WM. C. PENDLETON
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Thursday - JUNE 3, 1886.

Entered at the Postoffice at Marion as Second Class Matter.

TWO STRANGE MEETINGS.

They met first in the oddest way. She was standing at the approach of the suspension bridge in a bitter, blinding snow storm.

Her umbrella was inside out, her wrap had broken from its fastings and was flying in the wind; the icy breezes and fine particles of snow were whistling up her sleeves, while her bonnet and hair were in a white, feathery tangle, becoming momentarily more pronounced as the fierce blizzard swept across it from the river.

She was trying hard to keep herself together, looking despairingly around the while for some means of getting across the terrible bridge of safety.

What could he do? He was not the man to look unmoved upon such a picture of distress, especially such a pretty picture. For she was pretty.

A petite, compact figure, with unmistakable evidences of refinement in every curve and outline; bright, dancing eyes, all the brighter in contrast with the glowing red cheeks; a small, firm mouth, and a chin absolutely trembling in its soft nest of feather trimming.

He took in all these details at a glance, saw that she was in real trouble, stopped, and said:

"You had better wait for a street car. You cannot walk across the bridge this morning. There is a blast coming up the river that cuts like a million knives."

"I cannot help it. I have to be at the depot at nine o'clock, and there are no street cars in sight," was the breathless reply, as she struggled with her unruly umbrella.

He took the umbrella from her, and as he forced it into the proper shape, said:

"Then you had better let me pilot you across."

She turned her eyes full on him and looked searchingly into his face.

She saw a tall, handsome, brown bearded fellow, the bronzed cheeks tinted with a rosy hue that indicated the lover of out-door life.

She saw that the bronzed face had a kindly, honest expression, and as a proof that her inspection had resulted satisfactorily, she put her dainty gloved little hand on his arm and said, quietly:

"Thank you!"

So he held the umbrella to windward, and with the compact little figure tucked away under his arm, and the wind howling and groaning his disappointment as it tried to get under and around the umbrella at the dainty bonnet and hair still in a tangle, he pushed boldly across the bridge, with his heart thumping a sympathetic accompaniment to the pattering feet of his companion.

Then as he handed her the umbrella and raised his hat, she said:

"Thank you very much for your kindness. I should never have crossed the bridge by myself, I am afraid."

When the young lady got home that evening, and told the assembled family how she had crossed the bridge in company with a strange gentleman, there was a general uplifting of eyebrows and shrugging of shoulders, though no one was very much surprised.

Kate Selby had all the independent spirit of her age, sex and nationality, and rather enjoyed defying the proprieties when it could be done with moderate safety.

Perhaps it was this independent spirit that made her adopt an unusual plan for getting into the house of Mrs. Douglas on the night of the fancy dress party, a few evenings later.

This party had been the talk of society for weeks. It was expected to be something unusual in its gathering of well-known people, not only in society per se, but in profession of medicine, law, literature, music and art.

The costumes were to embrace every known covering for the human form, and the whole affair was to be an event to be remembered.

The Douglas and Selby residences were each surrounded by a large lawn, divided only by an imaginary boundary line.

Miss Selby had chosen for the party a simple country girl's costume, and very pretty she looked as she stood in the parlor showing herself to her father, whose tiresome, wounded foot, a reminder of Gettysburg, would not allow him to go out tonight.

A light calico, with a white apron and pink ribbons and bows, and a small basket in her hand, made Kate Selby as sweet a picture, a la Watteau, as ever met the gaze of a connoisseur.

Five minutes later, Kate Selby was standing in a small grove at the side of the Douglas mansion, watching the dancers flitter past the long windows reaching to the ground.

She could see nearly all over the room from where she stood.

All were masked, and as they moved in rhythmical cadence to the music of the orchestra, Kate felt that creepy sensation which the sight of twosome people with hidden faces, but piercing eyes, so often produces.

She turned quickly and looked into the face of a red bearded, dirty-faced man, with a black eye and a livid scar across his cheek, which did not improve his naturally repulsive appearance.

The man was intoxicated. Kate saw that at the first glance.

She stepped to one side, with an indignant flash from her gray eyes at the fellow's insolence in looking at her at all, and was about to run toward the side door, when he placed himself directly in her path.

"No! so fast!—hic—my dear. I want to dance with you!"

Heavens! there was another one! A bundle of rags, whose shining black face and close wool showed its Ethiopian descent, made its appearance from behind a large tree and grinned silent approval at the other's remark.

Kate could still see through the trees the dancers passing the long windows.

She opened her mouth to scream, but before she could utter a sound the red-bearded man put his hand significantly behind him as he said: "Scream an' I'll shoot yer."

This was awful. The red bearded man grasped her hand and pulled her toward him.

Then—she never could tell how it happened—the red-bearded man fell flat on his back.

At the same moment the whole scene seemed to be pervaded with a mountainous expanse of brown wool, rope girdle, and tight-clung white fist.

"Pax vobiscum!" said a voice she thought she had heard before, as the brown wool, rope girdle, and white fist resolved themselves into a Capuchin friar, standing threateningly over red bearded man and uttering the pious benediction with a heartiness that must have been very soothing to the drunken ruffian at his feet.

The friar's large, pointed hood had fallen back, revealing a bronzed face, with a brown beard, and two blue eyes that blazed in the light which fell full upon him from the long windows of the house.

They recognized each other at the same instant.

"You seem to be my protecting angel," she said.

The Little Cottage Maiden.

What was her name? I do not know. But she was a real little girl, eight years old, with bright eyes and gentle ways.

She lived in a cottage with her mother only a few steps from the church. She liked to knit and sew and sing.

One day when this little girl sat by the fence a gentleman stopped to talk with her.

"How many brothers and sisters have you?" he asked.

Two of her brothers were far away on the sea; two lived in a town near by; while a brother and sister were buried in the churchyard. How many will she say there are? Hark! this is what she said:

"Oh, master, we are seven."
"How can that be?" thought the gentleman. He counted. "Two are in heaven," he said. He was sure that there were only five left in this world. But the little girl shook her head, and said over and over again, "We are seven."

She told him how she would take her knitting and sit by the little graves, in the churchyard, and sing—sweet hymns, perhaps.

Though her brother and sister were in heaven, she counted them with her other brothers and sisters. We may do this, for we do not really lose our friends when they die and go to Jesus. By the by we shall see them in a beautiful new home in heaven.

The gentleman went home and wrote some pretty verses about the little girl and called the story "We are Seven." Ask mother to read the verses to you.

We Pause to Hesitate.

When it becomes necessary to call a larger man a liar.

When the assessor asks if there are any dogs concealed under the house.

When an undertaker asks us to patronize him as liberally as possible.

When a bore enters our office, puts his feet on the table and expects us to spare his life.

When the butcher asks us if we won't just settle that little matter and be done with it.

When we are expected to eat the same old hash three times a day and lay aside the nails and things we find in it.

When our beloved wife asks us to get up and light the fire about three hours before daylight on a cold morning.

When the dentist attempts to beguile us into his parlors where the painless system is in vogue. It is universally conceded that nothing hurts so much as painless dentistry.

"What a queer name for a bonnet," exclaimed Mrs. Snuggs, as she was reading the fashion notes in last night's paper.

"What is it?" asked her husband.

"The 'Giraffe.' It has just been introduced in Paris.

"I expect the altitude of the price makes the name very appropriate," explained Snuggs.

A foot rule—Don't wear tight shoes.

Another washout—On the clothes line.

Desirable quarters—Twenty-five cent pieces.

The only man who has the president's ear—Mr. Cleveland.

The century plant—Burial of Washington's body servant.

It is not considered necessary in society to return a bill collector's calls.

The Boston girl never says "it is raining pitchforks." She says "it is raining agricultural implements."

While Judge Walton was at work in his chamber at Portland one day a rich and very dignified lawyer, who may be called Lightweight, came in. The judge said:

Weather Indications.

Rain follows two or three consecutive hoar frosts.

A shower of hail in the daytime is usually followed by frost at night.

A tuted halo around the sun at setting occurs in long continued rainy weather.

If, on a fine day, the dust suddenly rise in a revolving spiral column, rain is near.

Rainbows are unreliable, except they occur in the morning, when rain may be expected.

A dazzling metallic lustre on foliage, during a cloudless day in summer, precedes a change.

Sun-dogs and fragments of prismatic colors during the day show continued unsettled weather.

No dew in the morning is mostly followed by rain, and a heavy dew in the evening by a fine day.

A halo around the moon, especially if some distance from it, is a sure indication of downfall at hand.

If after rain drops of water still hang on the branches and twigs and to window frames the rain will return, but if they fall and the wood-work dries fine weather is at hand.

Stones turn damp before wet; at the same time it must be observed that the fact of their doing so does not invariably indicate rain, for they will do so occasionally before heat.

If the sky be a dull gray, and the sun rises clear, gradually dispersing the vapors, it will be fine. If he retires behind the clouds, and there are reddish streaks about, it will rain.

Often a beautiful sunset will be followed by a bad day. After a rainy day, suddenly at sunset in the far West will appear a magnificent streak of crimson (not copper color)—this generally foretells a fine day.

Mists at evening over low-lying ground or near a river precede fine and warm days. If a mist in the morning clears off as the sun gets higher, it will be fine, but if it settles down again after lifting a little, rain is at hand.

The man who is out of doors at sunrise can form a pretty accurate opinion of what the day is to be. If just before sunrise the sky, especially in the West, is suffused with red, rain generally follows in the course of the day. In winter, after snow.

Huge piled-up masses of white cloud in a blue sky, during winter, indicate snow or hail. If small, dark clouds float below the upper ones, moving faster than they, rain will follow, as it will if, in the morning, low hanging, pale brown, smoke-like clouds are floating about.

—Cassell.

When a man falls down his temper generally gets up before he does.

A hillside farmer, driving a miserable looking horse, stopped in front of a feed store and was trying to sell a frost-bitten rooster when a man rushed up to him and said:

"Look at your blamed old horse, up to his eyes in my bale of hay."

"Is it your hay?"

"Of course it is. Take your horse way from here."

"Of course I will, fur I never like ter tramp on a man's rights—"

"Take him away, I tell you."

"Yes, I will. Ya, back here. Well, be added as he climbed into the wagon and started away, 'thar's one consolin' thing erbout the' transackshun. The horse don't 'pear ter be hurt much.'"

A tornado stopped the performance in Barnum's circus at Staunton, Va. Several persons were slightly injured.

Two poor woman stood helpless on the river bank at Tusculum, Mo., the other day and saw their husbands drown.

Several attempts have been made to assassinate members of the Illinois State militia guarding the railroad property at East St. Louis.

Allen J. Adams, who killed Moses B. Dickinson, a farmer, ten years ago, was banged the other morning at Northampton, Mass. He cursed the sheriff on the gallows, and maintained indifference to the last. Adams confessed his crime in a drunken debauch last year.

Striking for Nine Hours.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 1.—The employees of the various planing and sash mills in this city went out this morning to the number of 2,000 men. The men strike for nine hours a day and the same pay ($2.75) per day as now. The employers say they cannot concede the demands of the men, and the indications point to a long struggle.

Pittsburg, May 31.—The Pittsburg, Oakland and East Liberty street-cars were tied up this morning on account of the failure of the company to make out a twelve-hour schedule, as promised.

New York, June 2.—About two hundred machinists of the Edison Machine Company, who have been on a strike for the past four weeks for the reduction of the hours of labor, returned to work this morning on a compromise. The men will receive ten hour's pay for nine hour's work, and a price and a half for over time up to 10 P. M., and double pay for all work done after that hour.

THOMPSON HOUSE, Glade Spring, Va. June 1st, 1886.

Parties caught at this kind of work are liable to prosecution for obtaining money under false pretense.

Ancient History. In the olden times Achilles, the leader of the Greeks, chased Hector, the champion of the Trojans, several times around the city of Ilium and finally killed him. This would look as if Hector lacked backbone, but in truth, such was not the case; he wasn't well. For unfortunately he had lost his bottle of Dr. Hart's Great Relief. If this sad occurrence had not happened, the issue would have been different.

Moral—Never be without Hart's Relief.

The finest stock of spring goods ever brought to Marion at S. C. Painter's.

Commencement Exercises of M. F. College.

Closing Exercises of Marion High School. The closing exercises of Marion High School came off at the Chapel of Marion Female College on last Thursday and Friday nights. On Thursday there were two classes of smaller boys that had declamation contests for medals. The contests were spirited and all the boys did well. Friday the Junior and Senior classes, each, had a contest for medals, and again the public were treated to spirited and interesting contests. The Committee on the contests for the first night gave the medal in the smaller class to A. M. Dickenson, Jr., and in the second class to Creed F. Fudge. The Committee on the contests Friday night gave the medal in the Junior class to D. D. Hall, Jr., and in the Senior class to B. E. Copenhagen. The contest between Mr. Copenhagen and Mr. I. N. Lusher was a very close one, Copenhagen winning by the fraction of 1/4. The medals were presented by the following named gentlemen: J. B. Greiner, B. F. Buchanan, Wm. C. Pendleton, and G. H. Fudge. Prof. Walthall then presented prizes in spelling and diction, etc. Prizes were won by J. W. Sheffey, G. E. Goodell, J. P. Sheffey, Jr., and J. F. Nickels. Music was furnished each night by Mrs. A. C. Hill, Mrs. Wm. C. Pendleton, Misses Eleanor Rhea and Maggie Sheffey and Messrs. Luttier, Maury, Lamsdon and Pendleton. The entertainments were quite successful, reflect great credit on the Professors Walthall, and speak well for the future of the school.

The Library Magazine. One hardly appreciates the vast amount of valuable and entertaining matter which is contained in THE LIBRARY MAGAZINE if he sees it in weekly form only; when its several issues are brought together in monthly parts it presents an array of valuable and timely articles that is fairly astonishing. The part for June contains a score of important papers selected from the best current literature, British and American, besides which there are the department of "Books and their Authors" and "Literary Notes and Comments," which contain well-nigh two hundred notices and notes. It is doubtful if any other magazine, in Europe or America, furnishes so much valuable and interesting reading, even at five times its cost, which is only $1.50 a year. JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 303 Pearl St., New York.

A Celebrated Case Ended. For the past fifteen years the case of David E. James vs. M. McCormack has been pending in the courts, State and Federal. During the recent term of the U. S. Court at Abingdon a decree was entered in favor of Mr. D. E. James, who is now engaged in business in our town, and against the defendant McCormack for the sum of $493,170 with interest on a part thereof from Oct., 1885. The entire sum is about $5,200.

Temperance Column.

JUNE 3, 1886.

D. C. MILLER, EDITOR.

We wish to say a few words to the members of Lone Lodge. We did well in our fight for local option in this county. Members were zealous and earnest. Since the election our members are lukewarm and inattentive. They do not attend upon the meetings. Quarter horses are not the best for the track. And when large stakes are to be held a horse that can make four miles is the one that wins. The members of our order that can and ought to wield an influence for good do not attend upon the meetings of the order as punctually as they ought. The excuses offered are not good ones. When we try, we can, as a rule, work up to the filling of all our engagements. The younger members of the order expect the older and more matured ones to attend and take the lead in everything that pertains to the good of the order. Non-attendance is noticed, and we therefore hope to see our Hall crowded hereafter.

The Right Worthy Grand Lodge of the I. O. G. T., after an unusually long and interesting session adjourned its session in Richmond, on the 31st ult. We had the real pleasure of being a member of that body. It was a representative assembly. Templars were present from 34 States, 5 Territories of the Union, and from several foreign jurisdictions. There was a good deal of new legislation for the good of the Order, and some unfinished business that was left over from the session in Toronto. Juvenile Templary received a good deal of attention. The Order is alive to the fact that our work is educational as well as reformatory and that we must begin on the children in order to be sure of success. We hope that the Temple will be revived in Marion and that our adult sisters will take the matter in hand.

The R. W. G. L., established the district system. By this arrangement two or more subordinate Lodges can form a district Lodge. The district Lodge can embrace several counties, if desirable. The degree of charity was made the degree of this new Lodge.

Earnest, intelligent and godly men—cultured and christian women composed the Grand Body of Templars who met in the beautiful and historic Capitol of our State on the 25th ult. The people of Richmond and visitors from different sections of the State were made acquainted with temperance work of which they knew nothing. That is, they knew nothing of its extent and diffusion. When told that Canada, British Isles, Scandinavia, Australia and other foreign jurisdictions were represented they were astonished and delighted. Although we claim the world as our field—we could scarcely realize the fact.

Good Templary is the leading temperance organization in the world. The Order now has 300,000 active, energetic men and women in the field. Over 1,500,000 have taken the degrees of the Order since its inception.

Prohibition is in such favor in Georgia that 115 out of 137 counties have adopted it, under the local option law.

A National Temperance Hospital has been recently opened in Chicago under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, for the non-alcoholic treatment of all diseases common to hospital treatment.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Manchester, N. H., has presented the Mayor and Aldermen with a petition, signed by over 1,200 church members, requesting that the laws against intemperance be enforced.

One who has figure it all up says two drinks of whiskey cost a pound and a half of beefsteak; two beers, a dinner of mutton chops; one cocktail, an egg plant or head of cauliflower. "What will you take, Charlie?" stands for a nice oyster-stew for the whole family on Sunday morning. "Set 'em up again!" means sugar in the house for a month.

Death of Judge Wylie.

The intelligence reaches us of the sudden death of the Hon. Robert Wylie, late Judge of the county court of Blaine county. He was a man of many fine traits of character, and was highly esteemed by the people of Blaine. He had just recently been elected mayor of Seldou, by a unanimous vote.

New Papers.

We have received the 1st No. of the Labor Record, published at Lynchburg, and an organ of the Knights of Labor. W. E. Williams, Esq., formerly of this office is one of the editors and proprietors.

We have also received the initial No. of the Mountain Index, published at Fawcett C. H., by J. N. Harman, W. I. Boone and C. W. Greever. The first number of the paper is full of local news, and promises not only to be a good local journal, but to do efficient work for the Republican party which it will espouse.

What can be Done.

So, don't think there is no cure for you, but try Electric Bitters. There is no medicine so safe, so sure, and so effective as Blood Purifier. Electric Bitters will cure Dyspepsia, Diabetes and all Diseases of the Kidneys, Invaluable in affections of Stomach and Liver, and overcome all Urinary Difficulties.

Town Election.

At the corporation election held last Thursday the following gentlemen were elected: R. F. Nickels, Mayor; James H. Francis, Recorder; J. P. Sheffey, C. F. Lincoln, Jno. R. Sexton, R. M. Goodell, J. B. Greiner, Wm. C. Pendleton and J. B. Rhea, Councilmen. The new council will go into office the 1st of July.

Most Excellent.

J. J. Atkins, Chief of Police, Knoxville, Tenn., writes: "My family and I are beneficiaries of your most excellent medicine, Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption; having found it to be all that you claim for it, desire to testify to its virtue. My friends to whom I have recommended it, praise it at every opportunity. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is guaranteed to cure Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup and every affection of the throat, Chest and Lungs. Trial Bottles free at J. S. PENDLETON'S Drug Store. Large Size."

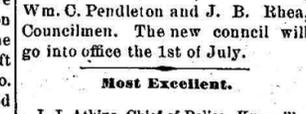

Why do Doctors Prescribe Liquors?

Because they know not what else to do; or because sometimes a little liquor serves to kindle the exhausted fires of digestion. But this liquor prescription is a bad business for the patients, for it makes drunkards out of a large majority of them. Brown's Iron Bitters does not kindle a temporary fire. It nourishes, enriches, strengthens, purifies. It drives out debility and dyspepsia, and sets the invigorated system at work on a basis of health.
