SELWYN SEAFORD'S WARD.

Mr. Seaford was opening his morning mail. The letter-tray was always well filled, for Mr. Selwyn Seaford was one of those pleasant, good-looking, easy-tempered bachelors who have, as the saying goes, "hosts of friends."

Perfumed invitations to lawn-tennis, and archery teas, confidential little notes from young ladies who were in despair about masquerade costumes; commissions from pretty young matrons regarding zephyr worsted and Languedoc lace; long letters from chamois-shooting friends among the Bavarian Alps, and chatty epistles from attaches at Paris and Vienna—this was what formed the staple of his correspondence. And at the very bottom lay a black-edged missive, bearing the stamp of "Long Branch."

Slowly Mr. Seaford broke the seal—slowly he read it over.

"So poor Fulton is dead at last," was his first thought. "But, by Jove! it's rather cool of him to leave me his daughter to educate and bring up seeing that we are neither relations nor connections. It is true that he was my college friend; but there were plenty of others with whom he was far more intimate. A girl—here in my bachelor den! What on earth was poor Fulton thinking of?"

The first idea was that he would entirely adjure the bequest; the second, a superstitious feeling that he could not.

"Pshaw!" said Selwyn Seaford, tugging fiercely at his brown, silk-soft moustache, "Governments, muscledons, chocolate caramels—all that sort of thing. It will turn my quiet home into a regular carnival; but I don't see that there's any evading it."

He got up and pushed his letters away, and walked through the house, surveying the various apartments.

"Yes," he mused, "by giving up my cabinet-room and changing my library, I can manage to spare quite a respectable suit of apartments. Of course, I shall have to invite old Aunt Balestierre to come and live with me, to play propriety. It will be the old story of ward and guardian over again. She will probably fall in love with me, or I with her, and there'll be the deuce and all to pay. Why on earth couldn't Fulton have lived long enough to bring up his own daughter?"

But Selwyn Seaford was thoroughly conscientious, and once convinced that it was his duty to receive Diana Fulton into his house, he lost no time in telegraphing to Aunt Balestierre, preparing the pretty suit of rooms, and hastening down to Long Branch.

"Yes," the polite-hotel clerk told him, "Miss Fulton was on the beach—she spent most of her time there." ("Sentimental, I suppose," thought Seaford, with a grin)—"with her maid." ("Oh, a maid into the bargain—a French flirt, to carry notes on the sly and foster all kinds of intrigues," inwardly groaned our hero.) "Would the gentleman step that way, or should he, the clerk, send a porter down?"

Mr. Seaford preferred to walk down himself—and presently he found himself standing on the shores of the sounding sea, waiting for the conclusion of a brisk but scientific encounter between a little girl of six and her nurse, before he should inquire his way to the Point Breeze sands.

The little girl was small, but desperate. She writhed herself like a serpent about her attendant's ankles, bit, scratched, and finally settled matters by flinging a handful of sand into the nurse's eyes.

"There!" said she, panting, lovely and venomous. "Now will you let me alone?"

"Well, I never!" sputtered the "And your new silk stockings all salt water, and your elegant black satin ruined—clean ruined, miss?"

"I don't care!" screamed the child. "I don't! I don't! I don't! I'll run away and drown myself, so there, now!"

"Come back, Miss Di, there's a jewel," coaxed the stout Missian, whipping the sand out of her blunt features. "Come back, and—"

But here Mr. Seaford stepped forward.

"My good woman," said he, "will you tell me what that child's name? Fulton, Miss Dina Fulton? Indeed?"

And this little, black-browed vixen with the mane of tangled, jetty hair, the slim, serpent-like figure, the flushed, angry face, was the queenly orphan he had pictured as a young lady just ready to be launched into society.

Involuntarily his heart gave a great throb of relief.

"Come here, you little gipsy!" said he, "or I will whistle to the biggest shark off the coast to come and eat you up?"

He held out his hand with a smile. Gradually the frown faded out from the olive forehead, and without hesitation the small Diana accepted his overtures.

"Oh, I know!" said she. "You're old Bachelor Seaford!"

"Laws, miss!" gasped the scandalized maid.

"Exactly," said Mr. Seaford, gravely.

"Then it's all right," said Diana. "Papa said you would take care of me. Couldn't we go on to the Iron Pier and see the Punch-and-Judy show now?"

Aunt Balestierre could hardly believe the testimony of her double eye-glasses when Miss Diana skipped into the room with a doll in one hand and a package of candies in the other.

"I do declare," said the enfant terrible, "here's an old lady who is just like the ugly old witch in my fairy-book! Is she your grandmother, Mr. Seaford?"

"Grandmother?" gasped Aunt Balestierre.

But she was a sensible old soul, and recognized the truth of Di's description.

At the end of the first week, however, Di was found to have wrought a terrible devastation. The precise butler gave warning, the housekeeper shed tears over her pillaged preserve-closet, the old Sevres china had been used for a dool's tea-set, and windows and a bisque statuette of Psyche were broken, and a bottle of ink had been upset on the pale-blue moquette carpet of the drawing-room.

"What shall we do?" cried Aunt Balestierre, in dismay.

Mr. Seaford smiled. The elf amused him, after her quaint, stormy fashion.

"She is only a child," said he.

"But such a child!" said Aunt Balestierre.

"Let her stay here," said Mr. Seaford. "She'll improve with age."

So Diana Fulton stayed, and queneed it over the little household, apparently quite unaware that her slender inheritance was insufficient to pay a little of her daily expenses. The boundless possibilities of youth were hers—the sunshine of a cheerful spirit, and a quick imagination—and she seemed perfectly happy where she was. Affectionate, impetuous, frank and willful, even Aunt Balestierre could not but be fond of her, after a little.

And then, just as (to use Diana's own words) "they were all so happy together," came the news of an insurrection among Selwyn Seaford's West India coffee plantation, and his presence was required immediately on the spot.

"I shall probably return in three months," he said. "Or four, at the latest."

"Oh, Mr. Seaford!" sobbed Diana, clinging around him, "can't I go, too—I and Aunt Balestierre?"

age; but he—even the years and months seemed to have a special spite against him!

"Yes," said Aunt Balestierre, looking triumphantly at Di, "she's quite a woman now. And she has had two offers—two good offers, mind, Selwyn! I was quite vexed at her for refusing young Poole, who had a quarter of a million of his own."

"How is this, little girl?" asked Mr. Seaford.

"I didn't care for him," said Diana, simply.

"But you must marry sometime," urged Mrs. Balestierre, piteously.

"I don't see the necessity of it," retorted the girl.

Mr. Seaford said nothing just then, but he spoke to Diana, in his capacity of guardian, a few days afterward.

"My dear child," said he, gently, "you are a young lady now, and you have your future to look to. I should like to see you settled in a home of your own before I die, and—"

"Oh, Mr. Seaford," passionately interrupted Diana, "don't talk so!"

He smiled sadly.

"In fact, my dear," said he, "you are now exactly what I fancied you to be, twelve years ago, when first I heard that your poor father was gone. I was sitting, I remember, in this very room, opening my letters, and I imagined you to be a tall young woman, with whom I should fall in love—at this, Di laughed and blushed exquisitely—"or who might perhaps, fall in love with me. You see, my pet, I was twelve years younger then; and I am reluctantly compelled to acknowledge to myself that all that remains to me is to play the part of the old father on the stage, and deliver you over to some handsome young lover's care."

He spoke lightly, but there was an undertone of deep sadness in his voice.

Diana came and perched herself on the arm of the pillowed chair in which he was reclining.

"But I don't want any handsome young lover," said she. "Oh, Mr. Seaford—dear guardy, as I used to call you—can't the old times come back again?"

"Ah, little Di," he said mournfully, "old times never do come back."

"But they must—but they shall!" cried the girl, with energy. "Now shut your eyes—now fancy yourself opening your letters. Could you fall in love with me, guardy?" holding her hand playfully over his eyes.

"Because—because the last half of your prediction has come true. I have fallen in love with you. There—now I have told it all!"

And then Diana slipped to her knees on the floor, and hid her burning face on his arms, as he sat there among the pillows.

What did Selwyn Seaford answer? He could answer nothing just at first. He was like the pearl-seeker, who, coming toilsomely home after a hopeless day of failures, suddenly discovers a pure pearl lying at his feet, his own, and his only.

"Di," said he, faintly, "I am old enough to be your father."

"You are just old enough to be my husband," she saucily retorted.

"And I have but half of what little fortune I originally possessed."

"In my eyes," said Diana, gravely, "you are a rich man; but tell me, first, one thing—"

"Well?"

The next morning it was the same way. He had to make his own bed and sweep out. His socks were dirty and his arm would run through a hole in his sleeve. So he, was dissatisfied.

The next night, when he went to sleep, the Creator punished him by making one of his ribs into a woman—a great misfortune for the race.

This is a very interesting subject. Pursuit in this case is said to be sweeter than possession.

After Eve got acquainted with her mate she vowed that all the men in the world were not worth Adam. Goliah was a man.

He was bigger than old Grant, but he couldn't stand as many slings. A fop is a male who is ashamed of his sex, and attempts to conceal the fact that he is a man.

Concealment in such cases is attended with but little trouble. It is only necessary to part the hair in the middle.

The family man resembles the oyster on the half shell.

The shell is known at home—the soft side abroad.

Some men carry this resemblance in their faces. A great many men have countenances like oysters.

Job is said to have been a very patient man.

He had boils all over him. Men now boil all over themselves when the preacher reaches "thirteen" on a hot summer day, and never thinks of the grandeur of Job's example.

divert their attention from it, but one of them asked:

"What room is that up there?"

"The garret," was the reply.

"He may be there—show the way."

"You see the way," returned the young lady, "I do not wish to go up there in the dust; it would soil my dress."

"You go before, then," said the trooper to a negro girl who had been made to carry about a lighted candle, for night had come now. The girl laughed and said: "There was nobody up there," but at the the order went up stairs to the garret, followed by the troopers. The decisive moment had come. S—heard the trampy feet and cocked both his pistols. The light streamed into the garret, looking over the edge of his plank he saw the garret filled with troopers. All seemed over and his discovery certain; he was about to spring down and fire when the men growled: "Hell, there's nothing here," and went down the stairs again. The servant girl had saved him by a ruse. She had taken her stand directly beneath the broad plank upon which S—was extended, and the deep shadow had concealed him. To this ruse he doubtless owed his life. An hour afterwards the Federal detachment left the house in extreme ill-humor, and before morning S—was miles away from the dangerous locality where he had overheard his sentence of death. WILLIAM C. PENDLETON, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER, 17, 1881.

HONAKER'S majority in Smyth and Bland is 809.

WYTHE county did well in returning Col. Sayers to the House of Delegates.

We are not going to pack the Court of Appeals, we are just going to unpack it.

No danger now of an increase of taxation. The debt will be settled at twenty millions.

DANIEL only got thirty votes in Buchanan county. Three hundred and fifty were polled.

BAILEY'S majority over Fudge in Washington and Smyth is 1193. A very nice little majority.

SIX thousand majority, and the rise. That will do very well for the 9th, the great white district of the State.

THE Funder's give various excuses for their defeat. The people were against them, especially the foul methods they employed.

FREE schools are now assured as a permanent blessing; and a free ballot will preserve our Republican institutions.

You don't hear anything more about negro supremacy since the Readjusters won. It was a false cry and false alarm.

It is stated that little Dickenson county only polled 70 votes for DANIEL. There is not a colored voter in the county.

DON'T trouble yourself Mr. Funder! The debt question will be settled, and in a way that will give most perfect satisfaction to the people.

WE regret very much the defeat of Hon. Wm. A. French for the House of Delegates from Giles and Pulaski. He made a good fight in counties that were hopelessly Funder.

CAPT. JNO. S. WISE is prominently spoken of in connection with President Arthur's new Cabinet. John is big enough for any position.

VIRGINIA has a bright future before her. Instead of being disgraced and ruined by Readjuster rule, she will grow in prosperity and national power and reputation.

It is estimated that John Daniel's friends lost several hundred thousand dollars betting on him in the recent election. It won't do to bet on an unlucky horse.

SUCCESS has not resulted in bitter or proscriptive feeling in the hearts of Readjusters. We doubt if the Funder would have been as amiable and generous if they had succeeded. The Readjusters do not propose to carry politics into social and business relations.

THERE are a number of gentlemen who voted the Funder ticket at the recent election who now say that if the Readjusters settle the debt they will join hands with them in the future. Napoleon said: "Nothing succeeds like success." We will settle the debt, and many who were dragged into a support of the Funder ticket will see that they were misled.

THE Lynchburg Virginian says that "just as soon as it gets through exposing the conduct of the Mahone party in the recent election . . . we shall turn our attention to the material interests of the Commonwealth." We are glad that it is going to try to do something good, even at this late day; and if it undertakes to explain the evil conduct of the Funding party there will be enough to engage its attention for years.

THE 9th district sends a splendid delegation to the next General Assembly. Lee sends Slomp, a true and tried Readjuster. Scott sends Taylor just as true. Wise and Buchanan Chase. Russell the old veteran Dickenson, Tazewell the staunch Witten, Washington Fowler and Kelly, among the truest friends of our cause, Smyth and Bland Honaker, gallant and true, Wythe, the zealous Sayers, Montgomery, the intouching Taylor, and Roanoke and Craig Judge Board, a man of excellent capacity and devoted friend of Readjustment. In the Senate we will have Maj. H. C. Wood, of Scott, Lee and Wise, who has always stood firm, Bailey, of Washington, who will do, Barnes, of Tazewell, a man solid and square, Newberry, of Bland, the old war horse of Readjustment, and Eskridge, who has stood up in many battles with us. The 9th has a delegation to be proud of. Even Mr. Lybrook, the "Lone Star" from Giles and Pulaski is a man of character and intelligence.

THE STATE VOTE.

The Majority in Each County and City.

Cameron's Total Majority in the State, 11,394.

The following table is as accurate as the returns so far received enable us to make. In some few cases the majorities are estimated, and will be corrected hereafter; but the table is substantially accurate, and it will be found that its figures will not vary greatly from the official count.

Table with columns for Counties, Cities and Towns, and Votes. Includes entries for Accomack, Albemarle, Alleghany, and others, totaling 28,395 for Cameron's majority.

Union and Confedercate.

The Virginia forces we found to be commanded by the celebrated Fitzhugh Lee, a nephew of Gen. R. E. Lee, every inch a soldier and an accomplished gentleman. We were introduced to Gen. Lee by Col. A. T. McKeynolds, of Grand Rapids, who informed the renowned Southerner that the writer was an original Abolitionist. In reply, Gen. Lee said: "I am now as much an Abolitionist as Mr. Henderson. I delivered the Abolition oration at the foot of Banker Hill monument a year after the war was over." I inquired of him what he thought of our Michigan cavalrymen in the Potomac army. He said that they were a gallant body of men and fought bravely. He regretted Gen. Custer's death. He considered him one of the bravest men that ever lived. He had a letter from him a few days before his death and answered it, but Gen. Lee tearfully regretted that Custer never received it. Gen. Lee makes a fine appearance on horseback, and just before our camp broke he made a fraternal call upon the Michigan boys by whom he was well received and cheered. Governor Jerome introduced him to all the members of his staff. Speaking of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee he related this anecdote to me: He met at Yorktown his old cavalry instructor at West Point, Gen. Delos B. Sackett, who said to Lee: "Though you were against me, you did credit to your teaching." Gen. Lee replied: "I was Custer's cavalry instructor. He did credit to my teaching. An even stand off." Lee was Custer's cavalry teacher at West Point before the war—Allegany (Mich.) Journal correspondent.

The season's entertainments have been notably free from annoyance by coughing. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup does this. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Guiteau's Trial.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—A low ceiling, large-sized square room, in the eastern wing of the City Hall, well lighted by three wide windows, in the northern and southern wall, is the court room of the District Supreme Court. The criminal term in which the trial of Chas. J. Guiteau, for the murder of the late President Garfield, opened to-day. At the eastern end of the room is a platform containing the judges seat with the clerk's desk right below it. The table which usually occupies the greater part of the space allotted to the bar has been removed, and instead of it, several smaller tables have been arranged for the accommodation of counsel and reporters. In the western half of the room a platform has been raised, on which are arranged some hundred chairs for the use of spectators. The seats assigned to the jury occupy a section of the room in the northeastern end. There is hardly any noticeable excitement outside of the building, and no very great pressure to obtain admission to the court room. As soon as the public door was opened the spectators seats were immediately filled, for the most part with a rather roughly dressed set of young men, including many who would come under the designation of "roughs," "tramps" and "cranks." Some half dozen ladies got sandwiched in among the crowd. In the meantime the lawyers in the case had got into their seats. The District Attorney, Judge Porter, of New York, and Walter D. Davidge, of Washington, for the prosecution, and Mr. Scoville and Leigh Robinson, for the defence. Mrs. Scoville occupied a seat close to her husband, having her brother John on one side, and her brother, the prisoner on the other. At 10 o'clock Judge Walter S. Cox entered the court room, and the court was declared formally opened by the cryer in the old Norman form. Immediately thereafter the prisoner was brought into the court-room by the marshal and his deputies. He looked in much better condition, physically and otherwise, than when he last appeared in the same room to plead to the indictment. Still he had the same restless furtive expression as of a hunted wolf, which characterized him before. He was at once relieved of his handcuffs, and took his seat beside his sister. One of his first movements was to thrust his hands into one of his pockets and half take out a roll of paper. Mr. Scoville, however, in dumb play, ordered him to put it back, and he did so. Then the District Attorney rose and declared the readiness of the prosecution to proceed with the case. Mr. Robinson arose to make his plea for still more time to prepare for the defence, which appeared not to meet the approval of Guiteau. All the time that Robinson was speaking Guiteau was carrying on what appeared to be a remonstrance with Scoville, who was apparently trying to quiet and suppress him. No sooner had Robinson taken his seat than the prisoner rose, and in an excited manner addressed the court, and stated he wished to be heard. In vain Mr. Scoville endeavored to make him resume his seat, and remain quiet, he was irrepressible, and in a nervous, but in a pretty distinct manner he proceeded with his speech as follows: "I was not aware that my counsel, Mr. Robinson, intended this morning to make an application for postponement, and I desire to be heard in my own behalf in this matter. At the very threshold of the case I am charged with murderous attempt, and I desire to be heard in my own behalf. The Court—This is not the proper time to enter upon a defence. The only question before the court is whether further time should be allowed counsel to prepare for the defence. Prisoner—(Emphatically)—So far as I am concerned; don't want any further time. We are ready to try the case now. To the Deputy Marshal, who endeavored to restrain the prisoner, he said: "Will you be quiet?" The Court—The question is whether further time ought to be allowed. Counsel—Prisoner—(Emphatically)—I don't want that if the court please. District Attorney Corkhill insisted that the trial should proceed now, and Mr. Robinson pressed his claim for postponement. Owing to the opposition of Mr. Scoville and the prisoner to the application of Mr. Robinson for extension of time, the case should proceed, as far as at least, as the swearing in of the jury was concerned, and he then would consider the question of extension. At 11 o'clock the work of obtaining a jury began. The first three who presented themselves being disqualified, two on the ground that they had formed a fixed opinion in the case, and the other on the ground that he had conscientious scruples on the subject of capital punishment. In examining the jurors Scoville went over a large range of questions, inquiring as to the religious and political beliefs. Up to this hour, 12:50, five jurors have been obtained and sworn in. Their names and occupations are as follows: John P. Harlin, restaurant keeper; Fred W. Brandenberg, cigar maker; Chas. G. Stewart, flower seed dealer; Henry J. Bright, retired from business, and Chas. H. Langley, grocer. The court then adjourned.

GUTTEAU'S SPEECH.

In a speech which Guiteau had prepared for delivery in court to-day he says he is charged with murdering one James A. Garfield. Nothing can be more absurd, because General Garfield died of malpractice; Gen. Garfield was a good man, but a weak politician, being President he was in a position to do vast harm to the republic, and he was doing it by unwise use of patronage, and the Lord and himself took the responsibility of removing him; that his duty to the Lord and to the American people overcame his personal feelings towards General Garfield, and he sought to remove him. Not being a marksman General Garfield was not fatally shot, but incompetent physicians finished the work, and they, not himself, are responsible for his death. He then spoke of breaking the Republican party and his resolve to remove the President, and claims that deity ordered him to fire the shot. He refers to his work on theology, insanity in his family, his married life and his life in prison, and appeals to those whom he says he has put in position and to the general public to send him money for his defence.

Specimen Funder Tickets.

(From the Whig.) FLOWER DE HUNDRED, Nov. 11, 1881. Enclosed please find samples of three tickets that were industriously circulated at the different polls in Prince George county by the Funder. The candidates for the Senate and House respectively are white Radicals of the most malignant type and are not usually recognized by gentlemen of this county or Surry as fit persons. Such are the contemptible subterfuges to which this party of "honor and honesty" and sublime holiness see fit to resort to accomplish the desired end. It is proper to state that Mr. Gee is a Conservative and was the regular nominee. You may use this as you please.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

The following list shows the Senators and members of the House elected on Tuesday. The doubtful counties and districts are conceded to the Funder and the full returns may make some changes in favor of Readjusters. With the Senators now holding over (12 Readjusters and 5 Funder's) the list shows 24 Readjusters in the Senate and 16 Funder's, and in the House 58 Readjusters to 42 Funder's. The Readjusters elected are marked R. and the Funder's F.:

Not the Man

The man who drops a copper cent into the church collection plate with force enough to knock the organ out of tune, and an hour afterwards slides into a beer saloon to deposit a quarter, isn't the individual the cherubs expect to fit up with a pair of downy wings.

Cuticura

Scrofulous, Itching and Scaly Humors of the Skin, Scalp and Blood Cured.

MIRACULOUS CURE

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodine, potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid five hundred dollars for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the Cuticura Resolvent internally and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured 12 months.

Reported by F. H. Brown, Esq., Barnwell, N. C.

SCROFULA SORE

ROY DR. In detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies says that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofula sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which has entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

LEN, M. FRAYLEY, 61 South St., Baltimore.

CUTICURA

THE Cuticura Treatment, for the cure of Skin, Scalp and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of Cuticura Resolvent, the new Blood Purifier, and the external use of Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, the Great Skin Cures.

Price of CUTICURA small boxes, 50c, large boxes, $1. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1 per bottle. CUTICURA SOAP, 25 cts. CUTICURA SHAVING SOAP, 15c.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT

Religious Services on last Sunday. Last Sunday Rev. Mr. Bishop, the new presiding elder for this district, preached in the Methodist church at 11 o'clock in the morning.

Apples are being brought in from Grayson, and sell for fifty cents a bushel.

Our farmers will have to kill their pork early, on account of the short corn crop.

Women Everywhere use Parker's Ginger Tonic, because they have learned from experience that it overcomes despondency, indigestion, weakness in the back and kidneys and other troubles of the sex.

Mr. J. L. Humphrey, who has been quite ill, is now convalescent. He regretted very much that he could not get out to vote for the adjournment.

Mr. J. R. Venable was in town on Saturday and Sunday last. He left on Monday for Tazewell, where he has some boots and shoes to the merchants of that county, and will attend a wedding while there.

Mr. E. B. Hatcher, representing the excellent Commission house of Lee, Taylor & Co., of Lynchburg, was in town several days this week in the interest of his house.

Miss Emma Luther, one of the popular young ladies of Marion, has gone to New York to spend the winter. The boys will miss her, but we hope Miss Emma will have a splendid time.

Dr. S. H. Hundnall, of Virginia, says: "In Consumption and Chronic Bronchitis Camm's Emulsion is the great desideratum."

Next Monday will be the day for holding the regular November term of the county court.

Wild Turkeys. Are very abundant in the ridges and mountains near Marion, and a number are being killed by hunters.

Fresh Beef at the Market. Fresh Beef at the Market House, one door East of G. G. Goodell's store, every Tuesday and Friday, Wednesday and Saturday.

Big Radish. Mr. R. F. Nickels grew some very large radishes in his garden this season. One of them was a giant that weighed nine pounds.

Settle! Settle! For some months we have neglected our collections, and consequently need money.

Jumped Off the Train. One of the employes at the Holstein Woolen Mills attempted to jump from the passenger train at Seven Mile Ford on Sunday night, and was painfully hurt.

Southwest Va., Medical Society. The next regular meeting will be held at Marion on tomorrow, the 18th inst.

Wood! Wood! We would be very glad if you would bring us some wood under your subscription as promised.

An Ugly Picture. A man whose very look forbids your approach, if he speaks it is a snarl; if he smiles—but he never does that; his wife and children are made unhappy because he holds aloof from them, and does not enter into any of their plans to make home pleasant and cheerful; he is a burden to himself, to his family and friends, when he might be a joy and comfort by using Hart's Blood and Liver pills, and getting his bilious system cleaned out.

Notice. Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of a call of a sufficient number of stockholders as provided by the By Laws, an extra meeting of the stockholders of the Virginia, Kentucky & Ohio Narrow Gauge Railroad Company will be held at the office of the Company in Saltville, Virginia, on Thursday Dec'r, 8th 1881, at 12 o'clock M., to take into consideration the proposed consolidation of the said Virginia, Kentucky & Ohio N. G. R. Co., with the Richmond & Southwestern Railway Company.

By order of the Board of Presidents and Directors. SAMUEL LEBOW, Pres't. B. F. BUCHANAN, Sec'y.

$12 A WEEK, $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address: T. & Co. Augusta, Me.

The passage in President Garfield's inaugural, when he indicated a vigorous policy against the surviving "twin relic of barbarism," is recalled by the Boston Herald, in connection with the sailing of another ship load of Mormon proselytes to reinstate that moral plague spot and inchoate rebellion at the West. The Herald expresses the hope that President Arthur's Mormon policy will be no less vigorous than that mediated by his lamented predecessor and the indications are that the Herald will not be disappointed.

An unusual matrimonial entanglement says the Indianapolis Journal, is reported from Minneapolis. Dr. Hammond, of that city, was engaged to marry Miss Bly, but he made Miss Winter his wife instead. There was no reasonable explanation of the change in his affections, and the matter was still further complicated by the fact that Miss Bly didn't seem to care much. A solution was reached, however, when the speculative Doctor eloped with her, after getting possession of his wife's fortune.

"I'm a very sick man," observed the tramp languidly, as he anchored himself at a restaurant table; "the doctor says I must have strengthening food. Give me something with plenty of iron in it." The waiter handed the owner of his mouth with his hands and then bowed in stentorian tones. "One keg of nails!"—Boston Post.

Although the Italians in Egypt outnumber all other Europeans at least three to one, and although most of the land of Alexandria is in their hands, Italy has hitherto been excluded by France and England from all share in Egyptian affairs. Germany, however, which has shown a disposition to make the Egyptian question the concern of the European powers instead of the joint concern of France and England, will unquestionably have something to say in the crisis that is inevitably approaching, and Italy, by means of an alliance with Germany and Austria, will be able to claim the position which of right belongs to her as the protector of the thousands of Italians now engaged in business in Egypt.

A New Democratic Club in Philadelphia. An organization known as the Commonwealth Club, something after the style of the famous Manhattan Club of New York, has been started by a number of prominent Democrats in Philadelphia. Among those prominent in the movement are Samuel J. Randall, Lewis C. Cassidy, Colonel John W. Forney, and many others of like social standing. The object of the club is to secure a first-class resort where gentlemen can entertain their friends from other cities and distinguished politician guests with honor to themselves and credit to the city. It has selected for its quarters the building at the corner of Broad and Chestnut streets which was formerly an annex to the St. George's Hotel. The house will contain in all forty rooms, thirty of which will be used as sleeping apartments.

In Randolph county, N. C., on two small streams that unite to form the Cape Fear river, there are "no less than twenty cotton factories, aggregating millions of capital, employing more than 5,000 hands, and using more than fifty bales of cotton daily, or 16,000 a year." So says the North Carolina Farmer and Mechanic. Such facts are suggestive and hope-inspiring.

The people down east need not laugh at our western ways of doing business. It amounts to about the same thing all around after all. We rob railroad trains and mountain stages and our neighbors, down east keep summer hotels. And, dearly beloved, allow us to say that the difference in methods don't make a continental bit of difference to the traveler.—Burlington Hawkeye.
