A FEARFUL NIGHT.

WHY A BEAUTIFUL YOUNG LADY HAD PERFECTLY WHITE HAIR WHEN SCARCELY OUT OF HER TEENS.

I was invited to a lunch party in one of the inland cities not long ago, and was much impressed by the appearance of one of the younger ladies present. She was not beautiful, but possessed the striking characteristics of brilliant fresh complexion and a profusion of hair, white as snow, which was wound on the top of her head after the fashion of Madrazo's Marquise, belonging to Mrs. A. T. Lewart.

After bidding adieu to the ladies, I turned to the obliging friend who had been my sponsor at most of these accidental gayeties of —, and casually remarked, after talking somewhat of my new acquaintance: "By Jove, what hair! It accents her whole appearance. Wasn't she lucky to achieve it young?"

My friend removes his cigar. "That depends on how you look at it. I am inclined to think things small and large, that she was. I doubt, however if she wouldn't say to-day that the price was rather large. And it was a pretty big price. Do you like stories? I'm minded to tell you one, if you like, about that white hair you admire so much."

We went over to the hotel and something like this my friend told me.

You have no idea, you city people, the interest we country people take in the courtships of young folks. From the time Henry Wells began to sidle up to Nannie Clausen at church socials until they were married in the First Presbyterian Church the entire community gave minute consideration to their affairs. Nannie's father, John Clausen, was and is now a prominent commission merchant, generally considered wealthy, and has always lived at least like a man of means. Nannie was pretty, dashing, a local belle and a great favorite. Harry's family lived a few miles from town, and they, too, are people of reputation in the county. Old Jack Wells represented us a few times in the Legislature, and has accumulated in one way and another a handsome property.

The marriage was in every way a suitable one. Harry was educated at Princeton, and although he had at one time the reputation of being wild he had sobered down, and was at any rate such a frank, manly fellow that he was generally forgiven any indiscretion.

As I say, the marriage was the occasion of general rejoicing. Nannie's father gave her an unusually good send off, and the details were sent far and wide through the state. Harry had studied law, although he didn't have much natural inclination for it, the old man thinking his political experience might serve Harry in that way, and had settled down into a country notary, drawing up deeds and doing back-work of that sort. They lived about four miles out of town, and two miles from old Jack's. He had built them a pretty modern cottage on a detached portion of his farm. Harry had his office, an ornamental little structure, a few rods from the house, and there they lived as happy as two birds.

Gradually Harry picked up business, and finally through his father he became trustee for the minor heirs. They were an odd lot of children, mother half-crazy and no end of coal lands and mining investments. It was a good thing for Harry, although it gave a naturally lazy man some additional work. The worst thing was that it obliged him to go to Scranton now and then and leave Nannie. You may imagine that there was a good deal of visiting at the house of two such popular young people, and that fourmile stretch of road was generally kept pretty warm. When Harry had to go away Nannie would get in her phaeton and drive to town, and there was always some of the young people ready to go out and keep her company. Harry always insisted that she mustn't stay alone. For a law abiding State we have a pretty rough element in it, and although we haven't had much to complain of here, there is a general sense of uneasiness.

One August afternoon Harry had a sudden summons to go to Scranton about a suit connected with the minor heirs. He had recently sold some of their property and had been making various collections, which left in his hands about $4,500. When he found he had to go off at a few moments' notice he wrapped up a bundle of papers and his money and took them into the house. Nannie was making preparations for a picnic they were to go to the next day and begged him to wait until the day after.

"But, my dear child, I haven't time even to go to town and put these in the bank, so you will have to take care of them. I'll try and get back in two days at the farthest, meanwhile nobody will know that the money is here."

Then he explained to her the value of the papers and handed her a canvas bag, in which was the $4,500 belonging to the minor heirs.

"Where will I keep it, Harry? Between the mattresses?"

"Just like a woman! No. But I declare I don't know where to tell you. The most insecure place apparently is often the most secure. Any place, dear but between the mattresses, I leave that to you. But you must guard it, if necessary, with your life, for remember, the money is not ours, and at all hazards I am responsible. I don't really suppose there is the least danger, for no one knows I have it. But one ought to take proper precautions, and I beg of you not to admit any tramps while I am gone. Tell Sarah not even to allow them to stop long enough to eat a biscuit."

"All right, dear; we won't let the tramps have a drink even, and I'll take care of the money, you may be sure."

Harry bade his wife good-by and Nannie gave up the picnic. At the end of two days she received a telegram from him, saying he had been detained and telling her to get some one to stay with her for two days, when he would be at home. She drove into town and one of her old friends went out with her. At the end of two days she had another telegram saying he was detained until the next day. Her friend went home and in place of Harry came a third telegram, and so every day for ten days he was expected home, and every day came a disappointment telegram. By this time she had become accustomed to her charge, which she had set like a bag of seed-beds in a corner of a dark closet opening from her room.

The afternoon of the tenth day was a hot, murky afternoon. Nannie had gone up stairs to take a nap and refresh before dressing to meet Harry, who was expected home after the longest absence he had ever made from her.

After a time Sarah came up and told her there was a tramp down stairs who wanted something to eat and who would not be driven off.

She dressed herself quickly and went down stairs, surprised to find how late it had grown. When she reached the kitchen she found also a messenger with another telegram which announced another disappointment, but the next day without fail, Harry wrote, he would be at home. As Nannie turned into the kitchen she heard the tramp and Sarah in evident dispute.

"Yes," said the fellow, "when that time comes your mistress will have another ironing table, helping you, instead of wearing her Sunday clothes every day."

"Au' spoilin' everything for me to do over. I think I see her. I've work enough to do," answered honest Sarah, not indisposed to have a chat over her work.

Nannie found a graceless-looking fellow, unshaven and ill-dressed, who with a certain gentlemanly instinct rose up when she came in.

"I suppose my girl told you we had nothing for you, and that it will be a great kindness if you will leave as soon as possible."

"Yes, she did just that, madam, but I took it upon myself to believe it wasn't so urgent. The truth is,

I'm very hungry and dead tired, and I didn't believe but that you would give me something to eat; at least I've waited to ask you in person."

Women are soft-hearted creatures. Nannie went and got him something to eat herself. The darkness that had been increasing for some time came down rapidly, and there burst one of those terrific thunder storms that gather so suddenly and with such force in this country. After its strength was spent—and I remember that it was the most violent of the season—there fell steady heavy sheets of rain that brought Rock Creek over the bridges before morning.

"Madam, it's no use talking. You can't mean to send a fellow out in such a storm," said the tramp, as the three stood on the porch watching the storm.

"I'm sorry, but I've no place for you."

"What! in a house like this. It's a pity there isn't a cranny for a stowaway. I was walking around it, waiting for the girl and it seems to me it ought to be able to hold three people."

"You are very impertinent. I tell you I have no place for you, and the storm is already breaking away."

As she spoke even, the rain came down in blinding sheets and lightning streaked the heavens.

"Well," he said, carelessly, "we don't go much on matters on the road, but I know I wouldn't send a dog out such a night as this. I'm not a particular chap, leastwise not nowadays, and I'll have to insist on your giving me some sort of shelter, if it's only your dogkennel."

The man spoke with decision. Nannie felt that after all they were really in his power, and possibly it might be worth while to do civilly what she would probably have to do at last.

"I will keep you on one condition," she said. "There is a loft to the house, a sort of garret, which is very comfortable. It is closed with a trap door, and you may sleep on the lounge there if you will allow us to lock the door on the outside."

"Bless my stars and garters!" he said, looking at her curiously, "I don't care where you lock the door."

They took him up stairs, and he climbed up the steep attic stairs. The women shut the door as he politely bade them good-night, and they fastened the padlock, hearing him chuckle to himself as he hicked off his boots.

"I'd take the key, mum," said Sarah. Nannie took the key with her and the two descended to shut up the house. After they made everything secure they went back up stairs.

"You must sleep in my room to-night, Sarah," the mistress said, Sarah dragged in her bedding and made a pallet on the floor, and then, after the custom of women, they examined the closet, looked under the bed and piled chairs against the locked door. The rain was still falling heavily and the night was black as ink. The mistress and maid went to bed and, although worried and anxious, finally went to sleep.

After midnight Nannie found herself awake and a bright light shinning in the room. She started up and saw that it was the moonlight. The storm had cleared away at last. She got up unable to compose herself immediately, and went to the window. The moon was indeed shining brightly. As she stood looking at the peaceful scene before her she saw down the road, for it was as bright as day, several horsemen. It was such an unusual sight at this hour that she stood watching them as they came nearer. To her surprise they turned up the lane leading to their house and on reaching the gate came into the yard. Now, almost paralyzed with fear she saw that they were masked. The truth almost blinded her. They knew that she was alone, that she had this money and they had come to get it. For a moment she was paralyzed. She remembered Harry's last words: "You must guard it with your life if necessary."

She ran to the sleeping Sarah and awakened her. She got down Harry's rifle, which he had loaded and taught her to use. The sleeping girl was soon thoroughly awake, and she explained to her their position.

"It's the tramp that's done it."

"The tramp. No. Sarah, the key, the key of the attic."

She flew up the stairs, unlocked the padlock and opened the trap. The man sprang up to the sound.

"Come, come with me." His own senses alert and hearing the noise of the horses below and steps about the house, he followed her without a word. At the foot of the stairs she stopped.

"I have a large sum of money in the house and those men have come to get it, thinking I am alone. If they kill me that money must be guarded."

"What have you, pistols, shot-guns?" he whispered, taking in the whole situation.

"Here's my husband's rifle. It is loaded."

"Hist. Where are they going to break in? The steps came boldly on the piazza to the front door."

"Get behind me. I will fire at the first man that enters. How many barrels are there?"

"Six, all loaded."

"Very well. Keep this cane in your hand for me in case I need it! There was no storming of shutters. They heard the key applied to the door softly. It opened, and a man followed by two others confidently entered. The first figure walked directly to the stairs. He had taken but a step when three shots came in rapid succession. There was a heavy thud; this man dropped and the other two fled. Sarah ran to the window and two horses galloped down the lane.

"Don't faint, madam; there's work yet to do," said the tramp.

Nannie caught hold of the rail for support and then went into the room. "Get a candle, Sarah."

They lighted a candle and gave it to the tramp, who went down stairs the two women following with brandy and ammonia. The man had fallen backward and lay with his face up and head towards the door.

"Raise the mask and give him air first, madam."

Nannie raised the mask and gave back with a wild shriek.

"It was Harry Wells!" I answered. "It was that smiling, popular young scamp."

"It's no use to asked why he did it. I don't care. Motives don't matter much in such a case. But she, Nannie—Mrs. Wells—she has her gray hair, but there is no trace of that midnight tragedy in her face."

"I believe she was ill for a long time," answered my friend. "They say small-pox cures one of other diseases. Well, some griefs are like the small-pox; they cure you of lesser weaknesses—tenderness of the heart for example. This, I think, was one of them."

"And the tramp?"

"He and Sarah were of course the witnesses at the inquest. The next day he was off on his journey, and I never heard of him since."—Sunday World.

Sunday Afternoon.

After the Sunday dinner, what? Well, it depends. A person whose brain is wearied with intellectual work during the week, or whose nervous system is exposed to the strain of business or professional life, ought to sleep, within an hour or two of his Sunday dinner, if he can. It is surprising how much like a seven-day clock the brain will work, if the habit of a Sunday nap be once formed. Nature will take advantage of it as regularly and gracefully as she does of the nightly sleep, and do her best to make up lost time. People on the other hand whose week of toil is chiefly physical, may well give their minds activity while their bodies are resting. Two sermons and three or four hours of solid reading are a real rest to some on Sunday, while to others such a course amounts to a positive Sabbath breathing. Sunday is a day of rest not of work, religious or otherwise. It is for repose, not for exhaustion. But what the dogmatists on one side and the illiberal on the other are apt to overlook, is the fact that all men do not rest alike any more than they labor alike, and what may help to save one may aid in killing another.

It is insisted that Mr. Edmunds has not definitely and conclusively declined the associate justiceship of the Supreme bench, and that he is even inclined now to accept in deference to President Arthur's wishes. In case he does not decline, the President has already determined upon his successor.

Threats in Virginia.

The Mahone campaign was boiling hot when I reached Winchester, and it seemed just the occasion to secure information as to how the blacks were being terrorized. The chance didn't come and I rode out to view the battle-ground. Then I found a negro grabbing out a stamp by the roadside, and began:

"Well, how's politics?"

"Gittin' purty hot, sah—purty hot," he replied, and threw down his pick and took a seat.

"Do the colored people hold mass-meetings around here?"

"Deed dey do, sah."

"Do the white people try to break them up?"

"Never knode 'em to."

"And you all vote?"

"I reckon we does."

"Have the white people ever threatened you?"

"Yes, sah, dey has."

That was what I was after. I climbed off the horse, sharpened up my pencil, and getting out the old note-book, continued:

"They have, eh? Now, my friend give me one instance where the white folks have threatened you."

"Well, sah, you see dat red house ober to'ards de Berryville pike?"

"Yes."

"Well Major Williams libs dar. He frentened me not ober day befo' yesterday."

"He did, eh? How was it?"

"He frentened dat if my old mule broke into his sugar-cane another single time he'd turn two double-bar'ld shot-guns loose on him and keep shootin' all day! Yes, sah, he did, sah, an' if I hadn't tooken de job of grubbin' out dis stup for two shillin's 'd like to sot heah all de fo'noon and tell you how de white folks am workin' all sorts of sich games to keep us down in de dust."

A Star Route Fraud.

"Boss" said a colored man, approaching the stamp window of the Little Rock Post-office, "how much will yer charge ter send this letter to Memphis?"

"Six cents," answered the clerk, "but you have not addressed it to any one."

"I know that. I ain't got but one stamp and I thought that if you would take it to Memphis fur dat price, I would send it to Anna Smith, and if yer charged more I would send it to Caroline Brown, who libs at Brinkley, about half to way Memphis."

"It will cost you just as much to send dat letter to Brinkley as to send it to Memphis."

"How does yer make dat out. It don't cost yer as much to go on the trains as it do ter Memphis, and de letter will will go on de train."

"That's law, old man."

"I understand yer now. Dis is a stair route officer. Oh, I've got yer. Want'er make three cents out-en me does yer? Wall, I'll gist hab dis matter 'vestigated. I hain't said, nuffin bout de stair routes, but from dis time out I've gwine ter fing myself."

Strange Preacher.

There was once a minister of the Gospel who never went through a course of the theological study, or wrote a sermon, or used a prayer-book, or went to Synod.

Who never built a church, or preached in one, or got up a fair to buy a church a new carpet or organ. Who never received a salary, or asked for one; never wore a white necktie or a black suit.

Never advertised his appointments or hired a cornet soloist to draw hearers; yet crowds followed him to a desert place to listen, and he healed them when sick, and fed them when hungry.

He went to public houses, made wine at a marriage, eat and drank with sinners, denounced the religious people of his time, and at the instigation of religious teachers, he was tried as a malefactor, and put to a cruel death.

This preacher was—CHRIST.

Mother Dlad of Salt Newark, Ohio. J. W. Adams, Newark, Ohio, says: "Cuticura Remedies are the greatest medicines on earth. Had the worst case Salt Rheum in this county. My mother had it twenty years, and in fact died from it. I believe Cuticura would have saved my life. My arms, breast and head were covered for three years which nothing relieved or cured until I used the Cuticura Remedies."

Spiritual Wealth.

As certain persons were returning from the burial of their dead, the remark was made. "What a sad life our friend lived. How unfortunate he was. Poverty seemed to accompany him. He died poor?"

"Had he not some little success?" one inquired.

"No," was the answer, "everything was against him; his life was a failure."

"I do not understand you," said a voice which had thus far been silent, "I was with him the last moment, and I thought he died rich."

"You are mistaken; his estate amounts to nothing at all."

"But surely he left a good name, and a legacy of noble deeds, and holy example, and lessons of patience in suffering, of hope in adversity, of heavenly confidence, when no sun beams fell upon his path."

"Then he died rich," was the emphatic declaration, "richer than the millionaire who went to his long home the same day, miserable in all but his gold."

SENATE CHAMBER, WASHINGTON, February 11, 1882. His Excellency John D. Long, Governor of Massachusetts:

Dear Sir,—I thank you and the other distinguished gentlemen of Massachusetts who have united with you in the courtesy of an invitation to deliver an address in Boston on Washington's birthday upon the "Present and Future of Virginia."

A fraternization at this time in the historic city of Boston of citizens of Massachusetts and Virginia would excite in our countrymen something besides appreciation of the sentiment awakened by such an occasion, and much more than remembrance of the antipodal relation in American politics honorably and ably sustained by these two States for more than 50 years of history.

Were I in Boston on the 22d of February I should have other aims than to employ rhetorical platitudes in praise of the able men of Massachusetts and Virginia for sincerity in the great debates of parties in the past, and in honoring the devoted men on both sides, who risked their lives in the struggle of aims that followed that half-century of heated discussion.

At Boston, on Washington's birthday, in fulfillment of representative trusts at the National Capital, or in the local political struggles of the several States, there are grave duties superior to the mere ledger-main of politics and more mandatory than loyalty to party.

ments of the advanced thought that places Virginia in full alignment with the highest American civilization is the prompt justice with which she deals with an element of population which has been the fruitful source of passionate dispute.

In fact, the Virginia of to-day is abreast of the most advanced Commonwealths in promoting that Americanization and liberalization of sentiment which in the near future will thoroughly unify our country and make successful the only attempt ever made to show the capacity of a people when free and enlightened to govern themselves.

for what good and true man does not desire to see the success of an Administration that rests its policy on the very fundamental principle of a republican form of government.

The Virginia of the present hopes for the prosperity of leading American Commonwealths, and we propose to attain that condition by the agencies which modern civilization has made available for our use as well as for yours.

A NOBLE SPEECH. Hon. John Paul's Response to the Toast "The President of the United States" at the Irishmen's Banquet in Washington.

At the Irishmen's banquet in Washington on Wednesday, which was a feature of the usual commemoration of St. Patrick's day, the second regular toast was "The President of the United States."

the great Readjuster orator, who said: "I should do violence to my own feelings and be derelict in my duty toward the people I have the honor to represent, did I fail to respond heartily to the sentiment you have announced."

HE HAS INATUGURATED A POLICY which will realize, in fact, what has been so often expressed as a sentiment—no North, no South, no East, no West, but one country for the common glory and common good of all the people.

for what good and true man does not desire to see the success of an Administration that rests its policy on the very fundamental principle of a republican form of government.

where it first breathes the breath of life and sees the light of day; a love which the true Irishman carries through life, which lights up his eye in death, and through the dark veil of her sorrows sees the land of his birth, and with his last breath whispers, "Erin, sweet Erin Go Bragh."

The Sun for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy. Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse, the Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every rank; but it is not natural light for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blustering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms and phrases of old-fashioned journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, and conventional way all the news of the world omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of the Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. It is the first important journal established in the country in the dozen years past that has modeled after the Sun. Every important journal existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example. The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before. We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distanced from Bowling Green Square is not the first consideration with the Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions, and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. This habit is the only secret of the Sun's political success.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence, complete the Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed. Who does not read the Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Getonade of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good year; or including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty cents, or $1.00 per year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages fifty cents, is $1 a year postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Address I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher of The Sun, New York City. Call and look at it.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR. It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brassy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair. The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT

Local Briefs.

We are out of wood at the office. Will some subscriber bring us a load at once.

The new clerk's office is convenient, with fine light, airy, and is a splendid improvement.

The County Board of Supervisors have determined to make the jail more secure by turning two of the cells into an iron cage.

J. F. & E. P. Pendleton have two kinds of garden seeds on hand. Before you make garden, look at their seeds. They are fresh and good.

The peach trees are beginning to bloom; grass is looking green, the frogs are croaking, and Spring in all its glory seems about to be ushered in.

Some of the prisoners in the county jail became a little disorderly a few nights ago, but Mr. C. F. Bonham, the jailer, threatened them with the dungeon and bread and water, and they are behaving better.

Don't condemn a good thing because you have been deceived by worthless nostrums. Parker's Ginger Tonic has cured many in this section of kidney and nervous disorders, and we commend it heartily to such sufferers.

Our climate is rather changeable. On Monday the weather was as warm and beautiful as a May day. That night we had violent wind and rain storms. Tuesday was rainy and raw, and yesterday it was clear, windy, and freezing. Most every one has a cold, as a result of the violent changes in the weather.

At last the ladies can supply their wants without having all the ordering for Geo. F. Crush & Co., are ready with a full stock of Dress Goods, Notions and Fine Shoes, which they will sell as cheap as any competition.

Mr. Geo. F. Crush is now in New York making his spring purchases, and for the next two weeks the most beautiful stock of Fancy Goods, Fine Shoes and Dress Goods, ever in Marion, will be received and on exhibition.

Judge D. C. Miller left for Richmond on Tuesday night to attend to some professional business.

Senator Robt. Barnes, of Tazewell county, also took the train for Richmond on Sunday night.

Mr. C. T. Smith, of the Richmond & Louisville Railroad was in town during the first of the week, and paid us several visits.

Hon. James R. Witten, Member of the House of Delegates from Tazewell Co., spent last Sunday with Col. E. A. Richardson, and took the train Sunday night for Richmond.

LA LONG FELT NEED—Has been at last supplied by Geo. F. Crush & Co., who have in stock what is called "The Old Lady's Friend"—It is a low quartered, low heeled shoe, made with every view to comfort, out of the very best "glove calf," and warranted to be first-class in every respect. Price only $1.75. Also a large stock of Ladies' dress shoes always on hand.

Religious Services. Last Sunday the Rev. Mr. French preached in the Methodist church in the morning and at night.

Rev. Mr. Friserson preached in the Presbyterian church in the morning.

New Advertisements. We have a number of new advertisements in this issue, but haven't time or space to give them the notice they deserve. Next week we will do the proper thing by them.

Going West. Mrs. Rogers, a sister of Mr. W. C. Sexton, will leave on next Monday with her family for Nebraska. Mr. James McDonald, of Rich Valley, will also go with his family at the same time.

A Shame. Mr. B. M. Heptinstall who, during his stay at Marion, has proved a live business man, will be forced to move his business to another town, because he can't get a storeroom in Marion. The men of capital at this place have not enough enterprise to build when buildings are needed.

Railroad Note. We learn that two different companies are now locating and digging ditches for railroads down Rye Valley, in this county. We congratulate our friends in that portion of the county upon their almost certain prospect of soon having locomotives passing through their valley.

Sudden Death. On Monday morning Mr. W. F. Waldrop, who lives at Atkin's Tank, and was postmaster at that place, was stricken with apoplexy and died in a few hours. Dr. J. F. Pendleton was sent for, but Mr. Waldrop was in a dying condition when he reached him, and died in about three quarters of an hour after his arrival at his bedside.

Court Day. There was a large crowd in attendance at court last Monday, but little business was transacted. Persons seemed to be chiefly occupied in shaking hands. Money was scarce, apparently, or very little appeared to be changing hands. Nothing was done in court, except to establish a few county roads and pass upon some motions of minor importance.

Dr. R. R. Bratton, Yorkville, S. C. says: Decided and satisfactory results must follow the use of Camm's Emulsion.

Death of a Former Citizen of Smyth.

We were pained to receive intelligence of the death of Mr. Geo. A. Edmiston, formerly of this county, but for the last year or more a resident of Grayson county. Mr. Edmiston died on the 16th inst. He was a man of excellent character. We regretted to lose him as a citizen of Smyth, and it is with much deeper regret that we have to announce his death.

New Millinery.

The ladies of Marion and Smyth county will do well to give their attention to the advertisement of Mrs. E. N. Sprinkle, which appears in another column. Mrs. Sprinkle, assisted by Misses Okie and Emma, has established a fine reputation for taste in the millinery business, and has succeeded in building up a permanent and lucrative trade. She will have the finest stock of millinery this season ever displayed at Marion. Of course there will be a perfect rush on the part of the ladies to see who will be the first to secure that "love of a bonnet."

A Mother's Testimonial.

Messrs. Sanford, Chamberlain & Albers, Knoxville, Tenn.: My little boy of six years old has been weak and puny for years. My friends did not expect I would be able to raise him to this age. He has been dosed and doctored during this time for worms and other imaginary ailments with no relief from any, until I was induced to try Mrs. Winslow's Vermifuge. Two doses of that brought over 100 worms from the little sufferer, and the child is now well, and for which I am truly thankful.

Mrs. JOHN T. ROWELL.

Lee Valley, April 10, 1881.

Runaway Team.

On Tuesday about noon Mr. Wm. Hubble, son of Mr. R. H. Hubble, was driving a four horse team to town, and when just opposite the home of Mr. A. Wolf, three miles west of town, a freight train, coming east, rushed suddenly up and frightened the team causing the horses to run with all their speed. After running a short distance the saddle horse fell with Mr. Hubble, and he and the horse were dragged about one hundred yards. Mr. Hubble was considerably bruised but not dangerously hurt, and the saddle horse was injured so badly as to destroy its value. The other damage was inconsiderable.

Rather Enthusiastic.

The Wilmington (Del.) Daily Republican lately contained the following item of popular interest: Dr. F. J. Speck, who is connected with the Wilmington Every Evening, speaks forth enthusiastically of St. Jacobs Oil. Dr. Speck states that he uses the Oil in his family as a household remedy, a sort of universal panacea for all aches and pains, and has always found it to act most happily. His attention was called to it by the many testimonials in its favor, and he one day used it upon himself for sore throat. Two applications were sufficient to effect a cure. He also used it on his little girl for sore throat with gratifying success. The same child had scarlet fever this winter which left the tendons of one leg much contracted. The little prattler couldn't walk without assistance and suffered much inconvenience and pain. Several applications of St. Jacobs Oil restored her limb to its normal condition and she has not experienced any troubles since. Dr. Speck states that he has also seen the Oil act charmingly in toothache. He thinks St. Jacobs Oil is a sterling remedy, and does not hesitate to recommend it for rheumatism, etc.

The Peruvian Company Scandal.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The examination of Jacob R. Shipped in the matter of the diplomatic scandals connected with the Peruvian Company began this morning. The witness failed to produce the four missing letters, which it is alleged connect Mr. Blaine with his transactions. In regard to his letters generally, the witness said conceivably there might be correspondence with members of Congress and other parties, and he was not quite clear whether the subpoena was intended to cover that. He further wished to know whether the intent was to call for all correspondence which might have passed between him and persons connected with this Government or to limit it to correspondence touching Chili and Peru, and finally, whether (if the latter only) the committee desired all such correspondence, or only such referred to the possible official action of the officials with whom he had corresponded.

Mr. Rice replied that it was the intention of the committee than Mr. Shipped should produce all letters which he had received from that somewhat broad class of persons known as United States officials as well as from all parties connected with the State Department or other Departments of the Government.

The committee then went into secret session (Mr. Shipped and wife remaining in the room) to determine whether the witness should be permitted to superintend the copying of the correspondence called for or whether an order should be issued directing the letter books to be forwarded to Washington.

Facts for the People.

It is an undeniable fact that no article was placed before the public with so much unobscured evidence of its great medicinal value, as the VEGETINE.

For every complaint for which VEGETINE is recommended, the evidence of what it has done is furnished to the public at large, and no one should fail to observe that nearly all of the cases treated by this medicine, have been where the VEGETINE is prepared, and as the streets and numbers are given, there can be no possible doubt as to the matter.

H. R. Stevens, Esq., Dear Sir:—May I ask the favor for you to make a copy of what I have in hand, while on picket duty in the army. I was taken with a fever, which lasted all night. I was unable to sleep, and with chills and shivers. After this had lasted every day, and was taken to Newbern Hospital, and there treated by the attending physician. I grew worse and was sent home. Remained in poor health for four years, treating with many physicians and trying many remedies, but all in vain. I made no appearance on different parts of my body, and my head was so diseased as to be painful to look at, and I had to wear a bandage. After trying the medicinal physicians, without improvement, a change of climate was advised.

Have been in the Hot Springs in Arkansas for some time, getting their treatment through trial. Finding their treatment a failure, I came back here to Marion, Va., discouraged, with no hope of help. I saw a notice in one of my papers, of a medicine, and the effect of so much powerful medicine, has so damaged my system that the action of my stomach is apparently destroyed. My head is covered with sores which do not heal. I am in the skill house.

The best physicians said my blood was so full of poison they could do no more for me. About this time a friend showed me a small bottle of VEGETINE. At this time I was in the most desperate state. I bought a bottle of VEGETINE, and my stomach began to act, and my stomach grew stronger. I felt cool and comfortable. I began to eat, and gradually improving. With the use of VEGETINE, I could eat, and my health improved. I had completely driven disease out of my body. I cured the sores on my head, and my blood and system are now perfect. I had not enjoyed before for ten years. Hundreds of others have cured by the use of VEGETINE.

VEGETINE has saved my life, and you are at liberty to make use of this statement as you please. You best, and I beg of you to let those who suffer from similar ailments know that other sufferers may find relief with the use of this medicine. It will afford me great pleasure to show the marks of my disease, or give any further information to those who are afflicted with similar ailments. I am, sir, very gratefully, JOHN PECK, No. 56 Sawyer Street, Boston, Mass.

Twenty-Seven Years Ago. H. R. Stevens, Esq.: Dear Sir:—This is to certify that my daughter was taken sick when she was three years old, and died in a few days. I was obliged to keep her on a pillow, without moving. The little thing together, she was attended by several physicians, but all in vain. I thought about a year, I commenced using the Blood Remedy, VEGETINE, I commenced using it, and could not get any better. I had not enjoyed before for ten years. Hundreds of others have cured by the use of VEGETINE. During her sickness three physicians were taken to her bedside, and above the elbow, one of them being very young. Several small pieces were also taken from her side. She is now twenty-seven years old, and is enjoying good health, and has never since had any other illness. Her arm is a little crooked, but she can use it almost as well as the other. Her legs are of equal length, and she is all those having Scrofula. FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Facts for Farmers.

It is the best plan to have the perches in your fowls houses on a level, and then the fowls will not crowd to get on the highest perch.

Strawberry plants should be set out as early in the season as possible in order to avoid a dry spell. Nothing is so fatal to young plants as lack of moisture after being transplanted.

Well cured corn fodder has a feeding value almost equal to hay, and yet this fact is only appreciated by a few farmers. Cut up fine—butts and all—and feed with bran and corn meal, it is first-rate provender; nor should it be forgotten that the butts are the best part.

It is a good thing to take red hot cinders from the fire in an old pan and proceed to fumigate your hen-house by sprinkling sulphur on the hot coals, carrying it into various parts of the room. If the fowls are in don't give them too big a dose.

When oxen are used they ought not to be compelled to work much in muddy weather, as that will be found to wear their feet out much faster than hard frozen roads. Often one or two days work on bad roads will cause the loss of a week or ten day when the time of a team is very important.

One of the best agents to assist us in the endeavor to prevent our soils from baking is lime. Lime not only makes sandy soil heavier, but lightens heavy soils. It exerts an influence chemically that does much to overcome this difficulty. It causes certain changes to occur by forcing into existence new compounds, and its effects are lasting.

A correspondent of an agricultural journal has used during two years past water impregnated with gas tar for the purpose of destroying the Colorado beetle on potato vines. It has proved more effective than Paris green, and has been used with equal effect on currant bushes. Two quarts of gas tar to a pailful of water are the proportions used, and the vines or bushes are sprinkled by means of a watering pot.

In sowing orchard grass and clover on the same ground, it is recommended to sow the two kinds of seed separately and also to divide the orchard grass into two parcels and sow it in two directions. This secures regularity in the distribution and prevents the formation of tussocks. Some practice dampening the seed, but this is not necessary if care be taken and especially if sown as suggested.

A small quantity of ashes given to pigs, while fattening it found very beneficial, as their food is generally rich in phosphoric acid and deficient in lime which ashes supply; and in this way the phosphoric acid is made available as food.

Our readers must remember that only recently has it been clearly demonstrated that a dead branch on a tree is almost as great a strain on the main plant for moisture as does a living one. It is one of the most important discoveries of modern botanical science to the practical horticulturist as by this knowledge he can save many a valuable tree. When one has been transplanted some roots get injured, and the supply of moisture, in the best cases, is more or less deficient. Any dead branch, or any weak one, should therefore be at once cut away.

Cologne water can be made at home. Take 90 drops of oil of lavender, 60 of drops bergamot, 60 drops essence of lemon, 60 drops orange water, 60 drops of musk. Put these in a pint of alcohol.

If a man wants quiet and amiable cows, horses or other stock, he should handle them gently when quite young, and never tease. The man or boy who does the latter lays up wrath against the day of wrath.

Time is money: emphatically so when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup frequently cures Colds Coughs, etc., in less than a day. Price 25 cents. Sold everywhere.

Adversity borrows its sharpest sting from our impatience. Nothing can constitute good breeding that has not good nature for its foundation.

It is useless to deny that the brightest and fairest fall easy victims to consumption, and equally fruitless to ignore the fact that decline has its origin in many cases in neglected catarrh. Sandford's Radical Cure is a pure, sweet, balsamic specific.

Death to rats, mice, roaches and ants; Parson's Exterminator. Burns granaries and households cleared in a single night. No fear of bad smells. Best and cheapest vermin killer in the world. Sold everywhere.

For several years I have used no other Hair Dressing than the Xanthine, which had been warmly recommended to me by a friend who had tested its value. It has in my experience, accomplished all that is claimed for it as a wholesome preservative and restorer of the natural color of the hair and a thorough preventive of dandruff.
