MY OLDEN HOME.

Sitting by my window thinking, Musing on the days of yore, I can almost scent the roses Blooming by the well-known door; Almost see the golden willow Wave its long arms to and fro; Almost hear the pleasant voices Of the loved of long ago.

Most see the ships at anchor In the waters of the bay; Almost see the wavelets glisten 'Neath pale Luna's silver ray. Ah! my eyes are filled with tear-drops And I wonder as they fall, Is it truth or is it fancy, Do I thus behold them all?

Many years have bloomed and withered, Since, old home, I saw thee last, Time has brought me many blossoms, Seldom is my sky overcast; But to thee my thoughts are turning With affection's fondest glow, And for thee my heart is yearning, For the friends of long ago.

I suppose you've had many narrow escapes from the redskins in your day? The old gentleman to whom I addressed these words took his pipe from his mouth and slowly knocked the ashes from the bowl.

'Yes, I did have pretty tough scrapes with 'em, he made answer; 'a body had to keep his eyes open in them days, if he wanted to save his hair. More than once I come mighty near going under, and once saved myself by the skin of my teeth.

'How was that?' 'Well, I don't mind telling you the story if you want it. 'Taint all the time I feel like talking, but I do to-day.'

'My father and mother both had died while I was a child, and my Uncle had taken charge of me, and so it was with him I came out here. He used me as well as my own father could have done, so I had no cause to complain. He had no children of his own, and perhaps that had to do with it.

'Once out here, we went to work with a will, and in a little time had quite a clearing made in the forest about the cabin, which we built with great pains, making it as stout and strong as it was possible for us to do.

'For we expected trouble with the redskins, and wasn't disappointed. The first year all went well, and the next, in August, when the wheat was just to be cut.

'To be sure, we had one or two brushes with the redskins, but they done us little or no harm. 'One morning there was little to do, and I told Uncle John that I was going to the forest for a day's hunt.

'To this he made no objection, only charging me to be back by dark, and to keep a sharp lookout for the savages, a number of whom had been prowling around of late.

'I promised to bear his advice in mind, and taking my rifle set out. Through the day there was little thought of danger in my mind, although now and then the words of Uncle John occurred to me.

'The fore part of the day I had poor luck; and as a consequence, I got further away from the clearing than I meant to when I started.

PATRIOT AND HERALD.

make much difference if I was half an hour late when I got to the cabin, and so I went on slowly determined to carry it all in.

'The sun went down, and it grew dark before I got to the edge of the clearing, but I knew the way, and so it didn't worry me in the least.

'There was a red glow in the forest before me, as bright as the sun had been when it had gone down.

'The field of ripe wheat lay between me and the cabin, and through it I hurried in hope that in some way I might aid my friends.

'On through the wheat I rushed, unmindful of all save a desire to save my friends.

'The redskins had set fire to the cabin, and it was a mass of flames.

'I was but twenty years old when I first came out into this region of country, which was then nothing but a howling wilderness. Here and there was a cabin, but in most places the woods were as unbroken as they were hundreds of years ago.

'The redskins had seen me, and were coming on in full pursuit; for a moment I was motionless, and then I fled onward.

'I fled onward, only to tumble to the earth again, over a huge log that lay in my way.

'I chanced to remember that the log was hollow, and I determined at once to seek a shelter within. A minute more and I was safely ensconced within the huge shell.

'I breathed freer, for I thought the danger was over from the fire, but I soon found that I was mistaken.

'There was a cracking sound above me, and I knew it had caught hold of the log, and in a little time it would eat its way through the shell to me.

'I knew that there was no safety for me there, so I hurried over the hot ground, and reached the cover of the log being good luck would have it, that that night discovered by the savages, and that night I kept on, and it was no other settlement, where I found safe, I said; and to this he assented.

THE CELEBRATION AT CHATHAM HILL.

Correspondence Patriot and Herald.] The anniversary of St. John the Baptist was celebrated at Chatham Hill, June 24th, a short account of which I furnish you for publication.

After prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. S. D. Gaines, the officers elect of Chatham Hill Masonic Lodge for the ensuing year were installed by bro's Gaines and Walthall. The imposing service and prompt manner in which it was performed made it edifying to the very large and appreciative audience present.

After the installation the Marshal introduced Rev. S. D. Gaines, who delivered an address. As application was made for its publication, I thought it well to follow in a few pertinent remarks, put in in good time, by Prof. Walthall, in which he made reference to the antiquity of the order.

The procession then formed and marched to the Academy, headed by the smiling faces of a large number of ladies, where a most sumptuous dinner was prepared. We are at a loss to find words to express our gratitude to our lady friends for the taste manifested, as well as for the rich variety with which the table was supplied.

Dinner being over, the band resumed their labors, which was the signal for reassembling in the Church, where the audience gave profound attention to President Scherer in a brief and able address. Bro. Scherer made a good impression upon the brethren of the mystic tie, but more especially upon the ladies, who received a merited compliment from the speaker.

We were glad to shake his hand and many more of our old friends from Marion. I was made, Mr. Editor, to feel on that occasion more sensibly than ever the power and universality of our common brotherhood, and that Marion and Rich Valley are one and inseparable. Long may each section live to interchange friendly greetings. So mote it be.

CHATHAM HILL HILL SCHOOLS. We invite the attention of our readers to the advertisement of this institution, published elsewhere in this paper. Prof. Walthall, the principal, is a fine scholar and an experienced teacher.

The Educational Association of Virginia will hold its annual meeting at the Montgomery White Sulphur Springs, commencing next Monday, June 13th, and continuing three days. A large number of teachers, from all portions of the State, are expected to be present.

The centennial anniversary of the University of Virginia was celebrated with great enthusiasm by the Society of Alumni, at the closing exercises last week. The orations for the occasion were delivered by Gen. John S. Preston, of South Carolina, and Hon. R. M. T. Hunter, of Va. We regret that we have not space to give a more extended notice of the celebration.

It used to be the best way for a man to find out all about himself and his family, was to run for a public office; now all a New-Yorker has to do to get his biography published is to let it be known that he knows something about the Beecher business.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

[Correspondence of the Patriot and Herald.] PLANO, COLLIN CO., TEXAS, June 29, 1875.

Messrs. Editors: Having promised quite a number of friends in Virginia, many of whom are readers of your paper, to let them hear from me when I landed in the "Lone Star," and thinking this the best method to accomplish that end, I ask a small space in your paper.

Well, to commence: I left my native county (Smyth) the 11th of May, buoyant with hope, my aspirations high—even to the commissionship of the Revenue. But alas! my hopes were "nipped" the bud, my aspirations were "crushed" and I became utterly crestfallen on being informed that I had been "left out in the cold."

But notwithstanding all this, I have had a very pleasant trip "up salt." If plenty of company is any consolation I am consoled, for I am in the "big crowd."

As I said before, I left home on the 11th of last month, and arrived in Dallas, Texas, on the 14th. Came via Bristol, Chattanooga, Memphis, Little Rock and Texarkana, changing cars at all the above places and making the trip to Dallas in about 45 hours. I have only been in seven counties of this State as yet—Worth, Bosque, Sumnerville (a new county), Johnson, Dallas, and this (Collin). But wherever I have placed my little foot (No. 142 brogan), I find traces where that grim-visaged monster familiarly known as "hard times" has passed along, spreading devastation broadcast throughout the land.

For the past two or three years, crops of all kinds have been comparative failures on account of drouth. This year, however, Texas made the finest wheat crop it has ever seen. The estimated average throughout the State over which I have travelled is from 25 to 40 bushels per acre—the best average Texas has ever produced, from what I can gather. Reports as to the crop are in the midst of a dearth as regards corn and cotton, having had no rain for a month, and no very favorable indication for any at present.

If we do not get rain soon the cotton crop will be cut short, and times will not change for the better, as cotton is the staple crop, and reigns supreme as a financial dictator.

This, I think, would be a good country if it had regular seasons; but talking all in all, I am forcibly reminded of the old axiom, "Distance lends enchantment to the view," and think it very applicable to Texas. I was much more "enchanted" before I came to Texas than I have been since.

MINERAL RESOURCES OF VIRGINIA.

The mineral resources of Virginia especially in the Southern portion of the State, have of late been attracting much attention, both in this country and in England. That there are marvelous stores of diversified mineral wealth—gold, iron, copper, lead, manganese, slate, marble and coal in that State is considered a matter of fact, the result of much general research. Virginians themselves, are yet only recuperating by hard struggle from their losses in the war, and can do but little more than call the attention of others to the hidden treasures which they would gladly develop had they the means necessary to do so. Although the existence of these deposits is not now a matter of question, yet it is true that the earnest effort or bona fide expenditure of means has, up to the present time, been made for the purpose of definitely ascertaining whether or not these deposits exist in sufficient quantities to pay for the working.—New York South.

Printers' devils are generally great ladies' men, notwithstanding they have a very hard time. Some time ago one of those hard named fellows and his lady were walking along chatting briskly upon various topics of the day, and looking in to his face she said: "Do you know why I cannot get religion?" "No, my dear, I do not." "It is because I love the devil!"

"Oh! my friends," exclaimed a temperance orator, "that I had a window in my heart that you might all look in and see the truth of what I tell you!" "Wouldn't a pain in your stomach do just as well?" asked a small boy.

Young women should set good examples, for the young men will follow them.

A PRETTY EASTERN STORY.

A very touching and beautiful story comes from the east concerning the Princess Marceline Czartoryska, who recently died in Galicia. Her little grandson fell very ill, and his life was despaired of. The dowager, in a sublime prayer, asked God to take her life instead of that of her grandson. By a sort of miracle the child was saved; almost immediately the princess was attacked by a malady of languor of which it was impossible to ascribe any natural cause.

"It is a debt I owe to heaven," she said as she smiled faintly. A few days later, upon a radiant afternoon, she had herself rolled out in her easy chair on the lawn, and gave orders to have all the doors and gates of the garden opened so that every body might enter. When the village heard of it they at once left their tasks. Old men and women, young men and maidens, and little children pressed about the dying princess, who had long been like a mother to them, for she held the old-fashioned notion that the people are the family of the sovereign.

Then began a most touching ceremony. The children came first. Drawing the youngest one into her arms, she embraced it, saying: "Let this kiss fall again upon you all, my friends." Then she gave to each child a medallion, bearing the evangelical words, "Love one another!"

After the children came the young girls and woman. To each of them she gave a little case containing implements of needle work and a chaplet and an image of the Blessed Mary. To the men she gave an ebony cross, and for each gift and recipient she had appropriate words. When she had extended her last present she was so exhausted that her son and daughter-in-law, who stood by her, wished to have her wheeled back into the house, but she said no. She then begged the people to recite in a loud voice the Dominical orison. Then, at a sign from her hand, they all knelt, and their voices in fervent tones broke out in the recital of the Lord's prayer.

As the amen still echoed in the air she felt death invading her heart, and whispering "Merced," the name of her grandson, the child was brought, and as he was being carried to her lips, her head drooped upon her breast, and without a sigh, she rendered her soul to God. So much for a scene that seems taken from a poem—an ideal state of society that one can hardly reconcile with the present.—Paris Cor.

LUXURY OF THE ANCIENTS.

Galignani's Messenger has the following: The excavations at Pompeii are going on with an activity, stimulated by the important discoveries made at almost every step, and the quantities of gold and silver found, which more than suffice to cover the cost of the works. Near the Temple of Juno has been brought to light house no doubt belonging to some millionaire of the time, as the furniture is of ivory, bronze and marble. The couches consist of an immense mosaic, well preserved in parts, and of which the centre represents a table laid out for a grand dinner. In the middle, on a large dish, may be seen a splendid peacock, with his tail spread out, and placed back to back with another bird also of elegant plumage. Around them are arranged lobsters, one of which holds a blue egg in its claws, a second an oyster, which appears to be fricasseed, as it is open and covered with herbs; a third, a rat farci, and a fourth, a small vase filled with fried grasshoppers. Next comes a circle of dishes of fish, interspersed with others of partridges, hares and squirrels, which all have their heads placed between their fore feet. Then comes a row of sausages of all forms, supported by one of eggs, oysters and olives, which in its turn is surrounded by a double circle of peaches, cherries, melons and other fruits and vegetables. The walls of the triclinium are covered with fresco paintings of birds, fruits, flowers, game and fish of all kinds, the whole interspersed with drawings which lead a charm to the whole not easy to describe. On a table of rare wood, carved and inlaid with gold, marble, agate and lapis lazuli, were found amphoræ still containing wine, and some goblets of onyx.

KILLED AT LAST.

One of the most remarkable cases of the preservation of life under continual disaster, is that of George Pepper, of Boston, who was lately killed in a family quarrel. He was a sailor on the Congress when the Merrimack made her raid at Hampton Roads, and he was laid away for dead, but recovered, having had skull, nose and jaw broken, teeth knocked out, and eye destroyed, and other damage done. Then he went home and married. A fire next door so scared his wife that she ran her infant died, and he was alone again. He went to work in some tubery mill, and fell and broke a leg. Recovering, he was handling lumber, when a pile fell on him and three ribs were broken. These knitted together again and he returned to work, and died, so to speak, took another rib, for he "und a second wife. Back in the tube works, he had a circular saw to take off the log, and that his thumb left at Hampton, and when he had got well of this little ailment, what was left of him was killed by a carving knife in his wife's hands. He scolded her for not knowing how to carve, and knocked her down for her ignorance. In the scuffle he fell upon her, and landed on the knife. So closed his strange career, and his wife is on trial for murder.

Young women should set good examples, for the young men will follow them.

COPY WAS OUT—The devil picked up a paper and said "Here's something about a woman—must I cut it out?" "No!" thundered the editor; "the first disturbance ever created in the world was occasioned by the devil fooling about a woman."

While a number of ladies were waiting at the Grand Trunk depot, a young man entered, and after looking around he walked up to a young lady and said: "Hello, Sally!" "Sir!" she exclaimed, drawing back. "Isn't your name Sally?" he inquired, taking a closer look. "No, sir," she replied, flashing a look of scorn at him. "Well, then, she didn't come in on this train," he continued. "She's got red hair and freckles on her nose just like you, and I'd swear you was Sally!"

For the cure of chronic diseases of the urinary passages, calculus affections, leucorrhoea, dropsy, jaundice, chronic inflammation, and ulceration of the kidneys and bladder, affording any irritability of that organ, and correcting the disposition to profuse and copious secretion when the urine is mucous and purulent, and cannot be voided without pain and especially in discharges from the urino-genital mucous membrane, retention or incontinence of urine.

Its efficacy (J. E. the Paeira) in certain maladies of the urinary organs, induced us to ascribe an almost specific influence to this medicine over the mucous membrane lining the passages, altering the quality of the urinary secretion. It was originally introduced into medicine as a lithontriptic; we now employ it almost solely in discharges from the urino-genital mucous membrane, gonorrhoea, leucorrhoea, and chronic inflammation of the bladder. In the latter of these diseases, Sir H. Brodie, (Lond. Med. Gaz. 1300) recommends it. "I am satisfied," says this eminent surgeon, "that it has great influence over the disease which is now under consideration, lessening very materially the secretion ofropy mucus, which is itself a very great evil, and diminishing the inflammation and irritability of the bladder."

JONATHAN PAEIRA, M. D., F. R. S., & L. S.

To Sufferers. If those who suffer from acute pains in the back, kidneys, bladder &c., (and all from cold and other causes, are more or less subject to these diseases, particularly old persons and females in delicate health,) knew the relief that one single dose of my Extract of Paeira and Buchu would give them, I repeat, one single dose would give them the relief they would obtain a bottle, and with it my guarantee of immediate relief, or I charge nothing. A single dose allays the pain, and a single bottle removes its causes. I sell it in many parts of Virginia to Physicians and others, and can procure many certificates of the highest character of its certainty of relieving their pain, and diminishing the inflammation in the knowledge of Jonathan Paeira, Goode, and others, among the most distinguished surgeons in this country and Europe; and for sale by
