The Bed.

In many farmers' households the making of the beds is no slight or greivable task—not so much because of the number as the condition in which they are kept. Straw, dust, lint, feathers and down scattered thickly about are the unavoidable sequence to the performance of this task, and daily sweeping and dusting imperatively follow in its wake. If one's purse is long enough to afford the best quality of springs and mattresses—others are scarcely desirable—all the annoyance of dust and straw is done away with, as also the trouble of filling and emptying beds. But if one cannot afford these, the next best thing is to procure good cloth—not light, slazy stuff, but heavy, thick, and firm—for ticks. These must be nicely made, the corners turned in to give good shape, and a slit, not less than a yard and a quarter in length, made in the centre of the upper side of the tick for filling in the straw, as also for needful stirring of it in making the bed. This slit must be stoutly faced all around, several inches in depth, and button-holes worked and buttons sewed on at least every four or five inches.

The next thing is to fill, and this must be done with good, dry, sweet oat straw, from which the dust and chaff have been well sifted out. The tick must be filled full, the corners and sides well stuffed. After it has been slept on a short time and shapened and packed properly it should not then be disturbed more or oftener than necessary, as the less stirring, the less wear of straw, the less labor and dust.

Unless you are addicted to feather beds, winter and summer, light mattresses of cotton should be made to use over the straw. For these a lighter quality of ticking will suffice, and from four to eight pounds of cotton, according to the weight and thickness you desire. Put these on the quilting frames (the same as comforters) and tie in small diamonds or squares with coarse, stout twine. Where feather beds are used, and also for pillows, the ticking should be very heavy and firm, that there may be no escape of feathers or down; also that the feathers may not be constantly pricking through, even if they do not altogether escape, as it takes no small amount of labor and time to keep them drawn back into place. Quills may be inserted in the corners for ventilation if desired. Something—a light quilt answers a very good purpose—should always be used between the feather bed and the sheet, for greater cleanliness. This should be washed at least as often as twice a year. Where the mattress is adopted, instead of the feather bed, the quilt, or substitute for it, should also be used over that.

For the pillows there should always be shields of stout thick cotton, an extra fit to the pillow and buttoning over the end. These must be drawn over the tick inside the case, and can be removed and washed at pleasure.

In many families the feather bed is an heirloom, and, like the sins of the fathers is visited upon the children even to the third and fourth generation. It is used always, in hot weather as well as cold. Not only do the well, but the sick lie upon it, often those suffering from eruptive and contagious diseases; yet all that is considered necessary is a little airing, and it is ready for use again. It absorbs impurities (not only the tick, but the feathers themselves), if not indeed the germs or actual disease. It becomes faded, yellow, mottled, and frayed with time. Yet its owners, apparently, entertain no thought but it is a valuable and desirable property.

With print so cheap as at the present time, and cotton not exceedingly dear, there is small excuse for old, ragged or untidy bedding, or for that which has become heavy, hard and unhealthful from long use and much washing. Bedding should be as light as it can be and furnished the needful warmth. For summer, light quilts are perhaps as good as anything; for winter, a supply of soft flannel blankets, along with not too heavy comforts, is practicable and satisfactory. Very pretty and inexpensive comforters may be made out of what is called "cheese cloth," a very light quality of unbleached cotton cloth. Do not fill too heavily, and tie with soft crimson yarn. These are not suitable for hard or common wear, but very neat and delicate for a spare bed.

A Practical Young Woman.

"See the sunrise, Gwendolen?" Miriam Mahaffy spoke these words in an ecstasy of girlish enthusiasm to her elder sister as the latter sat languidly on the bed-room floor one soft, sensuous morning in June, and pulled with stately grace a long striped stocking over a shapely limb. Thrusting her tiny feet into a pair of dainty slippers, Gwendolen stepped to the window and looked out upon the morning.

"Is it not beautiful?" exclaimed Miriam, impulsively, putting on her corset as she spoke. "The golden pencilings of light dart up from below the horizon, touching the fleecy whiteness of the ever-changing clouds with a rosyate glory beyond compare. See how, in yonder speck of blue that peeps forth so coquely between the great masses of clouds that surround it on every side, there comes a mezzotint of orange hue, making a beautiful background to the turquoise bloom of the picture. Is it not very beautiful, sister?"

"Yes," replied Gwendolen, reaching for the hair brush, "it reminds me of a lemon picnic in a blue plate."

"See, sister," continued Miriam, as she did up her back hair and took her bangs from the dressing case, "the breath of the morning, balmy and sweet, is kissing every flower and plant into new life. Can anything be more lovely?"

"Nothing in all the wide world," replied Gwendolen—"except breakfast!"

An Iowa Scene.

A few days ago a staunch old farmer, living a few miles from Maquoketa, drove to town, accompanied by his son, and reaching a certain residence where resides a family in which there is a handsome daughter not yet out of her teens, they stopped. The old man held the horses while the young man entered the yard and rapped gently at the door. When the young lady opened it and said good morning, the young man stammered out: "Is Miss — at home?" "She answered, "Yes, sir." "Well, my father wants to see her." "Won't you come in?" she asked. "No, I'll go and hold the team while father comes in," he said. The father came in, and, without ceremony, began: "My boy out there's got 80 acres of good land, a team and wants to get a wife 'twixt now and harvest, but he's kinder bashful and wanted me to ask you if you wouldn't marry him, and if it was all right we would come around the next Sunday and settle up the business." Imagine that young lady's surprise and bewilderment, never having seen the father or son. Regarding her composure she replied: "I don't care to get married now."—Maquoketa Sentinel.

A Hiberian switch tender who saw a train coming in on timesaid, "You are first and last, and you were always behind before." This is considered as a made-up story. But yesterday a fairly intelligent man, who had a very bad cold, met another gentleman on the street and said, "I would rather be at work than to be sick at home, although, to tell the truth, I this morning started out to stay in bed."

Sweet Names—The Origin of Several of Them.

A writer in Notes and Queries says: With regard to these names (Annabella, Arabella, Christabel and Rosabel) I am disposed to come to the conclusion that, though moulded into the same shape, they are not by any means all of a similar origin. Annabella would be a very natural corruption of Amibella, a name in the Liber Vitæ of Durham (a record of benefactors to the shrine of St. Cuthbert from about the ninth to the fifteenth century, and a most valuable repository of old English names). The same record contains, as names of women, Amabilis, Amable and Mabilia, of course from Latin amabilis, whence or Mabel, on this theory the same name as Annabella.

Arabella, again, might be a corruption of the old Frankish Heribolda—bold, as an ending, often changing into bel, as in our surnames, Grimble and Wimble, from Grimbold and Winubald, and Tremble (most infelicitously), from Trumbold (Anglo-Saxon trum, firm, strong). So, also, Claribel might be from an old Frankish Clarebalde, which, however, we have only one record, the masculine form, Clarebald. This appears to be from Latin clarus (illustrious), and is not the only case in which the old Franks at that period mixed up Latin and German in the same name.

It is possible that Christabel might be from a similar origin, for the early Franks converts at that period freely adopted the name of Christ, and mixed it up with German compounds, such as Christchild's a woman's name, from hild (war). But, on the whole, I am rather disposed to suggest a different origin for Christabel. Finding among the Franks at that period such names as Tirmatus, Stabillis, and the woman's name, Constanbilla—in the sense, no doubt, of "established in the faith"—it might not be unreasonable to suggest such a compound as Christabilla ("established in Christ") as the origin of Christabel.

As to the last name, Rosabel, the ordinarily received explanation of "fair rose" would be a natural and graceful name for women if the French had to form names at a later period. But there is a woman's name, Rosibia, in the Pol. Irminion, which looks rather like as if it might have something to do with it. It seems from its ending, like that of Elisabia, to be also from the Hebrew, and suggests a possible process like that in the case of Isabel, viz., a corruption into Rosibeau, and then a change into Rosibel. However, as in this case the connecting links are wanting, I can only put this forward as a conjecture.

Rammy, Rammy, Ram.

Mollie had a little ram as black as a rubber shoe, and everywhere that Mollie went he emigrated, too.

He went with her to church one day—the folks hilarious grew, to see him walk demurely into Deacon Allen's pew.

The worthy deacon quickly let his angry passions rise, and gave it an unchristian kick between the sad brown eyes.

This landed rammy in the aisle; the deacon followed fast, and raised his foot again; alas! that first kick was his last.

For Mr. Sheep walked slowly back, about a rod 'tis said, and ere the deacon could retreat, it stood him on his head.

Then rushed they straightway for the door with curses long and loud, while rammy struck the hindmost man and shoved him through the crowd.

The minister had often heard that kindness would subdue the fiercest beast. "Aha!" he says, "I'll try that game on you."

And so he kindly, gently called: "Come rammy, rammy, ram; to see the folks abuse you so, I grieved and sorry, am."

With kind and gentle words he came from that tall pulpit down, saying: "Rammy, rammy, ram—best sheepy in the town."

The ram quite dropped its hump like air, and rose from off his feet, and when the parson lit he was beneath the hindmost seat.

As he shot out the door and closed it with a slam, he named a California town. I think it was "Yuba Dam."

"Where Am I Going?"

One fine summer evening, as the sun was going down, a man was seen trying to make his way through the lanes and the cross roads that led to his village home. His unsteady, staggering way of walking showed that he had been drinking; and although he had lived in that village more than thirty years, he was now so drunk that it was impossible for him to find his way home.

"I've lost my way. Where am I going?"

The man thus addressed was an earnest Christian. He knew the poor drunkard very well, and pitied him greatly.—When he heard the enquiry: "When am I going?" in a quiet, sad, solemn way he answered: "To ruin!"

The poor staggering man stared at wildly for a moment, and then murmured with a groan—"That's so."

"Come with me," said the other, kindly, "and I'll take you home."

The next day came. The effect of the drink had passed away, but those little words so tenderly and lovingly spoken to him, did not pass away.

"To ruin! to ruin!" he kept whispering to himself.—"It's true, I'm going to ruin! O God, help and save me!"

Thus he was stopped on his way to ruin. By earnest prayer to God he sought the grace which made him a true Christian. His feet were established on a rock. It was a rock broad enough to reach that poor miserable drunkard, and it lifted him up from his wretchedness and made a useful, happy man of him.

Spoopenydyke and the Towel.

"Now, my dear," said Mr. Spoopenydyke, "just wait until I wash my face and hands and I'll be ready," and Mr. Spoopenydyke plunged his fist into the basin and began polishing his face with soap. Mrs. Spoopenydyke primed around before the glass, putting on the finishing touches. For the worthy couple were getting ready for the theatre.

"Where—where—where's the towel?" gasped Spoopenydyke, holding his head down and clawing around with both hands. "What—what's become of the towel?" he spluttered, rasping handfuls of soap out of his eyes.

Mrs. Spoopenydyke glanced at the rack and saw that the towel was gone.

"I don't believe there's a towel up here," she commenced.

"What d'ye spose I'm going to do?" howled Spoopenydyke. "Think I'm going to the theatre looking like a soda-water fountain? Gimme something to wipe on, will ye? I dod gasted the soap, I've got my mouth full! Ain't ye going to get a towel? Coing to let-me hang out and dry like an undershirt?"

"Wait and I'll ring for one," said Mrs. Spoopenydyke, toiling away at the bell. "Be patient a moment."

"How's a man going to be patient with his eyes full of soap? What d'ye mean by keeping house like this? Think I'm to stand around here till winter, then freeze up? Gimme something to wipe on. Give me a door. Tear up a carpet. Gimme a shirt. Where's the bed-spread? Dod gasted this soap!" and Spoopenydyke tore the shams off the pillows, but being smooth they slid around on his visage as though they were skates.

"What am I going to do with these?" he yelled, "I won't be dry in four months," and he grasped the sheet and rubbed his eyes as though he were polishing silver.

"Ain't you got something coarse?" and he pulled the flannel blankets off and got the wool in his mouth, and finally he emerged with great globes of soap hanging to his forehead and chin.

"Never mind, dear," consoled Mrs. Spoopenydyke. "You're all right. Take this handkerchief and wipe your face."

"Oh! I'm all right, ain't I?" raved Spoopenydyke. "You've only got to say so, and anything is all right. Some day I'll sew your heels to your head and hang you over a roller. Look at that chin. Is that all right? See that eye. Think that's all right? I'll go to bed and wait for a towel, and be spun around like a top and turned over the centre table."

"Why, here," said Mrs. Spoopenydyke. "What's this?" and she untied the towel and took it off his neck. You must have put it there when you were shaving, and Mrs. Spoopenydyke smiled sweetly as her lord growled away through the rest of his toilet.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A High Old Judge.

Some very comical yarns are related of Eph. Clement, commonly called "Yank," of Yank's Station, Lake Bilger, wellknown by all who ever visited the lake, when he was justice of the peace of that section a few years ago. Among his other characteristics, Yank is celebrated for his ability to make a mountain out of a mole hill, and, also, for his philosophical disregard for all the worldly desirabilities when their acquisition requires the display of any amount of energetic force.

One time he was trying a case involving a considerable sum of money, and while the most important witness was being examined Yank fell asleep and began snoring like a house afire.

"Hello, Judge?" cried one of the interested parties, "how kin you decide this case when you ain't hearing none of the evidence?"

Yank was aroused by this indignant outburst, and replied:

"That's all right; I knew all about the darned case afore it kin into this yer court. I've made up my mind about the merits long ago."

And in three minutes, by the watch he was asleep again. But he was not permitted to wait long before one of his help rushed into the room, which was on the second floor of a rickety building, who cried out:

"Old man! that goldarned old hog is in the barn again, eatin' up all the barley."

"Jist adjourn the court until I kind of knock the stuffin' out of the hog, an' ef I ain't back in ten minits, I'll give a verdict for the plaintiff."

The court was accordingly adjourned.

Upon another occasion a man who had been drinking too much of a bad quality of whiskey went into the willows to take a nap, but the poor devil forgot to wake up again. When the dead body was found Yank was solicited to hold an inquest.

"What! Is he dead?" asked Yank. "Why, certainly he is dead," was the rejoinder.

"Ef that's so, bury him. What's the use of holdin' a 'quest on a dead feller," remarked the erudite wearer of the ermine.

About the time his judicial term was drawing to a close a man named Smith wanted to sue another who owed him $400, and he accordingly interviewed Judge Yank.

"Well," asked Yank, "did you see — and hev a talk with him about the matter?"

"Of course I did."

"Wouldn't he give you no satisfaction?"

"Certainly no."

"By jingo," exclaimed the Judge, "ef you couldn't do nothin' with him, how in blazes kin you expect me to do it?"

And such is the style in which Yank would dole out blind justice.—Nevada Appeal.

The Spindle That Needed Oiling.

An exchange gives an illustration of the way in which a well known ventriloquist, who gives public exhibitions, sometimes exercises his fiifts in his idle hours. He is a great practical joker. Several years ago he was on board a Mississippi river steamboat and forming an acquaintance with the engineer, was allowed the freedom of the engine room.

He took seat in the corner, and pulling his hat down over his eyes, appeared to be lost in reverie. Presently a certain part of the machinery began to squeak.

The engineer oiled it and went about his duties. In the course of a few minutes the squeaking was heard again, and the engineer rushed, oil can in hand to lubricate the same spindle.

Again he returned to his post, but it was only a few minutes until the same old spindle was squeaking louder than ever.

"Confound the thing," he yelled, "its bewitched!" More oil was administered, but the engineer began to be suspicious as to its cause. Pretty soon the spindle began to squeak again, and slipping up behind the ventriloquist, the engineer squirted a half pint of oil down the jokers' back.

"There," said he "I guess that spindle won't squeak any more."

The joke was so good that the ventriloquist could not keep it, and he tells it with as much relish as his auditors receive it.

PROTECTION.

A sensible and representative citizen sends the following to the Richmond State—the State, however, failing to appreciate it:

PROTECTION AND WAGES.

To the Editor of the State: In our comments on "Protection and Wages," in Saturday's State, I think the statement of wages in England and America is not a fair average statement of European wages as they are.

Table with 3 columns: Occupation, Germany, France, United States. Rows include Bricklayers, Carpenters, Masons, Plumbers, Bookbinders, Cabinet Makers, Painters.

A house girl in Germany can be had for from $2 to $2.50 per month; carriage driver for $3 to $3.50 per month. The above table is supposed to be the highest wages paid in the different countries.

Does the tariff protect labor, or capital? You say that a tariff for protection is for capital, or the manufacturer, and not the labor.

The cost of American goods is not only enhanced by the extra wages paid to the workman in manufacturing them, but it costs twice as much to build a mill in America as it does in Europe.

Table with 2 columns: America, England. Rows include Laborers, Bricklayers, Carpenters, Plasterers, Plumbers, Millwright.

This table needs no comment. I ask you the question, can you bring your labor to the English rate without demoralizing the country?

Mr. Tucker, as well as all free-traders, harp on the price of blankets, while, in fact, the difference in the cost for equal quality is about 25 per cent, higher for the American article over its cost in England.

The same can be said of the steel rail. Before the first mill was put up in this country for its manufacture the price for the English article was $143 per ton, while to-day you can buy the American articles for $45 per ton.

What we of the South want is protection for our infant manufactures, which have done and are still doing more to build up our waste places and make us prosperous than all the theorists and politicians ever lived.

Break up the Internal Revenue! Revenue law and rid us of the horde of spies and political tramps that have lived on us for the past sixteen years.

The year 1881 saw Richmond manufacturers sell $33,000,000 of goods, and every man, no matter what his occupation, felt some benefit from it.

Many instances could be cited to show that a high tariff is for the benefit of labor as well as capital, but I have already trespassed on your valuable space too much.

We at first contemplated making a reply of some length to the illustrated editorial in the so-called "honor and integrity" paper published here under the name of Conservative-Democrat; but have, upon reflection concluded that it is entirely too small to merit such notice.

The Readjusters of Smyth are our friends and we know in what esteem they hold the editor of this almost played-out Funder sheet. As to the opinion of the Funders, politically, we do not care what they think.

We recognize the initials signed to the above as those of one of the most enterprising manufacturers of Richmond. He gives employment to over three hundred hands, most of them women and girls, paying good wages. His views are sound on the question of protection.

"Any amendment or amendments to the Constitutional may be proposed in the Senate and House of Delegates and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, referred to the General Assembly, referred to the next general election of Senators and members of the House of Delegates, and shall be published for three months previous to the time of making such choice.

And if the General Assembly so next chosen as aforesaid, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house, then it shall be the duty of the General Assembly to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the General Assembly shall prescribe: And if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the General Assembly voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become part of the Constitution."

Capizing of a Schooner.

CHICAGO, June 4.—A special from South Haven, Mich., says: "This evening the schooner Industry, Capt. King, from St. Joseph, capsized just north of this harbor and all on board were drowned. The disaster occurred near the shore and was witnessed by hundreds, but owing to the terrible sea it was impossible to render any assistance to the crew, who were washed from the rigging one by one. Capt. King was the last to go down. At one time he was so near land as to be recognized by acquaintances on the shore.

A part of the rigging came ashore, together with a board bearing the name "Industry." Gallant efforts were made by the sailors on the shore to rescue the perishing crew, but the wreck was carried so rapidly by the gale that nothing could reach her. The severest storm of the season is raging, and it is impossible to do anything except wait till morning, when a search for the bodies will be begun. As far as known three persons were on board.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The House committee on elections to-day disposed of the Alabama contested election case of Smith vs. Shelly by the adoption of a resolution which declares that Shelly, the sitting member, is not entitled to his seat, and recommends, in consequence of the death of the contestant, the seat be declared vacant.

Mr. Jones, of Texas, Greenbacker, voted with the Republicans on the adoption of the resolution. Charles Reed, Guitau's counsel, to-day made another effort to secure a correction of the record of Guitau's trial, failed. His object is to bring about such amendment of the record as will enable him to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus. After his failure to-day he had another conference with Guitau and determined upon some further step, the nature of which he does not disclose. He announces his intention not to cease his efforts as long as his client lives.

PORTLAND OREGON, June 7.—There seems to be no doubt in regard to the election of Mr. George to Congress, by a majority of not less than 2,000. The Republicans claim the entire State by majorities ranging from 900 to 1,800. The Democrats concede it to the Republicans by a small majority. The lines to Eastern Oregon have been down for two days and no precinct east of Cascade mountains having been heard from, the legislature is doubtful.

Eastern Oregon has had a large emigration in the past two years, and it is believed to be mostly Republican. The legislature will be close either way, and its composition cannot be known for two or three days.

John Paul's speech in the House has made just such an impression upon the country as may always be expected when intelligent and truthful statements eloquently made meet a tide of calumny.

As elsewhere we have urged the people to do their full duty in the effort to re-established free suffrage, and have warned them at the same time against entrusting this precious prize in the hands of a Bourbon and Funder administration, so here we repeat both the warning and the urging.

The constitutional provisions referred to are as follows: Article XII, section 1. "Any amendment or amendments to the Constitutional may be proposed in the Senate and House of Delegates and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, referred to the General Assembly, referred to the next general election of Senators and members of the House of Delegates, and shall be published for three months previous to the time of making such choice.

And if the General Assembly so next chosen as aforesaid, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house, then it shall be the duty of the General Assembly to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the General Assembly shall prescribe: And if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the General Assembly voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become part of the Constitution."

Returned to Work.

NEW YORK, June 5.—About 1,500 striking boiler makers returned to work this morning, at an increase of 10 per cent. in their wages. The only shops now holding out against the demand are those of John Roach and the Dela Mater Iron Works. It is believed that these will yield in a day or two.

The opponents of the primary had but a few hours in which to effect an organization after the result of Tuesday's proceedings was known. Had there been forty-eight hours in which to organize and give shape to the contest, the whole primary job would have been smashed. As it was, the bosses received a very black eye.

The only scientific Iron Medicine that does not produce headache, &c., but gives to the system all the benefits of iron without its bad effects, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

THE NORFOLK & WESTERN, NEW RIVER RAILROAD VALLEY AND NEW RIVER RAILROAD Companies desiring to promote the establishment of mining and manufacturing operations throughout the territory tributary to their railway system, and to attract the attention of capitalists to the desirable lands, cultural districts, and at the same time, to provide a safe and reliable means of communication between holders of agricultural and mineral lands and parties seeking locations for settlement and investment have sanctioned the establishment by Mr. JOSEPH M. BLAIR, of a BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION AND MINING INTELLIGENCE.

Mr. AUSTIN has located his office for the present at WYTHEVILLE, WYTHE COUNTY, VIRGINIA, to which point all communications to him should be addressed. Upon the completion of the Shenandoah Valley Railroad to a connection with the Norfolk & Western Railroad, which will be effected at ROANOKE, ROANOKE COUNTY, VIRGINIA, in May 1882, the principal office of the Bureau will be removed to Roanoke.

A monthly bulletin of properties for sale will be issued for circulation among investors, manufacturers and agriculturists. The commissions charged will be moderate.

Parties having lands for sale are invited to record them at this Bureau, with plans, maps, description of improvements, and of mineral deposits, analyses of minerals, price, &c., &c.

It is hoped that, by means of such an organization, the material development of the resources of this rich, salubrious, fertile section of Virginia may receive an effectual and permanent impulse, and public attention be directed and practically assured to its varied and remarkable elements of national wealth and prosperity.

Fashionable Fancies.

The new suits, with parasols to match, are taking.

One of the most fashionable summer trinnings is velvet.

A dark red parasol for general wear, a white parasol for dress, and a black one for use are the popular choice.

Spring stuffs are not so novel as we were led to expect, the textures being similar to those worn last year, the patterns and names only being changed.

Plain, close fitting sleeves for home or promenade dress, buttoned up the back of the arm to the elbow, are more favored by fashionable ladies than sleeves cut in any other style.

The fan is every day becoming more tempting and original in style and make. Many of them are in two colors in silk or satin, the divisions being alternately plain and decorated.

Black hats, black gloves and black stockings will be worn much together. They will not be relegated to black dresses only, but will be worn with any kind of a dress, even white.

The Gainsborough hats, so long in popular favor, have lost their prestige. Manufacturers last season turned them upon the market by the ton; hence their downfall from glory.

White outdoor costumes of coarse woolen textures will be much worn by young ladies this summer. Large black hats lined with black velvet and trimmed with black feathers should be worn with them.

Fashion is running wild over embroideries of every kind; this trimming is used lavishly upon all kinds of toilets. Whole dresses of net are completely covered with embroidery, to be worn over princess slips of tinted surah.

Collars and cuffs are superseded by ruffles and lace frillings, which are multitudinous in style, although the plain linen collar may also be observed in good society. Fichu arrangements are in plenty and extremely becoming and tasteful.

A Fisher Caught

"On my last trip to the States," said Mr. Arthur Fisher of this paper "I caught a very bad cold which settled into a severe case of rheumatism. I did not know what to do for it. I resolved to purchase St. Jacobs Oil for trial. Happy thought, I began applying the Oil, and in two weeks was as well as ever.—Toronto (Canada) Globe.

Disastrous Storm.

PETERSBURG, VA., June 5.—Intel ligence has been received here of a very destructive wind-storm, accompanied by a heavy fall of hail, at Graysburg, N. C., yesterday afternoon. The storm is reported to have extended as far south as Halifax, on the Wilmington and Weldon railroad.

Many wonder how Parker's Ginger Tonic can perform such varied cures, thinking it simply essence of ginger, when in fact it is made from many valuable medicines which act beneficially on every diseased organ. See other column.

The Carson City (Nev.) Appeals says: St. Jacobs Oil is good for rheumatism, neuralgia and a thousand different ills.

The Bourbons always prove too much. Now they have it that Newberry "just asked the privilege of the field for fifteen minutes" and tore the Readjuster party to shivers-smashes. As John Daniel could not do that thing in a whole summer's campaign, it follows that Newberry is a very powerful man.

We trust this thing of instantaneously demolishing the Readjuster party will be stopped. The public appetite demands a continuance of the fun for a while longer. Feet us all await until next fall before chewing the Readjuster party to pulp. We have given the Bourbons Massey instead of the lost Barbour. What would they do without a lost Readjuster?—Bristol News.

Injuries to the Egyptian Obelisk

There is said to be something serious the matter with the Egyptian obelisk erected some time ago in Central Park, New York; that lately it has been undergoing important changes, as if from atmospheric influences, which threaten to roughen, if not to "chip" or "scale" its surface and obliterate its inscriptions.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881. Gentlemen—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pains in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the King of Medicines.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is composed of Iron insoluble form; Cinchona the great tonic, together with other standard remedies, making a remarkable non-alcoholic tonic, which will cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Malaria, Weakness, and relieve all Lung and Kidney diseases.

FARM and HOUSEHOLD.

The Currant Caterpillar.

The gooseberry and currant caterpillars are great pests to American fruit growers. The following recipe for dealing with these pests is given by a man, which he states he has used thirty years, and never failed with it until 1879 when the daily rain washed the salt off the leaves before it had time to dry or act on the young caterpillars.

Fowl Feeding.

Drive four stakes into the ground so as to leave them two feet above surface and six inches apart, and upon these nail two boards so as to make a table large enough to permit the fowls a footing around a nail-peg in the center, cover by a wide board, and weighted by a large flat stone.

Why Some Farmers do not succeed.

- They are not active and industrious. They are slothful in everything. They do not keep up with improvements. They are wedded to old methods. They give no attention to details. They think small things not important. They take no pleasure in their work. They regard labor as a misfortune. They weigh and measure stingily. They are wasteful and improvident. They let their gates sag and fall down. They will not make compost. They let their fowls roost in their trees. They have no shelter for stock. They do not curry their horses. They leave their plows in the field. They hang the harness in the dust. They put off greasing the wagon. They starve the calf and milk the cow. They don't know the best is the cheapest. They have no method or system. They have no ears for home enterprise. They see no good in a new thing. They never use paint on the farm. They prop the barn door with a rail. They milk the cows late in the day. They have no time to do things well. They do not read the best books and newspapers.—Southern Farmer's Monthly.

A good microscope may be made by boring a small hole in a piece of tin and filling it with one clear drop of the balsam of the common fir. It will magnify seventy diameters. No part of the farm pays better than the land devoted to the garden yet on no part is the work more grudgingly given.

Save the soot from the chimney and stove pipes. A pint of soot in a pail of water, will make a liquid manure of high value for flowers and plants of all kinds. Pear trees will induce a good quantity of ashes and cinders at their roots. The sweepings of the blacksmith shop are excellent.

No remains of bison have been found among the bones in the shell-heaps along the Atlantic coasts, and there is no evidence, among the early lists of the natural products of the country, of its occurrence anywhere on the seaboard for a long period before the discovery of the continent.

Parents who allow their children to grow up with scrofulous humors bursting from every pore are guilty of great wrong. Think of them pointed out as branded with a loathsome disease, and you will readily procure them the Cuticura Remedies

A pure wholesome distillation of hazel, American pine, Canada fir, marigold, clover blossoms, etc., fragrant with the healing essences of balsam and pine. Such is Sandford's Radical Cure for Catarrh. Complete treatment for $1.
