Janet's Mistake.

Janet Elmwood stood in a low vine wreathed doorway of her home, a comfortable Maine farm house, at the close of a July day.

Nearer he came, until a smile broke the naturally grave expression of his handsome mouth, and he stretched out his arms and drew her to his breast.

Janet, instead of nestling close against the manly heart which she knew beat always warmly and truly with love for her, drew petulantly away.

A deep flush mounted suddenly to the young man's forehead. He looked at her averted face, her indifferent attitude, with amazement.

'What do you mean, John?' Janet kept her eyes fastened on the toe of her little shoe, that, notwithstanding her appearance of coolness, beat a lively tattoo against the painted boards.

'I did not know you expected to take boarders, Janet.'

'He is the only one. He came last week while mother was at the sewing circle, and I showed him the room, and he engaged it for two months, and—that's how it is.'

Janet's cheeks grew pink as she thought of the dashing stranger's look of admiration, as, in her pink print dress, and had stood at the gate when he went to the city for his baggage.

'Anybody would think he was an orge,' pouted the young woman, seeing with her quick, bright eyes the state of mind her lover was in.

'There he comes now,' she cried. Mr. Eugene Raycliffe smiled under his drooping jet mustache as he noticed Janet's liver.

'Come country bumpkin baring her hair to death I've no doubt; but I'll soon settle him.'

These remarks, make mentally, were accompanied by such an air of self-satisfied complacency, as he threw his satchel on the steps and sat down beside it at Janet's feet, that John Wentworth scarcely bowed in answer to the languid 'good to know you' which followed Janet's introduction.

John seemed suddenly overgrown and awkward, Eugene Raycliffe's hands were so exquisitely white and delicate that his own seemed by contrast redder and more gigantic in proportions than ever.

His attire seemed rough and ill-fitting compared with the natty 'store clothes' of the artist from Boston and altogether John felt awkward and uncomfortable standing with his broad back against the lattice of the porch, and observing with scant approval the upward glances from Mr. Raycliffe's black eyes to Janet's brown ones.

'Your friend seems slightly displeased at something,' said he, as John with a brief farewell and never a second glance at Janet, walked away with a firm step and head well up.

John had no fancy for standing about unnoticed, especially while the girl to whom he was engaged coolly allowed a comparative stranger to monopolize her smiles and society.

'Don't go off angry, John,' said Janet, trying the witchery of her eyes on her former lover. 'He is so in love with me that I can wind him around my finger,' she thought.

And it would be very fine to have two swains sighing at her feet, especially two like John Wentworth, by far the best catch in the country round, and the stylish dashing Raycliffe, the new arrival, is sure to create a furore among the maids and matrons of Sunnydale.

John would not soften, spite of the moonlight and Janet's upraised eyes shining under the fair curly lashes.

'I will come back when you can treat a fellow decently, Janet, I am not going to be fooled to the top of my bent to please you any longer.'

This was the last Janet saw of John. But she had little time to think of him while Mr. Raycliffe devoted himself so entirely to her amusement. He painted her portrait, and while she sat for him, he gazed the time receding, in tender tones, yards of tender, sentimental poetry; they went on sketching tours; they sat on the piazza in the twilight, and sang to her; Janet had a sweet voice, also which the boarder was not long in finding admirably suited to his own.

Things went on until Janet's mother, with many a nod and beck and wreathed smile, intimated that there was an 'understanding' between the two young people. John Wentworth was well enough in his way, honest, sober, industrious and shrewd as need be, but she looked higher for Janet. Janet had been to a boarding school, she had the education of a lady, she could sing and play the piano, and Mr. Raycliffe praised her drawing more than a little. And by the way he hung around (this time to go back to the city was up, but he had engaged the room for another month), she was sure something would come of it.

She could sniff weddings in the air, and went so far as to ask Mrs. Brown's opinion as to the most fashionable way of making dresses, a very nice one, suitable—and then Janet's mother hesitated smiled and looked very wise—suitable for a wedding dress. Of course, Mrs. Brown knew at once that the dress was for Janet, and through Mrs. Brown, who was sometimes called 'the Sunnydale daily tattler,' the rest of them were informed without the loss of precious time.

The report came to the ears of John Wentworth. Like a sensible fellow he concealed whatever feeling of disappointment aroused from the prying busybodies. He did not stay away from church or from any of the social village gatherings of young people because he met Janet and her devoted adorer there. Not he; he dived and laughed the more, although the pain in his heart which he determinedly hid from view was in reality long in dying out.

Janet had been his first love, and however lightly she had loved him, he, at least, had been sincere and could not forget her in a day, try as he might.

Time, however, is a great healer, and when one hazy October day Janet rode over in her little phaeton to ask John and his sisters to go berrying, he looked her straight in the eye and wished her a 'happy future' without a tremor in his hearty voice or a quiver of his eyelids.

'Eugene has gone to Boston,' said Janet, flicking the flies off her gray pony, and leaning forward. 'We should have heard from him yesterday. I feel a little worried. He had a good deal of money with him. We sent to the city by him for things we could not get here, and several of the neighbors—Judge Jordan, Squire Ellis and others—paid him in advance for portraits. I dreamed last night of his being robbed and killed. Ugh! it makes me shiver. I know I'm foolish, but I can't feel easy.'

Bills began to fall due, and Mr. Eugene Raycliffe was still like the unknown quantity represented by X. People began to talk. Janet's mother took to her bed with an illness sudden, and of a nature unexplained and obscure.

Janet grew pale waiting for a letter. Finally, one bright Sunday morning Sunnydale, individually and collectively, was agape over a startling headline in a Boston paper:

'Arrest last night of Joseph Raymond, otherwise known as 'Dashing Joe,' and having for his latest alias Eugene Raycliffe. Several well-to-do residents of Sunnydale victimized by the accomplished and gentlemanly scoundrel.'

The affair was a nine day's wonder. But after a month or two had passed away and the excitement had quieted, people began to wonder if John Wentworth would 'take up with his pretty early love.'

Encouragement for him to do so was not lacking (so the matrons of Sunnydale will tell) from Janet's mother. Janet herself wrote a little note on perfumed paper to John, and this was the closing part of his reply: 'I don't want to reproach you for your throwing me over as you did. You have been punished quite enough. But for a man like me it's no use trying to go on with things as they are now. Better each go our way. And, although I cannot feel toward you as I did once, believe me that I bear no ill-will toward you, and regard me if you will as a friend still.'

When, a year after, on another still October day, John told Janet of his approaching wedding to a young lady of Boston, Janet cried a little, kind in love! And even, being given of heaven and loved of it, that you should turn in time of need and trouble and say a prayer for strength and knowledge, even that is a part of you, and not the least divine part. So that when the man who can suffer, not do the good that you can do, sneers and scoffs at your prayers and your religion, I could wring his cowardly neck to death.'

The Luck of the Horseshoe.

Mrs. Leatherbury heard a hammering at the front door and went down. There was her husband on the step-ladder nailing something over the door.

'What are you doing?' she wanted to know.

'I am nailing a horseshoe over the door,' replied Mr. Leatherbury, in the tone of a man who half wished he had got the job completed before anyone came around.

'For mercy's sake!' ejaculated his wife, and her amazement was mingled with a dash of vexation, 'a horseshoe over the front door of a house like ours?'

And she looked proudly at her handsome home, and gazed at her husband as though she thought he had gone mad, or might possibly be drunk.

Mr. Leatherbury, on his part, said never a word, but held the horseshoe steadily while he felt in his vest pocket for a nail.

'Are you crazy?' she asked at length, 'or are you going to open a blacksmith shop in the parlor?'

Mr. Leatherbury abruptly stopped singing. 'Never take the horseshoe from the door,' which he had been trying to warble in a cheery way, and said very glumly; 'No he wasn't.'

'Well, then for pity's sake what are you doing that for? Why do you want a horseshoe nailed over the door?'

A slight flush mantled Mr. Leatherbury's cheeks as he replied.

'Keep witches away.'

Mrs. Leatherbury was now positive that he was demented. She stepped out of the door and looked up at the decoration.

'Well,' she said, 'I think it would, and she sighed.'

In very truth, it was no slouch of a horseshoe. It had been the property of the very biggest horse in the big brewery, and was large enough to fit the bows of a Cunarder. Mr. Leatherbury said he 'found it at a cross-road, in the new of the moon.'

His wife said she didn't believe there was ever room enough in the new moon for such an arch of iron, and begged him to throw it away and come down.

'Witches,' she went on in a fine burst of sarcasm, 'when there hasn't been a witch in America since Penn was Governor.'

Mr. Leatherbury feebly asked if she meant Pen Butler, but the lady snuffed his little joke into outer darkness.

'Do take that thing down,' she begged.

'I won't,' replied her husband stolidly. 'It's good luck to have a horseshoe over the doorkeeps away malaria and bad dreams and brings all sorts of good luck.'

'Fiddle-faddle,' she snapped effectually quenching his rising enthusiasm, 'where did you ever hear such stuff?'

And he wrathfully told her she didn't know anything, and, besides it was a romantic old German, and it was esthetic, too, he said and some people gold plated the horseshoe and wrote 'Prosit' or 'Gesundheit' on it, and nailed it up in the parlor.

'What does 'Prosit' mean?' she wanted to know.

'Good luck,' replied he liege lord, a little nervously. 'They both mean good luck, and a horseshoe over the door brings good luck to home in everything. Business prospers, people are happier, nothing evil or hurtful happens; everything is good and—'

But just then as he turned to feel for the hammer, the step-ladder toppled, he threw out his arms, lost balance, and as he went over, the loose end of that horseshoe caught him under the chin, held on for a moment and then rasped around under the jaw anq caught in the ear which stretch out under the strain of Mr. Leatherbury's hanging weight until it looked like a gum blanket, when it let go and dropped the believer in horseshoes a howling, writhing wretch in a chaos of potted carnations and heliotropes.

Since the above was put in type a physician, who was called in to sew up a furrow in a gentleman's cheek and gather a few tacks in his ear, came to the office to beg us not to make any mention of the accident, as it led, he understood to some little domestic infelicity, which he feared might be aggravated. We would gladly comply with his request, but the printer who changes names has gone home, and the gossip editor says he wants a few household rows for his column anyhow; wherefore as Mr. Leatherbury says, 'Gesundheit.'

Don't Scold the Boys.

Parents too often indulge in a fruitless scolding of their boys, and in underrating everything they attempt to do. No boy is going to develop all his latent worth and power when he is constantly underrated belittled in his efforts to do something. Boys should be taught self-reliance and confidence, for these are the traits most needed when they become men; but these they must acquire after they have broken off from parental control, if indeed they ever are acquired. Better let a simulate a boy's confidence in himself, even at the risk of his becoming conceited and self-important, than dwarf his self-respect and confidence. Children are incapable of rendering double the service to parents that is usually preformed by them, only because they are made to believe that they are of no account, merely great awkward boobies, and don't know how to perform even the simplest acts. This is a great wrong to the child and also to the parents who loses years, of valuable service; and the child, who has wasted and frittered away its most susceptible period for instructions. Let your boys believe that they are capable of accomplishing almost anything, even to the pulling down of mountains or the uprootings of forests. Let them try it—it won't hurt them. As a general rule a boy's confidence in his own powers needs stimulating rather than weakening. If he becomes too self-reliant, let him alone; time will tone him and age demonstrate his fallibility. Boys need a great deal of grit, and they seldom have too much. If we always know the facts in the case we would never fill half our allotted mission. Self-reliance or self conceit, if you please, prompts many an arduous undertaking, oftentimes forces the most stubborn circumstances to yield to the irresistible force of pluck.

Never tell a boy he can't do it—he is to young, too weak, too much lacking in experience. It is not so; he can do it; he is old enough; he is as strong as a lion, and has had all the experience he ever will have till he gets more. Let him have all he wants—it will do him good. He will profit by it. Better throw a little experience in his way than not let him have enough. Let him undertake difficult enterprises, encourage him to grapple with robust schemes; it will be the making of him. It is a fatal error when parents do every thing themselves because they can do it better and quicker than a boy. Stand back, old man, and give the boy a chance. He needs experience, and the sooner he is taught the more service you get out of him. As a general rule boys are ready to try their hands at anything, even the most difficult undertakings. Give them a chance.

To a Cold-Footed Lady.

Madam, allow me to prescribe for you. I have had a long experience in the management of delicate women, and believe I can give you some important advice. For the present I prescribe only for your feet.

1st. Procure a quantity of woolen stockings—not such as you buy at the stores under the name of lambs' wool, that you can read a newspaper through—the kind that your Aunt Jerusha in the country knits for you, that will keep your feet dry and warm in spite of wind and weather.

2d. If you want to be really thorough, change them every morning, hanging, the fresh ones by the fire during the night.

3d. Procure thick calf-skin boots, double uppers and triple soles, and wear them from the first of October till the first of May. Make frequent applications of some good oil blacking.

4th. Avoid rubbers altogether, except a pair of large rubber boots, which may be worn for a little time through snowdrifts or a flood of water.

5th. Hold the bottoms of your feet in cold water a quarter of an inch deep, just before going to bed, two or three minutes, and then rub them hard with rough towels and your naked hand.

6th. Now, madam, go out freely in all weathers, and believe me, not only will your feet enjoy a good circulation, but as a consequence of the good circulation in the lower extremities, your head will be relieved of all its fullness and your heart of its palpitations. Your complexion will be greatly improved and your health made better in every respect.—Dio Lewis's Monthly.

Eulogizing Woman.

Marion Crawford in his new novel, "To Leeward," says: "Oh, woman, God, given helpmate of man, and noblest of God's gifts and of all created things—is there any man bold enough to say that he can make praises for you out of ink and paper that shall be worthy of rank as praise at all by the side of your good deeds! You, who bow your gentle beads to the burden, and think it sweet, out of the fullness of your own sweet sympathy—you, whose soft fingers have the strength to bind up broken limbs and rough torn wounds—you, who in love are more tender and faithful and long suffering than we, and who, even erring, err for the sake of the ever great heart that God has given you. 'You are only women, and you know no better? What greater, or higher, or nobler thing can I say of you, in all humbleness and truth than that you, are what you are, and truth than that you, are what you are, and that you know no better? What better things can any know that to bear pain bravely, to heal the wounded, to feel for all even for those who cannot feel for themselves, and to be tender and offered faint, lachrymose congratulations, with a fury of regret and jealousy in her heart, that the young lady of Boston fortunately knew nothing about. And Janet's mother frets summer and winter because Janet is an old maid; but nevertheless she frowns severely on any luckless man who offers a summer boarder's remuneration for her spare front room. It is not to let.

Pearls of Thought.

Flattery is a sort of bad money to which our vanity gives currency. There is no better excess in the world than the excess of gratitude.

Animals feed, men eat; but only men of intelligence know how to eat.

The truest mark of being born with great qualities is being born without envy.

Poverty destroys pride. It is difficult for an empty bag to stand upright.

Whatever you dislike in another person, take care to correct in yourself by the gentle reproof.

Fortune is ever seen accompanying industry, and is as often trundling in a wheelbarrow as lolling in a coach and six.

Letters of introduction are not always successful to get a man into society, any more than eloquent obituaries to get a man into heaven. A more glorious victory cannot be gained over another man than this, that when the injury began on his part, the kindness should begin on ours.

Words of praise are almost as necessary to warm a child into a genial life, as acts of kindness and affection. Judicious praise is to children what the sun is to flowers.

Generosity is the wealthiest feeling of the heart. Tell as you would and suffering if you could, and you will have nearly all the self-satisfaction that you would have had if you really had relieved distress.

Mr. J. S. McKenney, Petersburg, Va., says: "My wife has been entirely cured of weakness by using Brown's Iron Bitters."

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 23, 1883. 'Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrophulous and indolent letter will tell you what a marvelous story.

has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrophulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case. Yours truly, W. M. Phillips."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrophulous eruptions. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places. Whenever I moved, my sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the Sarsaparilla in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition all healed, and I feel perfectly well. I hereby testify to the fact that it is a good medicine, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1883. Yours truly, HIRSH PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrophulous and all Scrophulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Itchiness, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

THE STATE SCHOOLS.

We learn from good authority that there is a strong sentiment among not a few Democrats against turning out the present Board of Visitors of the University.

There is also to be found among not a few Democrats a similar feeling concerning the Agricultural and Mechanical College.

These opinions concerning the University and the Agricultural and Mechanical College are the opinions of fair-minded Democrats, and deserve respectful attention.

So, at last Bourbonism is becoming alarmed, and even the ultra State is calling a halt.

There was no more excuse for reorganizing the asylums than there is for reorganizing the Agricultural and Mechanical College, which an "active and unwavering Democrat" truthfully admits "is in a better condition than it has ever been."

There is no doubt but that the lunatic asylums have been better conducted under Readjuster management than they have for years.

Why is it that the Richmond Dispatch, the State and other Funder papers are so silent about the election in Norfolk last Thursday?

LOOK out for an empty State treasury. Honest Bourbonism has control. READJUSTER rule and prosperity. Bourbon-Funder rule and hard times.

Is the Debt settled? Ask the Bourbon-Funder Legislature if it has forced the Bondholders into a settlement? Ask these questions.

How will this do? 943 majority for Liberalism in Norfolk last Thursday; only 300 last November. Bourbonism may well be dismayed.

Is the Debt settled? Ask a Bourbon Legislature why it is that Wickham, and other leaders in that body are seeking to bring about a settlement between Virginia and West Virginia that will probably saddle ten millions of dollars more on this State?

THE DAY FOR 1884 WILL EMBRACE A MORNING AND EVENING EDITION.

The Morning Edition will be an eight page paper, cut and pasted, thus giving the most convenient form for perusal of a large newspaper, and enabling a better distribution of news and other valuable matter, while allowing to advertisers the most effective display possible.

The DAY will aim to be the very best vehicle of news and organ of opinion. Its resources for gathering news are thorough and it will not shut the accounts of matters of importance to a mere mention. It will gather its items from the whole world, and present them promptly and clearly, while it will give special attention to subjects of home interest.

The industrial resources of Maryland and the entire South will claim thorough and intelligent discussion, with a view to their healthful development. In its Editorial Department, THE DAY will expound Constitutional Democratic principles, promote the policy of the Democratic party, and foster the political interests of the entire people.

Price Two Cents. Served by Carrier at twelve cents per week. Mailed, postpaid, for Six Dollars a year or Fifty Cents a month in advance.

Local News.

Briefs. We are having real March weather in February.

Easter comes early this year, and we will have an early Spring.

Mrs. E. P. Pendleton, with her little son, is on a visit to her relatives in Marion.

Eggs are now selling in this market at fifteen cents a dozen, and persons can afford to eat them.

There has been a good deal of sickness in the jail, both with the State and United States prisoners.

Everybody was surprised this morning to find the ground covered with snow, and snow still falling. Truly, winter is upon us again.

We are informed that Mrs. S. M. Colley, wife of Mr. Luther Colley and mother of Charlie Colley, who a short time ago was a resident of our town, died suddenly at her home, at Chat ham Hill, on last Thursday night.

Mr. Wm. Blackstone Morgan, brother of Mr. V. S. Morgan, and for many years a resident of Marion, is now on a visit to his brother and old home. He resides in Ashe Co., North Carolina.

Sheriff Leonard started to the Western Lunatic Asylum at Staunton on Monday morning with two lunatics, Samuel Hogston and Thos. Turner. Mr. Wm. Henegar went with Mr. Leonard to help guard and care for the unfortunates.

Mr. Jno. A. Rowe, proprietor of the Wytheville Marble Works, paid our sanctum a call this morning. Mr. Rowe has taken a number of orders in this town and county, and they will be filled with the same care and excellent workmanship that has been placed on the numerous monuments and headstones that he has furnished to citizens here.

I will close out, at cost and carriage, my clothing, shawls, and all my other heavy goods, to make room for my spring purchase. GREAT BARGAINS FOR CASH WILL BE GIVEN. COME AND SEE. Respectfully, J. B. RHEA. Jan. 15th-18-22m.

Thanks. We are requested by the sons and daughters of Thomas M. Rider dead, to return their thanks to the friends and neighbors who have shown so much sympathy for them in their recent bereavement, and to say that their gratitude shall be as long as life.

A $20 Bible Prize. The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for March, among which is the following:

We will give $20,000 to the person telling us which is the middle verse of the Gospel of St. Matthew, as recorded in the New Testament Scriptures (not the New Revision), by March, 10th, 1884. Should two or more correct answers be received, the Reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner March 15th, 1884. Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the April Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be published, and in which several more valuable rewards will be offered. Address RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Pa.

Meeting to Elect Delegates. Pursuant to a call for a State Convention to be held at Richmond on the 23rd day of April 1884, made by the State Committees of the Readjuster and Republican parties, notice is hereby given to the Readjusters and Republicans of Smyth to assemble in the court-house on Monday, the 17th day of March 1884, at 12 M. to select delegates from the county to the said State Convention. Smyth will be entitled to 7 delegates and 3 alternates.

Respectfully, GEO. W. HUBBLE, Chairman Readjuster party. C. F. LINCOLN, Chairman Republican party.

Death of Mayor Thomas M. Rider.

Our community was startled Tuesday afternoon by learning of the unexpected death of Thomas M. Rider Esq., Mayor of the town of Marion. He had been complaining for several days, but no one expected such a sudden death, or that he was even in danger. Mr. Rider was born in Pennsylvania, about six miles from Harrisburg, in the year 1812. When he was ten years old his father moved to Wythe county in this State. Soon after Mr. Rider reached manhood he went to Giles Co. to live, where he resided for some thirty or forty years. He moved to Marion in 1858, since which time he has been a resident of our town. He has been three times elected Mayor of the town, had filled two full terms as Mayor and had nearly filled the third. His conduct of the responsible position of Mayor has given general satisfaction to our citizens. Mr. Rider was a kind hearted, generous person, and a man of excellent mind. Last year he connected himself with the Methodist church at this place. Funeral services were held at the Methodist church yesterday evening over the remains by Rev. J. L. M. French, pastor. The remains were then taken to Round-hill Cemetery for interment, and the members of the town council and Record acting as pall bearers, and followed by many relatives and friends of the deceased.

Council Meeting.

At a call meeting of the Town Council of Marion, held at the council room, February 27th, 1884, present J. M. Jones, Vice-Mayor, in the chair, and councilmen Lincoln, Gregory, Neighbors, and Pendleton. The object of the meeting was for the purpose of giving expression of condolence relative to the death of Mr. Thomas M. Rider, Mayor of the town, who died at his residence on the 26th inst., at 4:30 o'clock, p. m. aged 72 years, 1 month and 4 days. Mr. Pendleton, submitted the following preamble and resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove by death, the presiding officer of our body, Thos. M. Rider, mayor of the town:

Resolved, That we, bowing in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, deeply regret the death of our Mayor, Thos. M. Rider, and bear testimony to his faithfulness as such officer.

2nd. That we tender to the family of the deceased our heartfelt sympathies in their sad bereavement, and commend them to the mercy of Him who doeth all things well.

3rd. That we as a body attend his funeral this evening and act as pall-bearers.

4th. That as a token of respect and esteem for the deceased we wear the usual badge of mourning for 30 days.

5th. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the family of the deceased, and to the papers of the town for publication.

J. H. FRANCIS, Recorder.

Relief for the Suffering.

The great floods in the Ohio River, and recent hard winter through the South, has caused an immense amount of suffering and the cry of relief is going all over the world. Hart's Great Relief is not recommended to relieve hunger, but for all kinds of pain this great remedy is still at the head.

The Apportionment Bill.

We published last week the Apportionment bill passed by the Legislature, and this week we propose to enter our indignant protest against the bill. We consider it unjust, ungenerous, unfair, and partial. It looks to us as if it was passed simply to make districts for certain men and to keep other men out of them. But it is just such a bill as we might expect from the present Legislature, which we think, has shown an ingenuity in blundering and a talent for making mistakes. This restricting the State has put counties in the same district which have nothing in common—e.g., Cumberland and Highland, and which are separated even by broad rivers, whose people have nothing in common, and, if anything, are antagonistic. In calmly reading the bill it seems to us plainly manifest that it was framed and passed to benefit a few without regarding the good of the State at large, and we neither favor nor endorse it.—Farmville Journal.

Our Bourbon friend is too late, but he is right. The bill as passed was the work of JOHN S. BARBOUR; it is claimed, who knows little of the wants and sympathies of our people; but the Bourbons in the Assembly could never have agreed upon a bill, and the Boss was the proper party to settle the business. Bourbonism has no use for South-side Virginia.—Whig.

Wythe County Locals.

Judge A. S. Fulton who has been seriously indisposed is how much better.

Mr. D. A. Rich, Deputy Sheriff of Wythe, who has been much indisposed for some weeks, is going about again.

Giles County has held a public meeting and declared in favor of Wytheville as the place for locating the United States C. H.

Mr. Wm. H. Spiller has gone east to purchase his spring stock of goods. He will place them in his handsome new store house.

Drs. Sayers and Bramlett went to Smyth County on last Monday, where they performed an important surgical operation successfully.

Capt. Jno. T. Sayers has sold his fine farm, one mile west of Max Meadows to Mr. Randal McGavock for the sum of $18,500. Capt. Sayers is now offering his residence in Wytheville for sale.

Mr. James A. Rider, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Wythe, has purchased the "Round House," at the west end of Wytheville, from Mr. Geo. F. Crush. Mr. Rider sold his farm on Cripple Creek, he bought some months ago of Dr. J. M. Painter, to Mr. Emory Keesling, of Smyth county.

The large building which is being erected by Maj. Joseph C. Sexton on Main street is rapidly approaching completion, and will be occupied by Mr. Geo. S. Sexton as an agricultural implement store. Mr. Sexton intends to run the largest business of the kind that will be found west of Lynchburg in this State.

Last Friday Dave Johnson, a colored man in the employ of Col. Sayers, was badly hurt by a mule kicking him about the stomach. He was driving a team to the farm of Col. Sayers on Cripple Creek, and was trying to dismount from the mule. His foot became entangled and he fell under the mule, when mule like began its ugly work of kicking. Dave is now all right.

Southwest Virginia Kicks.

Morrison's proposition in the House of Representatives a few days since to place Iron ores on the free list—that is to remove the tariff upon the foreign ores—necessarily and very naturally creates antipathy to the author of it, and absolute and positive antagonism to the measure. We trust we may be pardoned for going somewhat into details, that we may fairly present the effect of such legislation to Virginia as a whole, & Southwest Virginia in particular. It must be remembered that Southwest Virginia is now shipping to Pennsylvania iron ore at a profit of about 62 cents per ton as an average margin. Morrison, in the interest of Pennsylvania, would remove the tariff on iron ore, and let in foreign ore, that the Pennsylvania furnaces might be furnished raw material cheaper than they now procure it from Southwest Virginia and the Shenandoah Valley. Volcanic eruptions blowing the ores into the Dead Sea, would not be more disastrous to the Virginia belts of iron ore. Virginia furnaces, in prospect, would crumble to the surface of the earth, and these ruins would remain the mementoes of Morrison's colossal absurdities. The result of such legislation can scarcely be computed; for, if it obtains, the extension arms of the pro-life leaders of the Norfolk and Western railroad now thrusting into rich deposits of ore, would be palsied. The contemplated furnaces at "Palaski City," and those in operation at Roanoke, would be chilled with the cold, icy hands of selfish politicians, if, indeed, the branch roads of the great Norfolk and Western railroad were not to moulder into decay, and disintegration of the best business adventures would result. A general stagnation needs must follow, and a paralysis of all commercial transactions would be the hurtful influence of this leprous legislation by a scheming politician.

Let no Democracy attach to such a damning curse. If the Democrats of Virginia do not smother deep in a sea of forgetfulness such a measure, they deserve annihilation from the body politic, and should be branded "mos-backs," idiots of the weakest type. The Bulletin will ever be found giving a helping hand to crush all such dangerous legislation. If Cabell, Tucker and Barbour do not now do their duty; not by their votes only, but by ingenuity, influence and labor, let the curse rest upon them. Your country watch you. Gentlemen, crush Morrison and his measure out of existence.—New River Bulletin.

Eastern Shore Herald, February 22: Mrs. Bettie C. Bell, a most estimable lady, died at her residence in Drummondtown on Wednesday two weeks ago, having been an invalid for many years. She was a sister of D. W. R. Parramore and Judge Thomas C. Parramore and had been twice married, her first husband being William P. Bayly and her second Lorenzo D. Bell, the latter of whom was for a time, law-partner of Henry A. Wise.

T. Keith, a well known and worthy citizen of Culpeper county, died at his residence near Bixeville on Sunday last.

Danville Investigation.

HON. JNO. S. WISE ON THE WITNESS STAND.

Plan of the Bourbons to Raise the Race Issue—Cutting it up into Given a Bourbon Interrogator.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—In the committee room on Privileges and Elections this morning, Senator Sherman called attention to the paragraph in the Richmond State to the effect that the "colored people congregated about the room, but Sherman's orders were stringent not to admit any who could not show a sermon." Mr. Sherman said he wished to say, what was apparent to all who had been present, that this statement was an error; the only instructions were to admit first comers, but only in such numbers as could conveniently be accommodated in the room.

Senator Vance rejoined that Mr. Sherman's statement was in accordance with his understanding, and that the room had been uncomfortably full most of the time.

Congressman John S. Wise was the first witness. He stated the issues of the Virginia campaign, beginning with that of 1881. The true issues were the public debt and Elemenary Institutions of the State. The Funder party sought to perpetuate the race issue, and the Readjusters would have been fools to have sought to keep alive the race issue, depending as they did upon the colored vote in part for success. He filed the Richmond State of June 16th, 1881, as a specimen of the issue the Funder sought to make. He also filed a circular which he picked up in Carroll county, having but sixty-three voters against 2,600 whites. It set forth that the whites who voted for the Readjuster ticket voted for repudiation, mixed schools, etc. He filed the speech of ex-Senator Johnston, of Virginia, delivered in Newbern in 1881; Governor Cameron had said they would carry the war into Africa, and Johnston replied he would carry Africa into the war. He filed an editorial from the Norfolk Landmark.

Mr. Vance entered his protest against a further progress of the course of the investigation, as Congressman Wise was making a party speech.

Judge Lapham said if the papers were to illustrate the condition of affairs they were proper.

Wise said he proposed to show that the whites had brought on the affair at Danville for political purposes, having despaired otherwise to win their contest. Continuing, Mr. Wise submitted further papers to show that the Funder said that their opponents were seeking to make the negroes social equals of the whites. Cameron, the Readjuster candidate for Governor, was elected by a majority of white votes, and Governor Cameron in his message repudiated the idea of mixed schools. In the next canvass in which Mr. Massey and witness were opposing candidates at large for Congress, some effort was made by the Funder to keep alive the race issue, and in the last campaign the witness asserted that representative "Bourbons" had stated in his presence repeatedly that until they could they could not hope to win their contest. He submitted the publication in support of these statements.

They had sought to make the race issue prominent in the canvass of 1881. It was not so prominent in the canvass of 1882, but it was revived in 1883. Then Governor Cameron appointed two colored men members of the School Board of Richmond. The school children numbered 7,500 whites and 6,000 colored. This action was seized upon as a pretext for reviving the race issue. He submitted publications in support of the statement. From the Danville Times he read: "The Mahoneys band the negroes together, and we can only conquer by uniting the whites against them."

Senator Sherman asked if the Funder were inspired by the objections to the persons of the race. Witness said "it was an objection to the race, as the men appointed were unobjectionable. Coming then to the last election for the Legislature, he said "the Bourbons were, by a large majority, in favor of incorporating the color line in their platform." He read and submitted editorials in support of this statement. "Two Democrats of Lynchburg," witness believed, "induced the convention not to incorporate the color line in their written platform." In the canvass the witness had preserved notes of his discussions with his opponents. He asserted that from the beginning to the end they had sought not to win the colored votes, but to make the coalition party so odious to the ignorant whites as to make them band together against it. He submitted documents and pictures used as campaign documents. One of the latter displayed a black school teacher whipping a white scholar.

When witness went to Danville to speak the local papers advised the white men to stay away, as Danville and Pittsylvania were the most lawless communities in Virginia. Pittsylvania county and the adjoining county in North Carolina were alike in this. Senator Vance: "That's a Republican county by a large majority, sir." Witness: "Yes, sir, and whenever there is a Republican majority there will be Bourbon shot guns."

Senator Vance: "There will be a large number of convictions to the penitentiary."

Witness: "And crowds will go down before the mouths of Bourbon's shot guns."

Senator Vance: "I don't know that there is any necessity for you to assault North Carolina here sir."

Witness: "I allude to those matters with regret."

Witness described crimes which he said had been committed in and about Danville. He regarded the attempt to attribute the state of excitement preceding the riot to Sims' speech as subterfuge. The excitement was due to inflammatory publications and the efforts which he had described.

Senator Sherman asked if the witness wished to say anything about the cause of the riot.

Witness said that "when he went to Danville Mr. Jennings, a Readjuster, called on him and said he had been waited upon by the Democrats and threatened with ruin in his business if he did not withdraw. Jennings was compelled to join the Democrats."

Witness submitted advertisements of "hardware" dealers, from whom the rioters of November 3d obtained their arms. In these advertisements guns, pistols and ammunition were made to appear more prominently than anything else.

During the cross examination by Mr. Vance, several sharp passages at arms occurred.

Mr. Wise said to Mr. Vance: "When I first knew you, thirty years ago, you belonged to the K. N. (know nothing) party; now you belong to the N. K. (negro killing) party."

Mr. Vance retorted: "When I first knew you, you were a secession Democrat; now you are a—"

Wise: "Hardly! I was only nine years of age and could not have been much of a secessionist."

Senator Vance: "Oh, well! when a man pleads the infancy act, I have nothing more to say."

A little later Mr. Wise said the attitudes of men had changed. You (to Senator Vance) come up to teach us Democracy and debt paying when you had repudiated your own debts and had never been a Democrat.

Mr. Vance admitted having been a know-nothing, but defended himself as against the charge of ever being a repudiator. The man who said he had ever advocated repudiation stated that which was untrue.

Mr. Wise said that he hoped that Gov. Vance did not intend that to be an insult.

Senator Vance said that he did not wish merely to state the fact in reply to some assertions personal to himself.

Witness avowed his unalterable determination to continue war upon the Bourbon party. He admitted that the blacks united in a proportion of about 90 per cent, on one side, while the whites were nearly equally divided. The fair appeals by the whites to unite their own kind were justifiable, but they had resorted to warlike and outrageous methods. Witness knew nothing of the ostracism of the colored Democrats by their Readjuster race fellows. The Danville Democrats had offered to protect the colored Democratic voters, but the offer was likened to that of a hawk to chickens, not to hurt them if they would come out.

Witness described the operation of the poll tax law which he said was gotten up to defraud colored men of their votes. He admitted that Readjuster speakers had been intemperate in their language, but justified it as being in reply to Bourbon abuse. He knew of no money being sent from Washington to Virginia. Nor did he know of any assessment being levied upon by office holders during the last campaign.

The facts of the Danville riot had been exaggerated, but its outcropping had not. It had been represented by whites as a negro uprising, and whites had been appealed to assist their fellows in danger with their votes. This had aided to secure the Democratic victory.

In reply to Sherman witness said that the present legislature had taken steps to steal the State for all time by changing the election law.

Fifteen Readjuster members of the Legislature had been ejected and some of their successors had not even made a contest.

We understand that the Bourbons of the General Assembly are circulating a petition asking for an extra session of that body. Such a session can only be secured by the consent of ninety-four members of the General Assembly, which is two-thirds of that body. Should that number of members call for an extra session no time for holding the session can be designated under the Constitution by the members wishing such session, and in view of the fact that three months have been thrown away, and an enormous expense to the taxpayers, in petty, spiteful and revolutionary legislation, it is not possible that any respectable proportion of the people would think of subjecting themselves to an additional expense. Certainly no Readjuster member of the General Assembly will ask for an extra session. They know too well the wishes of the people and have too much respect for the equities of the case to consider for a moment such a proposition.

Bourbonism, run mad with temporary power over the Treasury of the State, has preyed upon the property of the people and neglected the business of the State. If it can now realize that fact, let the session be extended, and let the Bourbon members make a partial reparation for their wrongs. The Readjuster members will see to it that not another cent is taken from the people to repair the wrongs committed against an outraged people. Beware!—Whig.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

The copartnership heretofore existing between G. Goodell and J. M. Rice is this day dissolved by mutual consent. The notes and accounts are left in the hands of G. G. Goodell for collection. Who will also settle the debts of the firm. G. G. GOODELL, J. M. RICE. The business will be continued by Goodell & Britton at the same old stand, Dec. 31st, 1883-4t.

Wise people are always looking out for chances to increase their earnings, and in time become wealthy; those who do not improve their opportunities remain in poverty. We offer a great chance to make money. We want many young women, boys and girls to work for us in our own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Experience not furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly. You can devote your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed, sent free. Address: STANTON & Co., Portland, Maine, Feb. 22-7y.

Electric Light on Railway Cars in England.

After more than a fortnight's working without the slightest hitch of any kind, the experiment of the direct electric lighting of one of the District Railway trains between Kensington and Putney may, it is stated, be fairly looked upon as a distinct success. The fitting of the Putney train is of a rather heterogeneous character, being a collection of plant procurable without special manufacture, the whole consisting of a launch boiler, a small Willan's three-cylinder steam engine, running at 500 revolutions, and driving direct off its own shaft, a Siemens' shunt wound dynamo supplying current for fifty Swan twenty candle power incandescent lights. In addition there are two water-tanks and a coal-box, the whole being placed in a separate van, and this tentative arrangement has this advantage—that the removal of the van to other lines more extended trials can be made on longer trains, as in the present case only thirty of the lamps are employed for the actual service of the train, the remaining twenty being kept lighted in the van itself. The effect on the train is very brilliant, although the arrangements are not what are ultimately proposed—namely, to place a small high speed engine and the dynamo on the tender and take steam from the locomotive itself, and so dispense with the attendant now required in the special van.

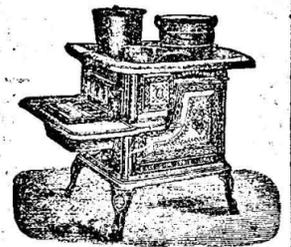

Poison by Wild Parsnip.

A distressing case of poisoning occurred at Danville, Pa., on Friday, by which two pupils of St. Hubert's Catholic Parochial School—Gertie Lechner and John Spering, both nine years old—lost their lives. Having been dismissed at noon, in company with another scholar, they proceeded home along the banks of the Frazer Run. On their way they found a species of wild parsnip, which they dug up and proceeded to eat. Shortly after reaching home the girl complained of strange feelings in her head, and almost immediately expired. The boy carried his parsnip home, and, showing it to his mother, proceeded to eat it. Within five minutes he complained of pains in the stomach, and was soon afterward found in an outbuilding insensible and in convulsions. Medical aid was summoned, but life had fled. His sister took a piece, just to taste it, and is now lying dangerously ill.
