Protect Your Hogs Against Cholera.

Dr. H. C. Givens, State Veterinarian, was in the county in conference with County Agent Bird and the local Veterinarian, Dr. M. M. Brown, in regard to the hog cholera situation in the county. Dr. Givens urges the hog raisers of the County to have their hogs immunized against the disease as this is the only means of preventing its further spread. He also calls attention to the state regulation which requires that all hogs exhibited at fairs in the state be immunized against cholera. County Agent Bird has arranged for this to be done at the Fair ground Monday afternoon.

The County and State law required dead animals to be buried or burned. All good citizens should help to enforce this law by disposing of dead animals on their premises in the proper manner and by seeing that their neighbors do the same. It is especially important at this time, says County Agent Bird, that every dead animal large or small be buried or buried and that any decayed matter that might attract buzzards be disposed of. A buzzard or dog coming from a farm where they have hogs with cholera may be the means of carrying the disease to your farm. It is very probable that this disease may be carried long distances by buzzards for if they come from diseased area and light on your farm they will leave the hog cholera germs. Hogs may pick up these germs and in this way the disease may break out in your herd and you will have no idea where it came from. I therefore urge you to destroy all dead animals and decayed matter that might attract buzzards and in this way keep them off your premises.

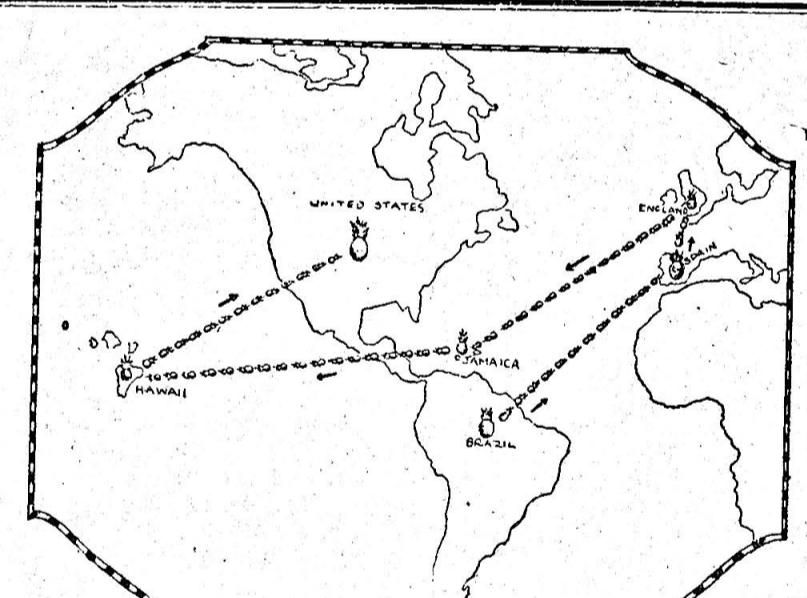

P. E. BIRD,
County Agent.

A Wealthy Traveler

CENTURIES ago, when white men first went to the Amazon, they were presented with pineapples by the Indians, as choice gifts. The strangers took suckers from which pineapples are grown with them in their ships to Spain. It was grown there, and later in England. The pineapple that is now grown in Hawaii, known as the Smooth Cayenne variety, was brought there from Jamaica by Captain John Kidwell in 1893. It now comes back from the Hawaiian Islands to the United States at the rate of 200,000,000 cans a year.

Thus the pineapple is a globe trotter that has grown in many lands. It is wealthy too, rich in food values as well as taste. Ripe pineapple contains about twelve per cent of sugar, equal to cane sugar, and is a wholesome food. It stands well in calories, and is also rich in vitamins A and B, and especially rich in vitamin C. Professor Cary D. Miller, of the University of Hawaii, who has conducted experiments to ascertain its vitamin content, says:

"As an all-around source of vitamins, the pineapple takes an unusually high rank. Canned pineapple is an article of diet of substantial food value, and is not to be regarded as a luxury of pleasing flavor."

A Dessert and an Entree The pleasing flavor is there, however, in whatever way you serve pineapple. Here are a few suggestions for its use.

Pineapple - Butterscotch Parfait: This is a rather rich but delightful dessert for a company occasion. Boil one-half cup white sugar, one-half cup brown sugar, two tablespoons butter with one-half cup water until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Beat two egg whites; pour syrup over them, beating until cool. Chill, and fold in one-half pint whipped cream with one and one-half cups drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple and one teaspoon vanilla. Soak one and one-half teaspoons gelatin in one-quarter cup cold water, then melt over hot water and add to mixture. Beat thoroughly and put in icebox for two hours. Serve in parfait glasses topped with maraschino cherries.

Pineapple Stuffing for Egg-Plant: Cut an egg plant in two lengthwise. Scoop out most of the pulp, cut in small pieces, and boil in salted water until tender. Drain well and mix with one cup breadcrumbs, three-fourths cup crushed Hawaiian pineapple, two tablespoons butter, one-half teaspoon grated nutmeg, a beaten egg, and enough rich milk to make a good stuffing consistency. Stir all together and season with salt and pepper and stuff egg plant shells. Cover the top with buttered crumbs. Place in a deep pan, with enough hot water to reach half-way up the sides of the egg plant. Bake slowly for one hour.

What is a Diuretic?

One Can't Feel Well When Kidneys Act Sluggishly.

THE part played by the kidneys and their importance to bodily health should be clearly understood. Sluggish kidneys do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes. Such impurities are apt to make one dull, tired and achy with often a nagging headache, drowsy headaches and dizziness. A common warning of imperfect kidney action is scanty or burning excretions. Doan's Pills aid the kidneys in their eliminative work. 50,000 users have publicly recommended Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Law Violations With Approach of Game Season.

During the last decade there has been a great diminution in game law violations all over the United States, due to a variety of causes. An important one has been the ceaseless work of the various sportsmen's publications, in a campaign of education, impressing upon the public not only the desirability, but also the necessity of such procedure, if game is not to be entirely decimated.

Another reason is that the officials of most game and fish commissions have been more vigilant and efficient in the prosecution of their work, and that, in most instances, they have received valuable aid from the judiciary in the punishment of those caught violating the law. Still another reason is that scarcity of game has deprived some of the desired opportunity of evading the law, and, in addition, the added expense of seeking and finding game has also had its effect.

We often wonder if men who shoot birds out of season, or birds on which there is a yearly closed season, can fully appreciate the mean, unmanly and dishonorable character of their acts. To say that a man who breaks the game laws makes himself a coward, a liar and a thief, and as such is unworthy to associate with gentlemen, may seem a great exaggeration of an insignificant wrong, yet we seriously think, however, such men may resent the application of these terms, the disinterested public, after due consideration of the law and the circumstances connected with the breach, will render a verdict that the terms are neither inapplicable nor too severe, and we propose to lay the matter fairly and fully before law breakers and ask them if the pleasure or profit derived from unlawful shooting is sufficient to pay for such a character among men.

The law breaker is a coward. When a man performs any act that he has to do secretly and slyly, for fear of public condemnation, and the penalty of an outraged law, that act is certainly cowardly. The man who walks unrightly before the world, respecting the rights of others, and showing proper regard for the laws, has no fear. He does nothing he is ashamed of, has nothing to conceal and may fearlessly meet the scrutiny of the public.

The law-abiding sportman is not obliged to sneak out when he goes afield, nor hide his gun and game on his return. On the contrary, he goes openly and displays his game for the inspection of all interested in his sport. The law breaker does not act thus frankly. He goes afield secretly, avoids observation while out and returns trembling, oppressed by a sense of guilt and like a coward, plucks his game to conceal its character, or ships it under a false name.

The law-breaker is a liar. His every act is planned to mislead and deceive those about him as to his acts. If asked what he has shot he gives his game false names, or pretends he has killed nothing. Even if he attempted to brazen it out among those as base as himself, or before those he knows too indifferent to prosecute him, he dares not be equally open with all, and if brought face to face with any he is afraid to have known what he has been doing, he either lies squarely or resorts to subterfuge even more cowardly. He is a liar of the meanest kind, for he lies under the impulse of a sordid cowardice. He lies to save money.

The law-breaker is a thief. The game of the country is the property of the state, and until that state relinquishes its right upon the arrival of the open season no man has a right to take its property any more than he has to take that of an individual.

The statute books may not define such law breaking as stealing, but it is so regarded by honorable men and those possessed of proper feeling will no sooner kill a bird belonging to the state than they will the poultry of a neighbor. All the difference lies in the fact that in the latter the thief is more liable to detection, and certainly the comparative absence of risk does not render the former act more manly.

The law breaker has no excuse for his cowardice, lying and thieving. To say the law is a bad one will not make his breach of it venial. If such excuse constituted any defense, legal or moral, it could be urged in all cases, and would make each individual in the community a judge of the law for himself. It is true many of the laws are ill advised, but while in existence they must be respected. If they are bad they should be so represented to the law making power and proper changes sought but for an individual or an number of individuals to take the law in their own hands is simply to offer violent to public safety, and institute anarchy in place of order.

There are few men deliberately willing to place themselves outside the pale of decent society, and fewer still who hold apparently respectable positions in the world who will knowingly do anything to peril those positions, but is it not true the game laws are frequently broken by those who pretend to respectability, and equally true when regarded by the eyes of strict truth, such law breakers are cowards, liars and thieves, as we have claimed them. If forced to admit this in any case, with what propriety can any men claim exemption for himself?

Does not the fact that a man has a respectable position in society impose an obligation upon him to maintain that respectability consistently, and is it not true that the example of men of good standing is constantly quoted as an excuse for law breaking by those of the lower grade? If men of good standing all over the country will "set their faces" against breach of the game laws, the vagabonds of the community will be forced, by pressure of this superior power to abandon their illegal practices, but so long as they draw encouragement from the acts of their betters, just so long disreputable scamps will set at naught the laws of the land. "All men are equal before the law" and an unlawful act is as bad in one man as in another, but apart from the law there is a moral turpitude that attaches to those who, by superior good fortune, are able to attain to superior development, and who should consequently have a keener sense of honor and honesty than their less fortunate fellows.

Sleep and the University Institute.

"We do not know," says the Baltimore Sun, "who suggested the idea of the Institute of Public Affairs which has just closed its sessions at the University of Virginia, but in noting its extraordinary success Mr. C. Bascom Sleep, of Virginia, famed for his skill as a political manipulator, should not be forgotten. "Nothing is said about him by Dr. Maphis, dean of the university, in his summary of the proceedings of the Institute, but when the first announcement was made in regard to the project Mr. Sleep's name was linked with it as its principal organizer. We are glad to recall this and set it down to the credit of this extremely active Virginian, because he has generally been associated in the public mind, like the "heaven Chinese," with political "ways that are dark" and political "tricks" that have been anything but vain. If he laid the groundwork for this institute we now know that he can organize bigger things than colored delegations from the South to Republican national conventions.

We do not know whether Mr. Sleep will construe these comments as a compliment or a slur. But the fact is that Mr. Sleep has done the state of Virginia much valuable service. He has been of peculiar value to the Hampton Roads district, and while he was in Congress his good offices were solicited in a number of instances, and never in vain. There is no doubt that it was largely through his influence and active work that Fort Eustis was saved, and the people of this community are very grateful to him for his aid. Newport News Press.

Johnny J. Jones Shows The Best at Fair Yet.

Secretary E. K. Coyner made no mistake in booking the Johnny J. Jones Shows to furnish the midway attractions at the fair this year. The Jones aggregation has brought more new and novel riding devices to the fair than has ever been here, in fact the grounds are so situated that several of the larger rides are not up, but anyway the grounds are full of clean and high class shows and rides. Very noticeable on the fair grounds this year is the absence of the girl shows, and the gambling devices that operate for money. Mr. Jones started in the show business years ago at the Jamestown Exposition having at that time a fat boy called Jolly Joe, and since that time has grown to be the largest show owner in the world, and has always run a clean show in every respect and has never tolerated the riff raff that has caused numerous carnivals to become a nuisance so that many cities and towns have barred them, but the Johnny J. Jones shows are known throughout the United States and Canada as being clean and are always welcomed in all the large cities. The personnel of the shows are so different from the average, clean and neat looking working men and very courteous at all times to the many patrons, especially to ladies and to children. The Southern Exposition is under the management of Mr. T. A. Wright a showman of the old school and Mr. Wright can be found most any time walking around the large midway seeing that the various attractions and employees are on the job to entertain the many fair visitors. If all fairs would book clean attractions like those at the Smyth County fair this year the people would always be better pleased and the fair would grow each year, and with the surroundings that Smyth county has, would eventually become a large district fair. Johnny J. Jones deserves his reputation of the cleanest of all carnivals.

Old Time Revival.

The Cleghorn Valley church and their friends spent a week's time in service prayer and humble supplication to our Heavenly Father to give us a copious shower of spiritual blessings. Believing when we met to worship that the wounds of Jesus speaks to us in our day and time, the divine and unmerited love of God. Reveals to us the knowledge of sin and the forgiveness of sin. Believing that the wounds of Jesus inflicted upon him by wicked hands, produces the great body of Christian workers and calls them to a holy consecrated life and service. The church was greatly revived and good feelings produced by the out-pouring of the holy spirit. We praise the Lord for the wonderful Pentecostal shower of blessing and the great uplift of our people.

The singing choir of Konnarock and Widner's Valley did some excellent singing which was appreciated very highly. Visiting friends from Chilhowie were made welcome with us. The meeting was conducted by Pastor O. C. Sturgill, assisted by other preaching brethren, Rev. E. J. Blankenbecker, of Surgeonsville, Tenn., Rev. S. Blevins, F. C. Hall, John Blevins and J. W. Blankenbecker. The results of the meeting were fourteen conversions, two restorations and a large and attentive congregation assembled on the banks of Carlock Creek to witness the baptism of fourteen believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

May these few lines stir other churches in our beloved county to come back to the Old Time Religion. X Y Z

Mrs. R. L. Griffiths left Wednesday for Detroit, Michigan, where she will visit with her son for a few weeks.

All proposed plans have thus far failed to provide the farmer with farm relief by increasing his selling prices. Industry, however, met a somewhat similar situation by lowering the cost of production. A similar solution can be successfully applied to agriculture. The increasing of production per worker on the farm is being met to a certain extent by using larger units of power, whether horse or mechanical. Where one man was using a single horse or team he is now using from 3 to 8 horses, thus increasing the ground covered from two to five times. By the use of larger power units hired labor can be reduced or eliminated. An analysis of raising corn divides costs according to the following:

Land	50 percent
Labor	20 percent
Power	20 percent
Miscellaneous	10 percent

Of these items one can be considered stationary, namely, the land cost. Labor and power are variable and

KILAUEA SIGNALS WITH FLAMING LAVA RETURN OF PE-LE, GODDESS OF PLENTY

Hawaiians Rejoice When Volcano Which Has Long Entranced Visitors Flares Forth With New Beauty.

Kilauea is 4,000 feet high on the slopes of Mauna Loa, which reaches a height of 13,675 feet. The return of lava to Kilauea brought on a great celebration by native Hawaiians. The fire in the pit means that their goddess, Pe-le, has returned, and that prosperity will come with her to stay. Natives all day long were making sacrifices at the firepit on July 7 by throwing many herbs and various tokens sacred to the fire goddess into the fire and flames below. Within a few minutes after the flow had been sighted by the watchman at the Volcano House the

FRY lava has returned to Hawaii National park! Last month, Kilauea Volcano, the park's stellar attraction, flared to the stars for the first time since 1920, and Hawaii's greatest tourist attraction is again putting on its nightly show, to the delight and awe of visitors from every part of the world. Based on past performances of Kilauea, the activity should continue for at least six months or a year. The fire disappeared from Kilauea in 1920 following high activity during part of that year, and although there was a brief return of lava to the firepit in 1923, last month's flow was the first important resumption of activity in almost seven years.

whole countryside was lighted up by the brilliant glow. Four huge fountains, each spouting molten rock two hundred feet high, held spectators spellbound. Halemauau, firepit of Kilauea, is 1,350 feet deep, although the lava soon filled up at least a hundred feet. Spectators stand on the brink in perfect safety and look down at the living lava glowing white-hot and red-hot a thousand feet below.

"The scene at night is beautiful beyond description," says a news story in the Hilo Tribune-Herald. "The fountains are by far the most awesome part of the spectacle. Thousands of fragments of red-hot rock are periodically flung out like a giant skyrocket. Jagged lava cracks open up in the black mass, exposing the red-hot molten rock below. The pattern of the cracks is constantly changing."
