THE CHURCH-YARD OVER THE WAY.

One by one they were taken from us,
 Minnie, Charley and May,
 And we carried them out and laid them down,
 In the church-yard over the way.

There are beautiful flowers and grasses
 there,
 And weeping willows sway,
 There are clinging vines and trailing vines,
 In the church-yard over the way.

There is holy quiet and stillness there,
 Unbroken by night and day;
 There is rest for every weary one
 In the church-yard over the way.

Yet whenever I look at the old white stone,
 I shiver and turn away;
 For I like not the solemn quiet that reigns
 In the church-yard over the way.

But, ah! It is folly and may be sin,
 For I must lie some day,
 With throbbing heart, somewhere, if not
 In the church-yard over the way.

MYSTERY.

Where do you go, oh beautiful brook?
 And tell me, from thence do you stray?
 Always here when I visit my nook,
 Yet always going, away, away.

Onward, you nevermore gaze back,
 And yet you are always here, (track,
 When I come by the hard, well-trodden
 To my rustic seat so dear.

Who can fathom the mystery?
 The secret is hidden from me,
 And only known to the piercing eye,
 Of the Ruler of land and sea.

EN MASQUE.

A STORY BY B. J. FARJEON.

Jack Flat, a large plain in the vicinity of the Castlemaine gold field, was riddled with holes, each shaft employing two men, who worked from sunrise to sunset, in the hope of coming upon a rich pocket. As a rule they had little to grumble at. When the rush first set in, the half-dozen gold-miners working on the flat had succeeded in unearthing some tolerably large nuggets, and were making £100 a week a man. All were not so fortunate, but there was scarcely a claim on the flat in which fair wages were not being made, sufficient to pay for meat three times a day, drink, tobacco, and for an indulgence in the newest fashions in water-tight boots, fine flannel guernseys, and cabbage tree hats. The sinking was shallow and easy; there was no rock or tough formation to get through, and the golden gutter was generally reached at a depth of from twelve to twenty feet from the surface. It occupied but a few hours to peg your claim, dig your shaft, erect your windlass, and lay bare the precious gutter in which the gold was found. Some of the wash-dirt yielded two penny-weights to the tub, some two ounces. On Jack Flat there were many prizes and few blanks.

As a consequence, therefore, everybody was in the best spirits, and men sang over their work. The finest singer on the Flat was Shad Ryley, whose top C would have made a professional tenor's mouth water. Shad did not know the value of that C, as he had not been brought up to the stage, but there is no doubt that, had his voice been cultivated, he would have made a sensation in fashionable circles. He had everything in his favor—voice, figure, face. He stood six feet in his stockings, was broad in the shoulder, and an eye as bright as sunlight, and a laughing mouth that women that way inclined could scarcely resist. Between him and his brother Pat there was a wonderful resemblance, but Pat was built on a smaller scale. He stood not more than five feet three; he was slimmer in limb, and his features were more delicately cut. It was true that there was an important gap in the ages of the brothers. Shad confessed to thirty, and Pat to not more than twenty, though the young fellow was rather shy about his age; boys like to be considered men before they have arrived at that estate, and that may have been the case with Pat. He did not look twenty, and it was plain there was plenty of time before him for his whiskers to grow. Shad had a fine pair of them, and could have grown a noble moustache. Perhaps it was vanity that prevented him; it would have hidden his laughing mouth.

The brothers were among the fortunate ones on Jack Flat. Their claim paid them at the rate of twenty ounces per week, and their hearts were light and merry. The first fifty ounces of gold they made went flying away across the water in the shape of a draft, payable to the order of a certain Matthew Brady; and its mission was to bring out a whole family of Bradys, blind mother, lame father; their son Matt, and not fewer than seven young Irish lasses, every mother's daughter of them. With tears and smiles they bade adieu to their native land and turned their faces to the gold-fields, where they were to make their fortunes, and live happy ever afterwards.

There were no greater favorites on Jack Flat than the Ryleys, and it was pleasant to see the care the man took of the lad, giving him all the light work to do, although Pat was not behind-hand in willingness. With everybody who knew them it was Pat and Shad to their faces, and behind their backs they were spoken of as the Ryley boys. Shad, of course, stood for Shadrack, and Pat for Patrick, but to have called either of them by their full Christian name would have been like giving them a slap in the face, which would lead to a shindy. They had Irish spirit with their Irish blood, although, singularly enough, they hadn't much of the brogue. Just the slightest touch of it, to render it captivating to the ear.

The favorite resort of the gold-diggers after sundown, when their work was done, was the Rose, Shamrock and Thistle, a wooden hotel, the master of which was a woman. This was as it should be, as most of her customers were Irish. She herself, Rachel Cary by name, was a woman of Devon; a comely creature, not more than twenty-five years of age. Her brother had built the hotel in the township adjoining Jack Flat, and catching colonial fever, died of it. He left the hotel to his sister, who proved herself a capable woman, and conducted the Rose Shamrock and Thistle with spirit. She was not exactly a Boadicea, for she was tender-hearted and had fallen a victim to the snares of Cupid. She tried to change her name. Cary was good enough in its way, but not to be compared to Ryley. If you have an idea that she fell in love with the proper man of the two, the one who was suited to her in years and strength, you are mistaken. She fell in love with the wrong man—too often the case with the wilful women. Over head and ears with the seductions of Cupid, she fell in love with the wrong man—too often the case with the wilful women. Over head and ears with the seductions of Cupid, she fell in love with the wrong man—too often the case with the wilful women.

Rachel Cary made her love to Pat, and Pat blushed and twiddled his fingers and held back, and was ashamed—as sometimes, not always, happens with raw lads—and absolutely had scarcely a word to say for himself. What made the matter worse was that it might have led to a collision between the brothers, for Shad Ryley was as much in love with Rachel Cary as that headstrong woman was in love with Pat. It was in everybody's mouth, and no man on Jack Flat could see how it was going to end. Shad Ryley told Rachel so.

'Everybody's talking about it,' he said to her.

'Let them talk,' she replied, with a toss of the head.

'They say they don't see how it is to end,' said Ryley.

'I know how it is to end,' she said softly, and turned away with a sigh—not an unhappy one by any means, for she had made up her mind to be Mrs. Ryley; and, despite Pat's shyness, she was confident it would all come right.

'In matrimony, I suppose,' said Shad Ryley.

'It shant be my fault if it doesn't,' she retorted as bold as brass.

They had grown into the habit of talking to each other in this fashion.—She knew well enough that Shad Ryley loved the very ground she walked upon, and that she could be as saucy to him as she pleased; but she had discovered that it would not do to be too soft and confiding with this strong man, who was ready to take advantage of any feminine weakness into which she might be betrayed.

'Rachel,' said Shad, 'don't you see that Pat isn't exactly—isn't—that is to say—'

'Isn't in love with me?' interrupted Rachel, defiantly. 'Is that what you are trying to say?'

'Yes; that is what I was trying to say.'

'Don't you think I can make him in love with me?' she asked, turning her melting eyes upon Shad.

'Indeed, and I think,' he replied with much tenderness, 'that you could make a stone love you if you cared to try.'

'Well, then!' she exclaimed, as though that settled the question. She was secretly pleased with him for his flattery, which was at once insidious and sincere.

He grew cool presently, and returned to the attack.

'But don't you think, Rachel, that you are a little too—that is, that Pat is a little too—'

She helped him out of his difficulty again.

'That I am a little too old for Pat? Is that what you are trying to say?'

He noticed, somewhat terrified, for he expected a storm. No small matter to trifle with a woman's age. But she met the attack bravely.

'That is our affair, Pat's and mine.—If we are satisfied, whose business is it?'

'Nobody's,' said Shad Ryley, 'and I'm a fool for my pains. Forgive me.' He held out his hand; she accepted it. He gave her fingers a brotherly squeeze; she returned it with a sisterly pressure. 'So you have finally and positively made up your mind to be Mrs. Ryley?'

'That is just it, Shad.'

'Say it again!' he cried. 'It was the first time she had addressed him by his Christian name alone; hitherto it had been Shad Ryley or Mr. Ryley.'

'Say what again?' she inquired, startled by his vehemence.

'Shad.'

'Well, there—Shad! What harm is there in it? We're going to be brother and sister.'

'And there's no turning you? You are determined to be Mrs. Ryley?'

'If I am not I'll live a single woman all the days of my life.'

'There's no help for it then,' said Shad, with an air of comic resignation. 'Give me a kiss on it.' He took one, without waiting for permission—a loving, warm kiss, which made her palpitate. 'You are a woman of your word, and willy-nilly, I must be satisfied.'

She did not quite know what to make of this. He accepted the loss of her too lightly, she thought. He should have sighed and pulled a long face; he should have gone on protesting and appealing. 'I'll punish him for it,' she said to herself. 'He shall have no more kisses.' But this ardent embrace had distributed her; never in her life had she been passionately kissed, and she could not help thinking that Shad Ryley was a proper man. If it had been suggested to her that it was possible a woman could love two men at one time she would have indignantly repulsed the insinuation.—It is really an open question. Love has never yet been properly analyzed, nor have its limits been accurately ascertained and defined.

II

From the date of this conversation the aspect of affairs underwent a change.—Pat became less coy, although he still held off; but he appeared to be warming, and Rachel Cary absolutely forced a kiss from him. She had to thank Shad for it. He twitted his brother in her presence for his over-modesty, and said that women loved men either to treat them badly or to be a little too bold. Either course set them on fire, if they loved a fellow; and Shad declared that to behave as Pat was behaving, neither one thing nor the other, was absolutely shameful.

'Give her a kiss, Pat,' he cried 'for my part, I don't care a fig.' Here he snapped his fingers. 'I love her better than you do, though she'll not believe it. But what care I how fair she be, if she be not made for me? That's what the old song says, isn't it? Look here now, I join your hands—Pat has a pretty hand, hasn't he?—and give you both a brother's consent and blessing.—Will that satisfy you, Rachel Cary? Giving my heart away so freely? But I wouldn't give you to anybody but my brother Pat. Mind that! I'd fight anybody else for you, that I would, if he were the best man in the world. But I can't fight my own brother Pat, even though you've set your heart on him and given him the place I ought to hold. I know, by my own feelings, that love can't be controlled. You do like me a little bit, don't you, Rachel?'

'Yes, I do, Shad,' she said, somewhat confused, 'more than a little bit.' And she cast sheep's eyes at Pat, who was looking earnestly at the pair of them.

'I must be contented with that,' said Shad. 'I believe if Pat were out of the way you would say, "Shad, my man, here's my hand." For you are bound to become Mrs. Ryley—you've pledged yourself to it. Come, confess—if you were not so much in love with Pat, I should stand a chance. Honest, now, or I'll never believe there's faith in woman?'

'Indeed, Shad Ryley,' said Rachel, overcome by his vehemence, 'you are not entirely wrong.'

'Which means that I am entirely right. Kiss her, Pat, and seal the bargain. I'll turn my head.'

Rachel looked so bewitchingly, and beseechingly at Pat that he mustered courage, and kissed her on the cheek. Now, Shad had kissed her on the lips, and was altogether bolder and more manly. 'Well,' reflected Rachel, 'Shad is bigger, and stronger, and older—more used to it than Pat.' The young one would improve in time; she would help him to. And she tried to make herself believe that she did not care much for a man who had such a spice of the devil in him as Shad Ryley had. Then, why did she keep thinking of him so much? What a's riddle.

But, notwithstanding that all was settled, there was no regular love-making between Pat and Rachel. The brothers never missed an evening at the Rose Shamrock and Thistle, and Shad would sing his songs there, and make the walls ring with his fresh, clear voice. Nothing could induce Pat to sing. His speaking voice was so musical that it was next door to a certainty he could sing a beautiful song, but he could not be prevailed upon. Rachel pestered, and coaxed, and worried him, until he was at last compelled to give her a promise. 'I'll sing you a song,' said Pat, 'when the Bradys come out.'

Everybody on Jack Flat knew about the Bradys, and a score of young fellows, fired by Shad's description of his friends, had made up their minds to lay siege to the seven Brady lassies the moment they set foot on the gold diggings. It got to be the saying. 'When the Bradys come out.' When the event occurred, so much was to be done—this, that and the other. Shad and Pat were already putting up a tent for them, and preparing to make them comfortable.

'There will be seven wives for the seven best men on Jack Flat,' said Shad.

'There will be a regular happy family of us.'

'I suppose,' suggested Rachel Cary, with a slight pang, 'you will be marrying one of them yourself, Shad Ryley?'

Some women are remarkably like the dog in the manger. They won't have a man themselves, and they don't want any other woman to have him.

'I might do worse,' said Shad; they are comely lassies. There's Norah—I defy you to match her. A complexion like milk and roses!'

'Bless my heart!' cried Rachel, in a tone so tart that it must have deprived her blessing of much of its sweetness; 'then it's Norah you'll marry?'

'I will if she'll have me—and if you don't see any objection.'

'Oh, never fear me, Shad Ryley!' exclaimed Rachel, loftily; 'I shant object.'

'I shall ask you, anyhow,' said Shad, 'before I ask Norah.'

Suddenly, one morning, it was announced that the overland mail was signalled from the Heads, and Jack Flat went on with excitement. That was always the way when the mail arrived from home. This present mail had met with mishaps. The steamer had broken her screw, and there had been a delay of nearly four weeks. Here it was, however, safe at last, and it brought a letter from Matthew Brady, saying that he and his seven sisters and parents were in the good ship Joe and Willie; and the very day after this letter was delivered came the news that the Joe and Willie was in port.

'Pat,' said Shad Ryley, putting his arms around his brother, 'God bless you.'

'God bless you, Shad,' said Pat.

If you think there is anything unmanly in two brothers kissing each other, you are, of course, welcome to your opinion. In certain established forms of manliness there is a dash of snobbish which, on occasions, could be advantageously dispensed with. Anyhow, a very tenderly feeling existed between these two brothers, and there was nothing unmanly in their kissing each other at this moment.

Two days afterward Shad presented himself at the Rose Shamrock, and Thistle at an unusually early hour.

'Rachel,' he said, the Bradys have arrived, and are now in their tent, setting things to order. Pat can't leave his friends, and he wants you to come to the Bradys this evening to shake hands with them. If you like, I'll be here at 9 o'clock to show you the way.'

'Thank you kindly, Shad,' said Rachel, 'I'll be ready for you.'

'You'll be a happy woman to-night,' said Shad, in a tone of tender regret; 'for, says Pat to me, "Shad, if Rachel Cary, in the presence of the Bradys, asks me to marry her, I'll not hold out a moment longer. I've behaved cruelly to her." What do you think of that, Rachel?'

'Pat's an angel,' replied Rachel, 'Was I right or wrong? I'd bear no other name than Mrs. Ryley.'

'Right I hope,' said Shad, softly, as he took his leave.

III

He presented himself at 9 o'clock to the minute, and, arm-in-arm, he and Rachel walked from the township in Jack Flat. It was a beautiful night; the air was sweet, and before them in the clear sky shone the Southern Cross.

'Which is my star?' mused Shad, aloud, looking up. 'Is it that one?—he pointed to the brightest in the heavens—or that?'

His outstretched finger traced the swift descent of a star falling into the black chasm of space.

'It is the bright one,' said Rachel. 'I hope so.'

'You are full of hopes to-day, Shad?'

'You never spoke truer words, Rachel. There's the Bradys' tent.'

It had been set up on an elevation, and through the canvass walls came the soft glare of lights.

'Any one in?' inquired Shad.

He was answered by a chorus of joyful voices, and he and Rachel were cheerily welcomed. She was at home in a moment. She kissed the girls and the mother, and shook hands with the old gentleman, who was brimming over with pleasant fun, and with Matt, who was almost as fine a man as Shad Ryley.

'This is Norah,' said Shad, pulling forward a lovely lass of eighteen, whose saucy eyes had already made many a heart ache.

Somehow or other a little cloud came into Rachel's face, for she felt that by the side of Norah she was No. 2.

'But where's Pat?' she asked, anxiously.

The centre of the tent was divided by a green baize.

'Here,' cried Pat, and at the sound of his voice Matthew Brady stepped to the partition, held it aside, and led forth a pretty, demure girl, so like Pat that Rachel gazed at her in bewilderment.

'Pat?' she exclaimed, putting her hand to her heart. 'Patsy, if you please,' said Pat Ryley, with a wistful look at Rachel. 'Will you forgive me? It isn't my fault that I'm a woman.'

'Thank God, you are one!' cried Matthew Brady. 'How could you be my wife if you were not?'

There was a silence for a few moments. Rachel Cary's eyes were fixed on the ground; her face and neck were covered with blushes. Patsy stole to her side and put her arms about her, and when Rachel had the courage to look up only she and the Ryleys were present. The Bradys had retired behind the green baize.

'You might have told me, Patsy,' whispered Rachel.

'Ah, but forgive me,' pleaded the girl. 'If it had been known that I was a girl how could I have continued working with Shad? And then my sweetheart was in Ireland, and I don't want to be pestered with other men. Say that you forgive me.'

'And me,' said Shad.

She turned to him. If he had looked wickedly or triumphantly at her his chances would have been gone. But his love was too sincere and strong, and she saw that his eyes were moistened with tears.

'I'll keep my word,' she said with a sigh of mingled pain and joy. 'I'll be Mrs. Ryley.'

He caught her in his arms, and almost frightened her by his violent embrace.

'You picked out my star for me to-night,' he said.

Then the three kissed each other all around again, and Rachel was obliged to confess to herself that Shad's kisses were infinitely sweeter than Patsy's.

AN OCTOBER SNOW STORM.

Out West the snow plows came back battered and defeated from their battle with the late storm. West of Sleeping Eye, Minnesota, the drifts were fifteen feet. Wires came down in all directions, blew across the track and were carried by locomotives for long distances, the storm being so thick that the engines could not see the wires. Near St. James the snow blew so thickly that people could not see a foot ahead of them. A freight train got stuck in the snow and men went back with red lanterns to signal the following train. The train dashed on, although one man held his lantern on a pole above the center of the track till the engine kicked it away, and the other hung his lantern at the cab window. The engineer could see nothing in the blinding storm, consequently there was a smash up shortly after.

A MOTHER AND DAUGHTERS.

Once met (it was at a garden party) a clergyman's wife—a graceful, accomplished woman—who introduced three daughters, all so much after the mother's type that I could not help admiring them.

'Yes,' she said, with a tender pride, 'I think my girls are nice girls. And so useful too. We are not rich, and we have nine children. So we told the elder girls that they would have either to turn out and earn their bread abroad, or stay at home and do the work of the house. They chose the latter. We keep no servant—only a char-woman to scour and clean. My girls take it by turns to be cook, housemaid and parlormaid. In the nursery, of course, [happy mother who could say "of course?"] they are all in all to their little brothers and sisters.'

'But how about education?' I asked.

'Oh, the work being divided among so many, we find time for lessons too. Some we can afford to pay for, and then the elder teach the young ones. Where there's a will there's a way.—My girls are not ignoramuses, or recluses either. Look at them now.'

And as I watched the gracious, graceful damsels, in their linen dresses and straw hats—home manufacture, but as pretty as any of the elegant toilettes there—I saw no want in them; quite the contrary they looked so happy too—so gay and at ease!

'Yes,' answered the smiling mother, 'it is because they are always busy.—They never have time to pet and mope, especially about themselves. I do believe my girls are the merriest and happiest girls alive.'

I could well imagine it.

Tommy went fishing the other day without permission of his mother. Next morning a neighbor's son met him and asked, 'Did you catch any thing yesterday, Tommy?' Not till I got home, was the rather sad response.

It is related that Webster and Clay were once standing on the steps of the Capitol when a drove of mules passed moving southward. 'There comes some of your constituents, Mr. Webster,' jokingly remarked Clay. 'Yes,' replied Webster, 'they are going to Kentucky to teach school.'

PREDESTINATION.

An old time Baptist preacher, who has retired from active Gospel dealing, but who keeps a firm eye on faith, has just had a little experience with a colored man that causes him to think very seriously. Meeting the colored man, the preacher said: 'Dave, if you don't bring that saddle home I'll have you put in jail.'

'What saddle is you furrerter?'

'The one you stole from me.'

'Parson, for de Lord, I nebber stole yer saddle.'

'Yes you did. I saw you when you took it off of the yard fence. I believe I'll have you arrested anyway.'

'Look heah, parson, you's a Old Baptist, isn't yer?'

'Yes, and I'll have you sent to the penitentiary.'

'Well, so is I, an' now ketch de pints ez I gi' em ter yer. Dar is just so many saddles in dis worl' wat is ter be stole, an' dar's just so many men wat is ter steal dese saddles. Dis is predestination. Now, if yer saddle happens to be one ob de predisposed saddles, an' I happens to be one ob de predisposed men, kin I help it? Dar was Judas, for instance. He couldn't help 'trayin' de Savior, ease de Savior said, "Judas sop in dis dish an' go an' 'tray me." Hit wasn't Judas' fault case he was one ob de predisposed, so' tended from de foundation of de world.'

'I don't want a religious discussion, Dave. It isn't the saddle now that I care so much about. It is that you told me a lie in saying that you didn't steal it.'

'Well den, parson, 'spose I takes back de lie and keep de saddle?'

'A lie once told always stands. You have lied to me, you scoundrel! and I believe it is my duty to have you arrested.'

'Parson, dar's just a certain amount ob lies to be told in dis worl' an' if I is one ob de men wat is predisposed to tell one ob dese lies hit's not my fault, an' I can't help hit.'

'You go now and get the saddle or I'll swear out a warrant for your arrest.'

'I'll do de best I kin, parson; but dar's jes a certain amount ob stole saddles to be returned in dis worl'. If I's one ob de predisposed men, an' I believe in de yard fence about sundown dis evenin'.'

Large numbers of Chinamen are leaving San Francisco for their native land because of the scarcity of employment for them in that city.

A drinking professor to the Rev. Rowland Hill: 'Now do you think that a glass of spirits would drive religion out of my heart?' Mr. Hill: 'No, for there is none in it.'

'Doctor, doctor,' panted a messenger, 'come down the street, quick, there's a man dropped in a fit.' 'In an apoplexy?' questioned the doctor. 'No, sir, he's in an ulster.'

The Rev. Dr. Hall said every blade of grass was a sermon. The next day he was amusing himself by clipping his lawn. When a parishoner said: 'That's right Doctor, Cut your sermon short.'

'What should a man do,' asked a gentleman of a lady, 'when he has an opportunity to correspond with a charming woman, but being a bachelor, is a little afraid of such business?' 'I should say to him: Do write,' answered the lady.

Pat, to Life Insurance Agent, 'An, shne, me boy, your company would not insure me life at all. Foive years ago I was workin' in the mines, an' a blast went off unexpected, an' a stone struck me in the stomach, an' I have not ate a mouthful since.'

The defeat of the local ring candidate for Comptroller in Philadelphia has led to a movement toward forming a great independent association in that city which will vote against all bad candidates, irrespective of party, and will specially devote itself to the overthrow of the politicians who have so long controlled the city.

There were two soldiers in General Grant's army, lying below blankets, looking up at the stars in a Virginia sky. Says Jack, 'What made you go into the army, Tom?' 'Well I had no wife, and I loved war. What made you go into the war, Jack?' 'Well I had a wife, and loved peace.'

"IT MUST BE ADJUSTED!"

FUNDER HYPOCRISY!

A number of our Readjuster friends in the late Presidential election were drawn off, and voted for a sentiment against a living principle. Yes, the false bait, of "National Democracy," presented by the Funders caused a stampede in our ranks...

The recent election, however, has brought about one curious result. The Funder organs, and Funders generally, now openly confess that the McCULLOCH Bill basis for the settlement of our public debt will have to be abandoned by the Funder party...

THESE Readjusters who voted for the 7th-of-July ticket are now called by the Funders "MAHONITES." They tell us there is a difference between "MAHONITES" and "real Readjusters."

Gov. McMULLIN was buried in Round Hill Cemetery at this place on last Thursday. His funeral was attended by a large number of persons.

that provided for by the "McCULLOCH Bill" these Funders who have repeatedly deceived the creditors with regard to the ability of the State; these Funders who have tried time and again to mislead the people as to the amount of the debt and the resources of the State; these Funders, who now come forward and confess that all the former settlements they have attempted to make were impracticable, have the impudence to stand up and say that they are the ones to be trusted by the people and the creditors...

The Lynchburg Virginian says that "readjustment is necessary to avert outright repudiation." Now these are the same parties who last year said that no further adjustment of the debt could ever be made, or better settlement effected than the one secured by the McCULLOCH Bill; and who asserted that repudiation was an impossible thing.

But gentlemen you are dealing out your Readjuster thunder a little too late. The Readjuster party will settle the debt. If the honest Funders chose to fall in and help effect the work we have no objections. But the people will not consent for the Funder leaders to take control of matters when the victory is nearly gained.

WHAT do you think of a party that last year told you that the "McCULLOCH Bill" was the best settlement of the debt that could possibly be made, and that now favors a settlement more favorable to the State? What do you think of a party that last year told you repudiation was an impossible thing, and that now says the debt must be adjusted on better terms "to avoid outright repudiation?"

They know they need not struggle for place and power any more on their righteous cry of "HONOR and INTEGRITY;" they know that DEMOCRACY would be an empty song; they know that the masses of the people in Virginia are wedded to the principles of Readjustment, and therefore we hear these "honor and integrity" hypocrites, saying, "we must get together on Readjustment and not let the 'MAHONITES' have anything to do with the final settlement of the debt."

THESE Readjusters who voted for the 7th-of-July ticket are now called by the Funders "MAHONITES." They tell us there is a difference between "MAHONITES" and "real Readjusters."

Gov. McMULLIN was buried in Round Hill Cemetery at this place on last Thursday. His funeral was attended by a large number of persons.

DOWN WITH A NEW PARTY.

Some writers in the Richmond Dispatch suggest the idea of forming a new party in the South, to be called the "Anti-Tariff party." After admitting that it is shown to be impossible by twenty years' experience that a party founded on Democratic principles, as now received, to elect a presidential candidate, they propose to get up a new party embodying the doctrines of free trade and States' rights.

We think the proposition is absurd, from the fact that the idea of States' rights, as we understand it, played out at the end of the war, and free trade it would seem from the result of the late election, did much to defeat the Democratic party at the North. Since we find national legislation is partial to certain industries carried on in the North, would it not be advisable for us to establish the same industries in the South, and thus get our share of benefits derived from such partial legislation?

The Lynchburg Virginian says that "readjustment is necessary to avert outright repudiation." Now these are the same parties who last year said that no further adjustment of the debt could ever be made, or better settlement effected than the one secured by the McCULLOCH Bill; and who asserted that repudiation was an impossible thing.

WHAT do you think of a party that last year told you that the "McCULLOCH Bill" was the best settlement of the debt that could possibly be made, and that now favors a settlement more favorable to the State? What do you think of a party that last year told you repudiation was an impossible thing, and that now says the debt must be adjusted on better terms "to avoid outright repudiation?"

Some of the friends of Mr. C. T. SMITH seem to think that the card published in this paper recently over the signature of J. MARSHAL McCUE, was intended by us to injure personally Mr. SMITH, and reflected too much upon him personally to have appeared in our columns.

THE Richmond Dispatch estimates that of the 96,000 men who voted for the May ticket at least 16,000 of them are Readjusters. That is about the biggest one the Dispatch has ever tried to palm off on its readers.

FULKERSON'S majority over TRIGG is 487. The Funders say this is no victory. But when we remember that we had to fight three different candidates, and had every Bank and corporate body in the district opposed to us, we are compelled to regard FULKERSON'S election as a grand triumph over Funderism.

How many Funders have you heard express regret at HANCOCK'S defeat? Very few if any. They regret TRIGG'S defeat, and seem satisfied with the doubtful victory won by Funderism through the May ticket.

WONDER if the Funders will come out in favor of a repeal of the Poll-tax qualification? That is a principle of Readjustment they can't well place in their platform, and one that will be a power with the people in 1881.

Look out the Funders are going to try to crowd us off our platform, and endeavor to gull the people by declaring in favor of Readjustment.

A Haunted House.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 12 1880.—In the village of Glenville, on a lonely road in the suburbs of Cleveland, is a frame house of one and a half stories, about which there is at present considerable excitement among the neighboring residents on account of some singular manifestations that occur therein.

Lynchburg has had a good stirring up within the last thirty-six hours on the iron boom. Within that time she has heard more perhaps than she ever heard or knew before on the subject. She has been amazed and delighted with what she has heard.

Some Russian officers in North China waters recently worked themselves into a very needless state of alarm. A rumor was circulated that American naval officers had been seen drilling Chinese troops.

Some of the friends of Mr. C. T. SMITH seem to think that the card published in this paper recently over the signature of J. MARSHAL McCUE, was intended by us to injure personally Mr. SMITH, and reflected too much upon him personally to have appeared in our columns.

By virtue of decrees of the Circuit Court of Smyth county rendered at the September terms 1880 in the two cases of Gilmore and Derrick vs. Trigg, and Gilmore and Potts vs. Aston Sweeney and others, and of James H. Gilmore vs. J. L. NOTICE:

I shall as Commissioner in the case of Gilmore and Derrick vs. Trigg, and Gilmore and Potts vs. Aston Sweeney and others, proceed to sell at public auction to the highest bidder at the court-house of Smyth county, on Monday 20th day of December 1880 a tract of 454 acres of land with the mineral privileges connected therewith conveyed by M. X. Treadway and wife to George W. Henderson. The terms of sale are as follows: Cash in hand to pay costs of suit and sale, and for the residue a credit of six, twelve and eighteen months with interest from day of sale will be given, the purchaser being required to give bond and approved security for the deferred payments.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

By virtue of decrees of the Circuit Court of Smyth county rendered at the September terms 1880 in the two cases of Gilmore and Derrick vs. Trigg, and Gilmore and Potts vs. Aston Sweeney and others, and of James H. Gilmore vs. J. L. Pickle and others, I will sell in front of the court-house of Smyth county, at public auction to the highest bidder, on the 20th day of December, 1880, the tract of land which was allotted to Mary E. Hagy in the division of the lands which descended from the late Philip Pickle to his heirs, containing 108 acres more or less, situated on the Railroad about 10 miles east of Marlton, upon which there is a comfortable dwelling and out houses. And should this land not sell for a sufficient amount to satisfy said decrees, then at the said time and place I will also sell the interest of James A. Hubble in that portion of land allotted to him and his wife in the division as aforesaid, which is embraced in the old home tract of which Philip Pickle died seized and which adjoins the Hagy tract on the west.

TERMS—Cash in hand sufficient to pay the costs of suit and expenses of sale, including commissions, and for the residue upon a credit of 6, 12 and 18 months, in equal installments, with interest from date of sale, the purchaser being required to execute bond with approved personal security.

I have all grades of boots and shoes for gentlemen and ladies. Cheap and high prices to suit the customer. I make a very fine grade of gait boots for dress, court and wedding purposes, and they are first-class work, at what is called Gregory's big price.

Bring on your cheap work, and the price will be small, my third grade of work still cheaper.

There are a few in the county who are trying to injure my business by calling me a high price workman. I want to stop that. I also want persons to stop selling boots and shoes as my make, that I have never seen much less made. Oct. 24, 1880.

The Board of Road Commissioners of the Marion District, No. 2, Smyth county, Va. will receive SEALED PROPOSALS, until the 20th November, for the building of a BRIDGE across the Middle Fork of Holston River, near Robert Allen's, on the McAdamsized Road two miles east of Marion.

The bridge to be eighty-seven feet long and twelve feet wide.

Said bridge to be well and strongly built, of new oak lumber, and secured by iron bolts and screws, and enclosed with a good roof.

Contractor to furnish materials.

Briefs. Mrs. E. N. Sprinkle is receiving large additions to her stock of goods. Some persons in the community are now killing or have killed their pork.

A number of foreign lawyers attended county court on Monday and Tuesday.

There were a number of intoxicated men in town on Monday, although there are no whiskey saloons in the place.

There are two sportsmen stopping at the Marion House, well equipped with guns and dogs, and who propose to play havoc with the birds in this vicinity.

Snow. The first snow of the season fell on Monday last. It covered the ground lightly for a short time in the forenoon, but did not remain long.

Bee Hives. Look & Lincoln are general State Agents for R. P. Kidder & Sons of New Liberty Ky., and for Hives and all Bee Keepers supplies and fixtures.

Religious Services. Rev. Mr. Carson preached in the Presbyterian church on last Sunday morning and at night.

Rev. J. C. Lowe preached in the Methodist church in the morning at 11 o'clock on Sunday, and Rev. B. B. Boatwright in the Baptist church at same hour.

Personal. Prof. A. T. Lincoln was in town on Saturday last making a brief visit to his friends. We were pleased to hear from him that Tazewell High School is in a more flourishing condition this year than ever before.

Mrs. Parington's Soliloquy. "My sakes! I never seed or heard the likes on it before. Now there's Ike, my son—he went to C. H. Maury's Clothing and Notion Store to buy him some clothes; (it takes a heap o' clothes for Ike), and he found everything so owdacious cheap that he jist kept a buyin' and a buyin' till he had to borrow a wheel-barrow to bring the things home in. Now this is the unforsicated truth, if I ever told one in my life."

Patented. Mr. A. F. Bonham has obtained a patent for his new process of making honey comb foundation. The machine is a mold—is quite simple in its operation and the foundation is made by a process never before employed in the manufacture of this useful article.

The American Farmer. The November number of this old and justly popular farm journal contains a compact and well arranged collection of useful and interesting reading matter for the farmer and his household, all the articles being from acknowledged competent and successful men and women. No department of farm work is neglected. Live Stock, the Dairy, Fertilizers, Composts and Manures, the Orchard, Fruit and Vegetable Gardens, the Poultry Yard, &c., all being treated by skilled hands. There is also a Home Department for the ladies, which will be read with interest. None of our farmers but would be benefited by subscribing for the FARMER, which is published by Saml. Sands & Son, Baltimore, at $1.50 a year, or at $1 each to clubs of five or more; and to every new subscriber the last three numbers for 1880 will be sent free.

Wood. Why don't you bring along that wood before the hard winter weather comes? Commissioners Sales. C. B. Thomas, Commissioner, advertises some Smyth county land for sale at December court. Geo. E. Penn, Commissioner, also advertises land for sale on the same day. Persons desiring to purchase will do well to attend sales.

New Road to be Opened. On Tuesday Judge Miller established a new road leading to Rye Valley by way of Slempp's Creek Gap, and appointed Mr. M. W. Slempp Special Commissioner to employ hands and make the road. This will make a grand improvement for the upper end of Rye Valley, and will result in the erection of an iron furnace near Slempp's Gap. Marion will also be greatly benefited by the road.

Bristol Business Men. Bristol is a live little city, and has a number of active, enterprising business men. Mr. S. R. Ferguson, the Hardware merchant, is perhaps one of the most prosperous and enterprising men of the place. His establishment is a very handsome one, and he carries as large stock of goods as is usually found in such establishments in big cities, while he is prepared to sell as cheap as any body anywhere. He has established a fine trade in this section, which is constantly increasing. See advertisement.

Bunting & Dickey are the Drug men of Bristol. They are doing a large business both in the wholesale and retail line. Their store room is a very handsome one, and is filled with a large and well selected stock of drugs and all kinds of fancy and toilet articles—in fact with every thing kept in first-class city drug stores. Orders entrusted to them will be filled promptly and with great care. Read their advertisement.

Time it is said, proves everything, and among other things it has proved the value of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral as a standard remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs. This is a household medicine with thousands of people, and deservedly so, for it has been in use more than forty years, and all who use it know that it accomplishes even more than is claimed for it. Nearly every community possesses evidences of its great curative power, in persons who have been cured by it of various throat and lung complaints, and who owe to it alone their recovery from the threatening symptoms of consumption. In emergencies like croup and sudden colds, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the remedy that every family should have at hand for the treatment of these cases as they arise. Rich. V., Standard.

The Past Present and Future. (For the Whig)

PIEDMONT, VA., Nov. 11, 1880. It is of but little moment what the opinions of one so obscure as myself may have been in the late canvass; nevertheless, permit me to say while I lay claim to no special political sagacity, it was apparent to me from the first, in a Presidential contest, that Republican Readjusters would support the electoral ticket of their own party, the electoral ticket of their own party especially when division among their political opponents indicated the hope of success; and it was alike clear to me that a large majority of Conservative Readjusters could not be made to regard the struggle as one between Readjuster and Funder, but simply a contest between two sets of Hancock electors; and the fact that the May ticket was the first in the field, and had an undisputed claim to "regularity," inclined a majority of them to its support. They were earnest and honest supporters of Hancock, and were willing to sacrifice their individual preferences and vote with Funders and for a Funder ticket to render certain the vote of the State for him. How marked the contrast between them and the Funders! The last, while claiming to be the only reliable and true Hancock men in the State, made it clearly manifest that they cared less for Hancock's success than they did for the triumph of Funderism by their avowed intention to vote for Garfield sooner than for Hancock through the instrumentality of the Readjuster ticket, when the report was rife a week before the election that the Funder ticket would be retired at the instance of the National Committee. Impressed with those views throughout the canvass, the result was no surprise to me; nevertheless I earnestly sustained my party and voted the entire ticket. And now, Mr. Editor, let me, while but an humble voter with no aspirations for place or position at the hands of my party, say a few words as to the future. Our recent defeat should in no degree dishearten us. We have yet a great work to perform, and with harmony in our ranks success next year is absolutely certain. So far from having cause to lose faith in the wisdom and wonderful genius of our great leader, we should rally around him with yet greater devotion and enthusiasm. Napoleon never accepted battle with such fearful odds against him. Not only had Mahone the powerful influence of the National Democracy opposed to him with all the influence, potent as it is, of the Brokers, backed up by the solid column of Funders desperate for the spoils of office, State and Federal, but the "Grip-Sackers" were also in league with the enemy, they having the machinery of the Republican party of the State under their control. At the same time there had been mutiny in his own camp. Leaders disappointed in their pay had gone over to the enemy, while of the rank and file thousands had been captured and led astray by the memory of other days and old associations when the Northern Democracy were allies worthy of respect and consideration. With such an array against him any man other than Mahone would have been glad to make peace upon almost any terms; but not so with him. He was implored to dictate his own terms, that his opponents might capitulate and accept him as their leader. Could human ambition have hoped for a grander victory than this? Look at the picture: the National Democracy pleading with this man of destiny to dictate the terms upon which his late revilers and enemies might be allowed to surrender and fall in behind as his allies for the nonce. Had ambition alone influenced him, he would then have made terms and to-day he declared the hero of the fight. But not so: with a full survey of the field and a thorough knowledge of the combinations to be made against him, he calmly demanded of the innumerable hosts arrayed against him an absolute unconditional surrender, well knowing such terms could not be conceded. Better a fight and defeat, he declared, than terms with men who had made terms and broken faith once before.

And now the battle has been fought and what is the result? The readjuster party is scarce two years old; in its second year it was called upon to encounter in a hotly contested Presidential contest the power and patronage of both of the great National parties of the country; it was a fearful river to have to cross in the infancy of our party, but it was the only trouble that menaced our future. And now all honor to the invincible Mahone. The contest is over for today; he has crossed the river in safety in the face of the enemy with the Old Guard ever true and loyal near forty thousand strong; no mercenaries in his ranks, and ammunition abundance for all the future. Readjusters, let us be worthy our great leader and our cause, and know no terms with the Funders until the debt is an accomplished fact; that is, a settlement just and fair and one approved by the people. To secure this, to protect the school fund and repeal the dollar license to vote, the old Bourbon party must be crushed. Let us, then, organize for victory; and with some wisely chosen ticket we will double our majority of 1879. ONE OF THE OLD GUARD.

The Auditor and Tax-Receipts. COMMONWEALTH OF VA. OFFICE AUDITOR PUB. AC'TS, RICHMOND, Nov. 13, 1880. To the Editor of the Richmond Dispatch:—Your issue of this date has the following: TAX-RECEIPTS IN BUCKINGHAM. (to wit: Journal) "We are reliably informed that a day or two before the election Auditor Massey appointed a Mr. Coleman in Buckingham collector of delinquent taxes, and informed him that Frazier had deposited with him $175 to pay delinquent taxes in that county. The votes of all persons attempting to vote on these receipts were challenged at the time. William M. Cabell, Esq., has taken the matter in hand and is prosecuting it with great vim. He appeared before the Commissioners of Election and requested a number of persons to testify in regard to the matter. We learn that something of the same sort was carried on in Cumberland, and we hope that the proper authorities will investigate the matter. We, the undersigned, clerks in the office of the Auditor of Public Accounts, deem it due to Auditor Massey, and to truth and fairness, not only to contradict this statement, but to pronounce it, and all similar statements positively untrue. No money was left at this office by Mr. Frazier or any one else to pay delinquent taxes either in Buckingham or any other place. Any statement to the contrary is without even the shadow of foundation. We respectfully ask you and all the editors in the State to give this card a place in your and their papers. Very Respectfully, W. A. Newman, Clerk of the Auditor; R. A. Noel, First Clerk; William E. Smith, First Clerk; W. H. Kirkob, Second Clerk; W. W. Massey, Second Clerk; J. R. Miller, Third Clerk; James C. Seddon, Third Clerk; Geo. W. Duesberry, G. W. Williams.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Providence, R. I. Proprietors.

She made purchases there, and looked at new silks recently imported. She discovered her loss soon after leaving the store, and returning inquired of Mr. Moffet, the manager, if any of the clerks had reported finding the envelope. The clerks at the counters where she made her purchases were questioned, but none of them could throw any light upon the subject. It was then concluded that the lady had either laid the envelope on the counter in a moment of absentmindedness or dropped it in the throng which is constantly surging in and out of the store. In either event some one had picked it up and kept still about it. The lady is wealthy, and will not greatly feel the loss.

Judge Fitzhugh, in Richmond, Va. Saturday, delivered an opinion in the injunction case of the city of Manchester against the James River and Kanawha Company and others. He decided that the city of Richmond was entitled to use water from Grant's dam, and that the city of Manchester could at all times, by proper methods, obtain as much water as is needed for her use. Upon that ground he dissolved the injunction.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, manrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-purifier, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The scientific and medicinal virtues of sarsaparilla produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all venereal diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blisters, Boils, Tumors, Fetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercular Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weakness and Irregularities, Jaundice, Adhesions of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility. By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and invigorates the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SASSAPARILLA a fair trial. It is fully to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, affected as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SASSAPARILLA is a power, that it is by far the best, cheapest and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions who will be benefited.

THE FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

THE DAIRY.

Cheese factories were first established in America.

A new and fatal cattle disease has broken out in Kentucky.

Ayrshire cattle were first imported into this country in 1835.

The first cows were brought to this country by Columbus at his second voyage in 1493.

A pasture constantly grazed with sheep or cattle fed once or twice a day with cotton-seed meal, will rapidly improve and will develop the best pasture grasses and white clover.

When cows are becoming too fat, stop the meal and increase the bran. A very fat milk cow is a losing piece of property. Ask any grazier if he would buy a lot of old dairy cows to fatten for market?

In Saxony dairies, milk is kept from souring by passing a thin iron chain through the milk-pans, the ends of which chain are kept constantly in cold water.

The general rule in feeding cows is 27 pounds of dry food are required for 1,000 pounds in weight, and that three-fourths or two-thirds of this should be bulky food, such as hay.

A cow should be as well fed when dry as when giving milk. She should now increase in flesh, so that she may be able to give a greater flow of milk when milking time comes. To feed a dry cow the poor hay, or even think that straw is good enough, is poor policy, and the loss will show itself in the milk-pail. Feed the cows well all the time.

It pays to feed cows giving milk liberally. Butter is high, and now is the time to feed profitably. Every cow should be made to produce as much butter as possible. Whenever butter is twenty cents or more there is money in the dairy business, and the man who feeds most liberally and judiciously will make the greatest profit. Meal both cotton-seed and corn, roots and pumpkins and fodder corn, should come in for a share of attention as profitable food for dairy cows. Whatever kinds of food are used, the cows should have all that they can profitably turn into milk. Many men feel that they cannot afford to buy grain for feeding to the cows at this season of the year. Let them take a different view, and ask themselves if they cannot afford to buy grain to feed cows when butter is as high as it is at present.—Lexington Journal.

SAVING SEED CORN.

The method of selecting and saving seed corn, practiced by New York farmers, is, when husking, to select from stalks having two or more ears the finest and best ears—those having a small cob, well tipped out, rows regular and straight, bright and clear seed, and with no strange kernels. On such he leaves three or four husks, and when a quantity has accumulated, he takes one or two dozen and braids the husks, adding the ears on one side. These "trusses" are then hung in some airy loft, where they will not be liable to be affected by moisture rising from anything stored beneath, or be attacked by insects or vermin. The deeper the kernel, with a given size of ear, the smaller the cob and the larger the yield. The eye will easily detect this with a little practice.

Every farmer who has much land on his farm, or accessible should not fail to provide a...
