour, without a house in sight, and supposing the nearest town to be thirty mile distant. But as I glanced ahead I was astonished to see that I was approaching a large city. I rubbed my eyes thinking it was a mirage.
"Jim," says I to the fireman, "what's this place?"
"Blamed if I know!" says Jim, starting out of the cab. "I declare, if there ain't a new town growed up here since we went over the line yesterday!"
"I believe you are right, Jim. Ring the bell or we shall run over somebody!"
"So I slowed up and we pulled into a large depot where more'n five hundred people were waiting to see the first train come into the place. We learned the name of the town, put it down on the schedule, and we went on.
"Jim, says I, as we pulled out, keep your eyes open for new towns. First thing you know we'll be runnin' by some strange place."
"That's so!" says Jim. "An hadn't we better get one of the brakemen to watch out on the rear platform for towns that spring up after the engine gets by?"—Ex.
Don't Use Big Words.
In promulgating your esoteric cogitations, or articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amiable, philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity.—Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensiveness, coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and asinine affections. Let your extemporaneous descantings and unprepared expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or theatrical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, pompous prolixity, psittacous vacuity, ventriloquist verbosity, and vainiloquent rapidity. Shun double entendres, purulent jocosity, and pestiferous profanity, obscure or apparent. In other words, talk plainly, briefly, naturally, sensibly, truthfully, purely. Keep from 'slang'; don't put on airs; say what you mean; mean what you say. And don't use big words!
Poison Oak.
Spartanburg, S. C., March 13, 1884.—Your most valuable medicine (Swift's Specific) has done me so much good that I feel like saying this for the benefit of those who suffer like I did. I was poisoned by poison oak, and saw not a well day for six years, until I used Swift's Specific. In the six years I used almost every kind of medicine, but none had the desired effect. After using six bottles of Swift's Specific I am restored to perfect health—with no sign of that awful poison left.
DAVID NESBITT.
I had for thirty-eight years suffered every spring and summer with poison oak, which I contracted in bathing when a boy. I tried everything for it, including many physicians, but without any benefit. I took six bottles of Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) four years ago, and it cured me sound and well. Three summers have passed, and I have had no return of it. Joseph BEASLEY, Columbus, Ga.
Blood Taint.
I was suffering from Blood Poison and Mercurial Rheumatism, and had spent $500 for treatment with no benefit, and it seemed that I was doomed to die. Caught at Swift's Specific as a drowning man would catch a straw, and it saved me from a horrible death and cured me sound and well. It is the greatest medicine in the world.

Horror of Mineral Poisoning.
Thousands of persons are poisoned in America by the continued use of Mercury, Iodide of Potassium and other minerals, for various diseases. The Mercury works in way into the tissues, producing rheumatism and decay of the bones. The Iodide of Potassium eats away the coating of the stomach, and dries up the gastric juices which digest the food and the patient plunges along in agony or is glad to die, to get away from misery. Swift's Specific is a complete antidote to all this poison. It eliminates Mercury from the system, removes the evil effects of Iodide of Potassium and brings back health and happiness.

VICTORY CAN BE OURS.

With proper management and the unification of our forces there is no doubt but that the Republican party of Virginia can win a telling victory at the approaching fall election. The Democratic party, both as a State and National organization, has done nothing to win the confidence and respect of well-thinking people since it came into power in the State and Nation. When it gained control of Virginia in 1833 it was upon the strength of promises that have not been discharged. Whether the failure of performance grew out of inability or an unwilling spirit the people are not disposed to enquire. They know that the Bourbon-Democracy pledged its faith that the "debt was settled" and that it had the capacity to manage the entire matter so far as a settlement with the creditors was concerned by the provisions of the Biddleberger bill. Instead of demonstrating to the people that the "debt was settled" the Bourbon Legislature proceeded to the enactment of certain laws that placed the coupons again in the highest courts of the land, resulting in an adverse decision to the State. The recent decisions of the Supreme court of the United States have clearly shown that the Bourbon party is either incompetent or too corrupt to deal with a question of such vital importance to the Commonwealth. All the legislation of the Bourbons, which they pretended was to strengthen the Riddleberger bill, has been declared unconstitutional. At the first announcement of the final result of the contest in the courts Bourbonism, artful and false to the last, sought to conceal its rottenness and insincere dealing with the people by trying to create the impression that the Readjuster legislation had sustained the same treatment at the hands of the Supreme court. But a later decision knocked this prop or defence from under Bourbonism; and now they are compelled to admit that the only salvation of the State is the Readjuster legislation, which stands the constitutional test.

Not only have the Bourbons put the debt question again before the people in an unsettled shape, but they have also produced, directly or indirectly, a condition of affairs that has brought the free schools again to the verge of ruin. This calamitous condition of free education in Virginia might have been averted had the Democratic Congress given us the benefit of the Blair Educational Bill, which measure Virginia Bourbonism pledged the people would certainly be passed by the Democratic House of Representatives last winter.

Moreover, Bourbonism, after denouncing what it called the extreme measures of the Readjuster party, proved itself, as represented by the last Legislature, the most extreme, partisan, revolutionary political organization that this country has ever known. Law, constitutional and statutory, was trampled under foot; and the representative rights of the people violated with a brazen impudence that would have almost justified revolution and retaliation on the part of the people. Having gained an ascendancy by fraud and deceit it resolved to hold its power by continued fraud and violence, if necessary.

This is a part of the record of the Virginia Democracy. Is it not enough?

The National Democracy has done nothing to win the confidence and affection of the people. Its representatives in Congress failed to put the party on record as the friend of education by refusing to pass the Blair bill. It refused to take a decided stand upon the tariff question which is one of such vital import. It has a record so unsatisfactory on the financial management of the country that business men have become alarmed since it came into power. As a result, we see business stagnated, labor idle, agriculture depressed, manufacturing on the decrease and a gloom hanging over the Nation never equaled in its past history.

With such a record, State and National, to weigh it down Democracy can be routed by the Republicans in Virginia this fall, if wisdom prevails in the councils of our party; and we go before the people upon a broad, liberal, conservative platform—aggressive on principle, conservative in action and conciliatory in everything else.

GEN. GRANT still continues to grow stronger.

THE count of the money in the United States Treasury has been completed, and there is a shortage of two cents. Two coppers are missing from a $5 package. The "calculators" have taken good care of the government's cash. Will the "honest" Democrats do as well? The future will answer.

W. L. ROYAL, counsel for the foreign bondholders, was arrested by the State authorities for dealing in coupons without license. He applied to the United States Court at Norfolk for release under habeas corpus, but his application was dismissed.

ASK the former blatant "debtpayer" if he is opposed to repudiation, and see how he has changed his views on the question of honor and honesty.

THE trial of T. J. Cluvertus for killing Lillian Madison is now in progress in the Hustings court of the city of Richmond.

EX-GOVERNOR GILBERT C. WALKER, of Virginia, died in New York on the 11th inst. He was fifty-two years old.

MR. CLEVELAND goes very slow in making his appointments it is said, but he makes a great many blunders.

THE Republican party in Virginia will present a solid front to the Democracy next November. Have no fears!

REMEMBER the Democratic House of Representatives refused to pass the Blair Educational Bill.

Complaints of the Mormons.

SALT LAKE, UTAH, May 8.—Milton Musser, convicted of unlawful cohabitation, will be sentenced today. He is defiant. Last night his neighbors gave him a reception and supper. Resolutions were passed reciting that, "Whereas our esteemed brother, A. M. Musser, by loyalty to the commands of our Heavenly Father, and by his provident, paternal care of his family, has brought himself under the ban of an unconstitutional act of Congress called the 'Edmonds' law,' by a system of espionage instituted by corrupt Federal officials in which apostate traitors, guttersnipes and the like are employed, and has through the force of arbitrary and vindictive rulings without evidence to sustain the charges preferred against him, has been found guilty; resolved, that we, a few of his brethren and sisters, having noted his unflinching integrity under the dire evils and in the face of the most cruel injustice, feel bound to commend in the highest terms his conduct." Musser said his religion was worth every sacrifice he could possibly make.

The Talk of London.

LONDON, May 8.—The conviction is growing that the proposed arbitration of the Anglo-Russian Afghan difficulty to drop quietly. The terms are such as to preclude any definite result. The whole thing, it is now believed, was proposed simply as a diplomatic arrangement to simplify matters. Many continental papers say this arrangement is generously allowed by Russia to cover England's retreat. As telegraphed last night Russia certainly will not promise to respect Herat.

AN EPIGRAMMATIC SUMMARY OF THE SITUATION.

A high foreign authority gives this analysis of the situation to the correspondent of the Standard at St. Petersburg: "Russia gets almost all she wanted and much more than she expected. She gets a prestige such as no power had in Asia since Timur, the Tartar. What England gets besides the increased income tax it is difficult to see." To complete the picture it must be added that England secures the peace of Europe, and the postponement of war, is this is inevitable, until there is a Government here wise enough to see that Russia must be fought from India, and not from Afghanistan.

PEACE NOT AN ABSOLUTE CERTAINTY.

But it must not be believed yet that peace is absolutely certain. Another difficulty has arisen over the Government's position respecting the Sudan. In spite of the Daily News' confident and inspired denial this morning, there is little doubt that General Wolsey and the Government are at loggerheads.

A Hung Jury.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 9.—The Crittenden trial at Taylorsville, Ky., resulted in a hung jury, ten being for acquittal and two for imprisonment. Tom Crittenden, grandson of the celebrated John J. Crittenden, is charged with murdering Ross Mosby, a colored man at Anchorage two years ago.

It is stated that Mr. R. W. Hunter, of Virginia, formerly editor of the Winchester Times, is to be appointed chief clerk of the Interior Department. Mr. Hunter has been a member of the Virginia Legislature.

What the Bridal Package in the Treasury Vaults Contained.

One of "the sights" of Washington is the vault of the Treasury Department where among other things the $50,000,000 reserve is kept. Besides this there are several cart-loads of gold, silver and greenbacks. People who have been admitted to the vault have therefore seen more money or its equivalent at one glance than it is possible for them to see at any other in the country, excepting the New York Sub-Treasury. It has long been the custom at the vaults to hand to each bride who entered it a package containing $5,000,000. They were allowed to hold it for a second. It was then carefully taken from them and put away. It has also been generally understood among the knowing ones that this five million dollar package, which has been the bridal portion temporarily of so many brides, did not contain much money; but was never ascertained exactly what was in the package until a few days ago, when the count of the treasure in the vault was commenced. It was found that this five million package, which has been so fondly handled and over which so many endearing words have been said, was simply a huge joke, containing three or four heavy old Government documents, such as would sell in a junk shop for two cents per pound. The package weighed fifteen pounds, and as old paper its value would be thirty cents. The package was carefully tied up again and it will continue to be used to make brides happy. It will suit them just as well as if it contained real money.—Washington correspondent N.Y. Herald.

Eczema!

Eczema is one of the ugliest and most troublesome of all blood diseases. It proceeds from humors in the blood which are sometimes very difficult to eradicate. For five weary years Mr. J. D. Rodefer, of Greendale, Va., suffered terribly from this disease. He writes: "Finding no relief in the many medicines till I used Brown's Iron Bitters, I purchased three bottles; from these, which I have obtained almost entire relief. I recommend it to every one in my neighborhood for any disorder of the blood and as a general tonic."

To the Republican Voters of Smyth County.

The Republican voters of Smyth county will assemble at their several voting places on Saturday, the 30th day of May, 1885, and select delegates to a county Convention to meet at Marion on the 15th day of June (court day) for the purpose of choosing delegates to a State Convention to be held at Richmond on the 15th day of July, 1885. Each precinct may appoint as many delegates as it chooses. I suggest that these precinct meetings appoint three or four delegates, and then authorize any and all Republicans who vote at the precinct to act as delegates if they are present at the county Convention.

A Remarkable Woman.

About fifty years ago there came to this country from Germany one of the most remarkable women of the nineteenth century. This woman had a fine education and great wealth. She might have lived a life of ease and luxury, but she chose rather to spend her time and wealth in doing good to her race and especially devoting herself to the relief of children. Thousands of children owe their life to her thoughtful care and skill, and it is said that many will live to call her blessed for having preserved to posterity the result of her skill and experience. This good woman's name was Winslow, and the valuable preparations called Mrs. Winslow's Vermifuge and Mrs. Winslow's Worm Candy will perpetuate her name wherever the English is spoken or children afflicted with their terrible enemy worms for which these remedies have never failed to give almost instant relief.

I will sell strictly for cash or good produce, which will enable me to do better by those who wish to buy right. I am at the former stand of Crush & Co., and have Mr. Will Francis with me. He will be glad to see and wait on his friends. S. C. PAINTER.

The necessary balance of stock for the new Agricultural Society was subscribed on Monday by citizens of the town and county.

MANY VOTERS.

Budd's Very Smart Boy.

In the flush stock times, when W. C. Budd was the idol of the Stock Board and many who are now satisfied with beer and sandwiches could not endure anything but champagne, he had a boy in his office who made a little turn in speculation and he determined to go on a little tour of the State. At last he reached Los Angeles and there he met a couple of card speculators, who took the chances, with more or less certainty, at poker. Two days after this meeting Budd received a telegram: 'W. C. Budd, San Francisco: Please send me $200 to pay my debts and expenses back.'
