Can Nothing Save Her.

The little episode which is here related in the form of a story took place at Avignon, in France, in 1793; strength and courage displayed by the divine and youthful Clothilde is worth ten years of heroism.

An immense crowd had gathered together in this ancient city to assist in, or at least to witness, the punishment of two unfortunate victims, who like so many others, had been condemned to suffer death by the revolutionary tribunal.

In the public square was the scaffold, upon which stood the executioner who was conducting himself with a levity horrible to witness.

This man was positively hideous. His barbarous delight and cruel hardened manner inspired still more disgust and horror than his fearful trade.

He smiled complacently as he looked around upon the preparations for punishment.

He seemed to be saying to the spectators—

"I am going to throw the heads at you, and I shall have the greatest of pleasure in doing so."

Nothing more frightful, more unworthy, had stained this period, when under the burning sun of liberty, so much that was glorious, and, at the same time, so much that was awful, burst forth, all of a sudden, upon this distracted land.

No one knew where this man had come from.

The most sinister reports had been circulated as to his history.

Those duties, which, till now, had only been performed by constraint, were conferred upon him as a favor, and at his own request.

There had even been some hesitation about granting his demand at first, for the marks of vice, so plainly visible in his voracious features could only inspire terror and disgust.

It was considered to be doing this man an honor appointing him to the post of executioner.

He was now on the scaffold playing with his instrument of death.

Meanwhile, the victims approached.

They were accompanied on their passage to the scaffold by a double line of the guards.

Behind them were the people.

The air resounded on every side with the voices and cries of the people.

There were oaths, jests, cries of rage, and echoed in bitter irony by thousands of cruel voices.

This confused noise rolled through the air like a thunder storm.

It froze some hearts with terror, while it only redoubled the fire of political fever in others.

But, strange to relate, no sooner did the two victims make their appearance than the fierce yells of the spectators died away.

As they advanced it ceased altogether.

When they arrived at the fatal spot, one would have thought that this dense mass of people, so lately agitated by the most violent excitement had been all at once struck dumb and motionless, so deep and solemn was the silence that succeeded the deafening confusion and strife of tongues.

This awful stillness was more dreadful to bear than the uproar which had preceded it.

The reason of this strange and sudden change was that the victims were so interesting and beautiful.

They were Clothilde and her mother.

The mother was still in the full bloom of her beauty.

This beauty borrowed a new and heavenly charm her sorrow.

For, entirely occupied with the thought of her daughter, and grieving over her untimely fate, she never dreamt of her own, terrible preparations were also meant for her.

This mother, so interesting to the compassionate eyes of humanity, was guilty in those of the political world.

Everyone pitied her as they gazed upon her, yet they understood the sentence of condemnation that had been passed upon her.

But Clothilde, before what tribunal could she possibly be guilty?

What sin had she committed against her country?

She, who was only an object of blessing and love before God and her parents!

She, so beautiful, so gentle and so very young.

Even the crowd could distinguish the noble feelings which marked the maternal character.

They also discovered something aristocratic and proud in her nature.

It was easily seen that this enemy whom the Republic had proscribed belonged to the ranks of the feudal aristocracy, the friends of emigration.

In the daughter the only visible trait was that of filial devotion.

It shone forth on her features alone and unmingled.

It was so beautiful at this fatal moment that at the sight of this gentle girl the strongest and fiercest men shuddered with grief and admiration.

Clothilde, generally timid and retiring, at that awful time was granted sufficient courage to support and to cheer up her mother.

She feared that her mother might inwardly reproach herself for having dragged her to her fate.

To deliver her from this bitterness she appeared proud to die.

Thus, if the mother displayed weakness, it was for her daughter.

If the daughter showed strength and bravery, it was for her mother.

Every heart was softened and melted with pity.

So much youth, beauty and virtue made those fierce "symplics" nase for an instant and remember that they were men.

The word "pardon" trembled on many of their lips.

But the sentence was irrevocable—the victims had already approached the scaffold.

The man of whom we have already spoken had also cast his eyes upon them.

The victims had met his glance, and at the first sight of him, the daughter, pale with fear, had pressed her mother to her heart.

Trembling for Clothilde, the mother almost fainted, but her daughter supported and encouraged her.

Clothilde gazed at the man, and in his glance those two opposite natures spoke to each other.

The man shuddered.

The sight of so much virtue dazzled and bewildered him.

He admired it.

He felt proud of experiencing this noble sentiment, which all his life long had never been revealed to him.

And while he admired, he also pitied.

For pity had seized the heart of every spectator, and as if by electric communication, it had penetrated even into his.

Those feelings, which were so new to him, threw him into a kind of stupor, and this man of terror remained motionless on the theatre of death.

He gazed on the young girl, who was so brave trying to sustain her mother's courage, and who had eyes for no one but her.

He heard the sobs and sighs of the crowd and a murmur go through the whole place, which seemed to say—

"Can nothing save her?"

Then a thought came from this man's heart.

He leaped from the scaffold.

The people guessed his meaning and applauded him.

He approached Clothilde and tried to speak, but a feeling, till then unknown, froze his tongue to the roof of the mouth.

At last, making a violent effort, and encouraged by the cheers of the crowd, he spoke.

"Mademoiselle, said he, 'the law permits a good patriot to save his future wife. Pardon my boldness, but will you be my wife? Say yes, and you are saved.'"

Clothilde glanced at her mother, pale and terror-stricken with the blow which was about to strike her daughter.

She gathered new strength from this look.

"Would you save my mother also?" she asked, turning her beautiful eyes upon the man.

Yes, she spoke those brave words with a firm voice, and she looked at this fierce man without any fear, and with an ineffable gentleness which went to his very heart.

The question was as much to ask say, 'I know you; I understand you; I see you such as you are. I see the stains of the blood you have shed on your hands—on your very features. But if you can save my mother, I will be your wife. I will put my hand in yours, and share the horrors of your infamous life. If you will save my mother, I shall accept you for my husband, and do my best not to die with grief. I will unite my life to yours; I will swear to love you, and I will do so; I will swear to obey you, and I will keep my oath. I will submit to this daily, hourly, life-long punishment. I will submit to it, I will bless it, if you will save my mother.'

And this was expressed, though the words did not pass her lips, for her eyes spoke volumes.

The fierce man of blood answered, in a voice timid and gentle as that of a child.

"I can only save you," were his words.

Freed then from the frightful strait into which this man's thoughts had plunged her and held her captive for a few moments Clothilde forgot it—she forgot the crowd—everything but her mother.

She saw no one but her, and thought only that they were about to join the angels in heaven above, where all their sorrow and suffering would be at an end, and where all their tears would be wiped away.

His Biggest Practice.

"Doctor, said De Fidgett to one of the medical men, do you have much practice nowadays?"

"Oh, yes. I have all the practice I can attend to."

"In what particular line is the most of your practice?"

"In the line of economy."

Words of Wisdom.

The rays of happiness like those of light, are colorless when unbroken.

An open mind, an open hand and an open heart will find everywhere an open door.

Count on the fidelity of the man who carries his heart in his hand, and wears his soul in his face.

Cheerfulness is an excellent wearing quality. It has been called the bright weather of the heart.

Indolence is a sort of suicide, for the man is efficiently destroyed, though the appetite of the brute may survive.

The surest way of governing, both in private family and a kingdom, is for a husband and a prince sometimes to drop their prerogatives.

It is little the sign of a wise or good man to suffer temperance to be transgressed in order to purchase the repute of a generous entertainer.

Useful knowledge can have no enemies except the ignorant; it cherishes youth, deluges the aged, is an ornament in prosperity, and yields comfort in adversity.

As they, who for every slight infirmity take physic to repair their health, do rather impair, so they, who for every trifle, are eager to vindicate their character, do rather weaken it.

Love Tokens.

At a cheap restaurant:
The regular customer—"It is true that your daughter acts as cook?"
The landlord—"It is, monsieur."
"I have never seen her, but I begin to feel deeply attached to her."
"Indeed? Is it because of her good cooking?"
"No, not on the account of her cooking, but her delicate attentions" (producing a tress of fair hair). "I have found these in my soup, one by one, for a month."

How Changed.

"I remember you very well," said the hotel-keeper, "but your wife has grown very thin."
"Yes."
"She was taller?"
"Yes."
"And lighter complexion, was she not?"
"Yes. Beside, you know, it is not the same one."

His Ears Deceived Him.

Featherly (making an evening call)—So your mother has returned from the country, Miss Clara?
Miss Clara—Oh, no; she won't be back until next week.
Featherly (surprised)—Strang! Is not that her voice I hear upstairs?
Miss Clara (in a constrained tone)—No; that is Bobby at work with his new scroll saw.

A Good Reason.

Judge—"Why do you wish this witness to be heard?"
Defendant—"Because you can place entire confidence in him."
Judge—"For what reason?"
Defendant—"Because he hasn't had time to consult a lawyer."
Judge—"That is reason enough. Let him be sworn."

No Hope.

"Don't suppose my work will ever be done," growled Crimsonbeak over the buck and saw, as he stopped for a breathing spell.
"Not in this world, John," replied his practical wife.
"Nor in the next, either," came from the overworked man.
"How so?" asked she of his choice.
"Well, I heard the minister say only last Sunday that even angels soar in the skies."
"But I don't expect you'll ever saw hard enough to rise that high," was the dampener Mrs. Crimsonbeak threw over her husband's feelings.

Queer, if True.

In the vicinity of Towanda, Penn., reside a nondescript people who populate the broad sides of Pool hill, and are known as the Pool tribe. A New York Sun correspondent who met one of these people says:

After the old man had again irrigated, I asked why it was the bite of a rattlesnake never hurt a Pool.

He looked up with a cunning leer and said: "That's wuth suthin to know, mistah."

"Well, said I, 'you can have the remainder of this fire juice if you will tell me.'"

He rolled up the sleeve of his ragged old hickory shirt nearly to the shoulder. Right below the biceps was a deep corrugated scar as large as a silver half dollar.

"Yo' see it?" he asked, and then continued: "When I was a yearlin' my fadder killed a rattler an' tuk out one o' de pizon teef. He cut a hole in my arm dere, and put some o' de pizon in it. It waz pow'ful so', an' I didn't got well foh mos' a year. Jes' as long as yo' can see that sear I won't git pizoned. We folks allus does dat; larnt lit foh de Injuns."

The idea has struck me that the old man was lying, but I don't know.

COMPARE THE RECORDS

The time has passed for men to follow a name. It is folly for intelligent men to say that they belong to a political party because their fathers were members of it. When they do say such a thing it is an admission that they are not thinking for themselves but that they are acting upon the opinions and judgment of dead men.

It has been very common with the Bourbons to assert that Readjustment and Republicanism have done much to damage the welfare of the State. Is this so? Did the Readjuster party injure or help the schools? Did it do a good work when it restored free suffrage to all citizens?

Decide between the parties upon their records, and be not deceived by the name of Lee or of Democracy.

BLAIR BRANDS HIM A LIAR.

Blair has denounced as liars all the Bourbon speakers, and makes a personal application to each and all of them, from Fitz Lee down, who retails the slanders about his taking improper fees.

We are informed that O'Ferrall told some very vulgar anecdotes last Monday, and that the pious (?) Bourbons, who talk about the vulgarity of Republican speakers, shrank with delight.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.

BOURBONISM has twice gotten control of the State since the war and found a full treasury, and each time the money has disappeared with wonderful rapidity.

THEY say we are trying to array class against class, because we are in favor of protecting honest American labor.

THEY say we are trying to array class against class, because we are in favor of educating the children of the poor men of the country.

THEY say we are trying to array class against class, because we do not believe it is right for a preferred class of citizens to rule the country.

O'FERRALL preached his same old worn out free trade doctrine on Monday, and abused men who are by far his superior in everything that makes a true man.

WORK scarce and wages lower, and yet they try to make the working-men believe that Democratic reform is a good thing.

CAN men who believed and said a few years ago "that it is wrong for one class of citizens to be taxed to educate the children of another class" be trusted with the keeping of the free schools?

BY contributing to the success of Bourbonism the poor men of the country are aiding in the forging of chains that are to bind their own children.

WILL you march and fight with the cavalry and against freedom, or will you march and fight with the infantry and for liberty?

YE heard a Bourbon say a few days ago that the Danville people ought to have murdered John Wise. This shows how blood thirsty some of them are.

FRAUD, violence, intimidation, deception, slander and bribery are the weapons of the Bourbons.

THEY called the crowd that listened to Morris on Monday "a motley crew." They called the same men in 1881 "turkey bizzard agitators." The farmers and workmen of Smyth are thus sneered at by men who are much beneath them in worth and intelligence.

THEY say that we are trying to array class against class, and yet they never lose an opportunity to sneer at the honest workingmen who chiefly make up the Republican party.

WE are told that O'Ferrall tried to make his listeners believe last Monday that he had made a speech in favor of the Blair Educational bill last winter in the House of Representatives. The fact is the bill could never be brought up for discussion as the Democrats, who had a large majority in the House always objected to its being taken up out of its order.

MR. D. C. MOOMAW, one of the most prominent citizens of Roanoke county, and heretofore a most uncompromising Democrat, declines to support Huffman, the candidate of his party for the House of Delegates, and will support Capt. Braud, who is a Republican.

IF the Democratic party is in favor of the Blair Educational bill why didn't the Democratic House of Representatives pass it? It was passed by the Republican Senate and sent to the House of Representatives where it remained one entire session and three months of another session, and was left on the calendar to die.

PETERSBURG, September 21.—The pipe factory of Merrill, Earle & Ford, at Pamplun's depot on the Norfolk & Western railroad, was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. Loss, about $17,000, insurance, $5,050. Origin probably incendiary.

A colored blacksmith in Virginia has patented an invention which enables him to work a powerful hammer with his foot while using both hands to hold the iron on the anvil. The device can also be applied to driving a drill for mine or quarry work.

HARD TIMES.

Its Real Cause and the Cure.

NUMBER THREE. [Scott Progressive Age.]

We evidently struck the key-note to the real feelings and necessities of the people of the whole country in our two previous articles upon hard times. This subject is so important, so vital to all our people, that the subject becomes almost inexhaustible.

Hard Times is not a local disease, although the Banner and its correspondents would have the people of Southwestern Virginia to believe that it is local, and owing purely to local causes. The drought of last year; the failure of the corn crop, and the stagnation in the cattle market may have intensified the stringency of money in the trade centres, but none of these causes, or all of them combined, strike the real cause of hard times and universal panic, which pervades all sections, prostrates all business, and deprives laboring men of employment. Suppose our people did have to go to Tennessee for their supply of corn—would that affect the manufacturing centres?

Would that affect the iron mills and coal mines in Pennsylvania? Would that affect the cotton mills and woolen mills of the Eastern States? Would that affect the shoe and hat trade and mercantile business generally, all over the country? Would the drought and failure of crops in Southwestern Virginia affect the hundreds of thousands of bushels of wheat, corn and other grains raised in excess of home consumption in the great Western and Southwestern States?

Would this fact affect the iron and coal markets? Would it stop the building of railroads, factories and investments in the ordinary lines of trade? The man or editor who asserts such a foolish thing is a lunatic, and fit only for the asylum!

For fifteen years, under Republican rule and a protective tariff, the country had thrived in individual and collective wealth. Thousands of miles of railroad had been built; the iron and steel mills were in full and active play. Millions of industrious men found constant employment at good wages in the mills, factories, and mines of the country. These great industrial interests called into prosperity other important interests, feeding all the channels of trade and commerce. The farmers and producers of the agricultural sections found a ready market for all products at fair prices, because the laboring men were fully employed and had money to buy the necessities of life, and even the luxuries were within their reach.

The Democrats in the last Congress undertook to remodel the Republican tariff—make it a horizontal instead of a protective tariff; to give to England and English artisans the advantages that were enjoyed by the laboring and producing classes of this country, under Republican rule and policy. It is computed that agitation cost the country at least $100,000,000 by creating a panic.

The question of Tariff Reform was taken from the halls of Congress to the Democratic National Convention. That body, to meet the views of the Randall and Morrisons, framed and passed their tariff plank in such ambiguous terms that in the State of Pennsylvania it meant full protection to iron, coal and all descriptions of manufactured goods, while in the Democratic States favorable to low duties, it meant Free Trade. Upon this plank the party went before the people. By false hood and double dealing, by deceiving the laboring men in the factories, mills and trade centres into the belief that the election of Cleveland and the restoration of the Democratic party to power would give them more work, better pay and greater prosperity, they succeeded in restoring the party of false promises, of panics and hard times to the control of the National Government.

What is the result? Hard times, scarcity of money, lack of employment, low prices, idleness, want, misery and crime in all the avenues of industries.

These are facts. They are no imaginary evils, but are here, there, and everywhere.

Voters of Southwestern Virginia, you know the cause. It was your votes in common with those of the majority that gave the Democratic party power, and upon their assuming control of the Government, with free trade and idleness to American labor as their trade mark, inscribed upon their banner. Hard times were felt, and capital and labor have felt their blighting influence from one extreme end of the country to the other. It was your votes that made Hard Times, and your votes can unmake them.

Leave the Democratic party and its Free Trade policy and vote for your own interests; vote for Protection to American industries; vote for the Republican candidates who represent the party of the People, the party of Progress, and the party that for so many years gave prosperity to all the citizens of all sections.

The remedy is in your hands. Will you apply it? If so, vote for Wise, Wood, Blair, Addington and Prosperity!

NEW PUBLICATION.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY

For October opens with a paper by Richard B. Kimball, entitled "The Governing Powers of the United States." It does not deal with the President nor with Congress, as might be supposed, but with the railroad magnates, and portraits of C. P. Huntington, Commodore Vanderbilt, W. H. Vanderbilt, J. W. Garrett, George B. Roberts, Alvan Adams (founder of Adams Express) and Jay Gould. "A Summer Day at Stratford-on-Avon" has with it ten Shakespeare pictures; and "Jaunts with Dickens," brings us six characteristic illustrations of that writer's scenes and characters. The element of fiction is well kept up in the serial "Of Two Evils," and several short stories, and the miscellany is abundant and entertaining.

Published by FRANK LESLIE, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York City, at 25 cents a number, or $3 a year, postpaid.

Cleveland's administration, playing grossly and openly in the hands of gold-bugs, is withdrawing $1 and $2 notes from circulation for the purpose of discrediting silver and making it unpopular. Silver is as truly the money of the people as gold is that of the rich; but the poor like as well to have light and convenient notes for their small amounts as the rich do to have large notes for their greater sums. It is folly to point to the accumulation of silver in the treasury as a proof of its inefficiency and acceptability as specie for there is more gold than silver in the Treasury, and there is vastly more silver in actual use, as currency, than gold. It is true that gold is held at a higher rate than silver; but this is the result of speculations and corners in gold as against silver which any wise and popular government ought to thwart, if possible instead of aiding and abetting them, as Cleveland's administration is doing. —Whig.

Cleveland Badge.

A workman in Wheeling (W. Va.) has written a letter to a friend in Toledo (Ohio) from which the Blade clips the following:

"We are in the midst of a Democratic boom—the mills shut down and idleness is everywhere. I saw a new Cleveland badge. Have you seen one? It is a patch on the seat of your breeches; they are becoming very common in our city."

As we are having precisely one of these "Democratic booms" in this State just now, we commend the designs as an appropriate one for F. Lee badges. They are cheap, significant, and well adapted to these hard times, when the bottom is wearing out of everything. —Whig.

A Plucky Young Women.

A Columbia, S. C., special says: The jail at Camden has for a long time been considered insecure, and for that reason the prisoners have recently been kept in their cells and not allowed the privilege of the corridor. The jailer is cripple and has been confined to his bed for several months. During this time his duties have been attended to by his daughter, Miss Gaskins, and she has proved worthy of the trust reposed in her.

On Friday evening a new lot of prisoners were received at the jail and, as the prison was already crowded, nine of them were locked up in an old cell which had not been used for some time. In the night one of the prisoners managed to get out of the cell into the corridor, and by some means procured a piece of iron, with which he broke the lock and released the other eight. They immediately began prying off the bars from one of the windows, and in a few minutes all of them were free. At this juncture, however, Miss Gaskins heard the noise. The plucky little woman at once picked up a bar of iron, unlocked the outer door and rushed into the corridor, where the prisoners were working at the window. She drove every one of them back into their cell in order, and kept guard at the door until the sheriff arrived and took charge of the jail and manacled the prisoners, several of whom are noted negro desperadoes, and one a convicted murderer under the sentence of death.

Three hundred cows furnish milk for the creamery at the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, making a daily yield of 125 pounds of butter, or 750 pounds per week, which sells at 24 cents a pound, amounting to $180 a week.

The first smelting works in Australia have commenced operations in the newly discovered silver regions of Mitchell's creek, near Bathurst. The scene of operation is called Sunny Corner, and the district is believed to be as rich in argentiferous ore as is that of the Barrier Ranges. Other smelting works have been begun, and the whole are under the direction of miners who have had considerable experience in America.

A Voice from Providence, R. I.
For twenty years I have been afflicted with a dreadful blood poison, and during all those years I have had the best medical advice in the country, the physicians prescribing the only remedies known, such as Mercury and Iodide of Potassium, all to no purpose. I was six months in Bellevue Hospital, and became so bad that I despaired of getting well. I then, through advice, went to Europe and tried some of the best physicians there with the same results, and returned again to this country. Finally I went to New Orleans, being told that the French doctors understood the treatment of my case better and perhaps could cure me. Alas, however, after taking more mercury and potassium from them, I became so much worse that I gave up to die. I had become so bad that I was a sight to behold. I had large ulcers all over my face and neck. There were holes in my skin that you could put a hen's eggs in, and down to the bone. A number of pieces of bone came out at my ankle, and now I carry the scars on my face and body of the frightful character of this disease. I came back to Providence, and by the help of a paper with the advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, I was cured. As a last hope I thought I would try it. Thanks be to God, I can say I am perfectly cured, having been afflicted about three months. Up to date no symptoms of the disease returned, and I feel as well as a man. I have nothing to show that I was ever afflicted with S.S.S. the best and only positively cure blood poison, and I most positively recommend it to all who are afflicted as I was.

Good for the Child.
The ailments of childhood need careful attention and wise treatment. Some people think "anything is good enough for a child, and there isn't much the matter with it anyhow." But judicious mothers know better, and do as Mrs. H. W. Perry, of Richmond, Va., does. She says: "I take Brown's Iron Bitters and give it to my children with the most satisfactory results."

Big Day in Politics.

Last Monday was a big day politically in Marion. Both the Republicans and Democrats had speakers on hand, and they had separate meetings. The Republicans held their meeting at Seaver Opera House and the Democrats theirs in the courthouse. The Democrats pretended that they wanted to have a joint discussion, but after claiming the day as theirs would offer no terms for a discussion.

About twelve o'clock the political cauldron began to boil. Anxious to get the crowd, the Democrats had the courthouse bell rung and carried their speakers into the court room. Just as it was being announced from the front door of the court house that O'Ferrall and others would speak there the band, which had been secured by the Republicans, struck up a lively tune in front of the Central Hotel and the Republicans began to rally around it and cheer for our ticket. After playing several pieces the band started for the Opera House, and the Republicans started and followed along. The crowd about the courthouse was more than half taken away. As soon as the audience was well settled at the Opera House, Page Morris, Esq., was introduced, and for two and a half hours spoke to one of the largest crowds that has ever listened to any political speaker here. Mr. Morris is a fine speaker and thoroughly posted on leading State and National questions.

His speech was a calm but forcible exposition of the strong points of Republicanism and the misdoings and misdeeds of Virginia Bourbonism and National Democracy. His remarks were frequently interrupted with hearty and prolonged applause. He spoke to a crowd that was composed of the farmers, mechanics and working men of Smyth. No drummers were there, none of the cod-fish mushroom aristocracy were before him, the visiting lawyers were absent, and the clergies and strikers from adjacent counties were away. These were up at the courthouse listening to Ayers, Rhea and O'Ferrall. Our people were delighted with Morris. His speech was free from that invidious which is now too common with most stump speakers. The Democrats had the courthouse crowded, and claim that their audience was larger than ours. We had times from five to six hundred people present, and the courthouses cannot hold more than three hundred and fifty when it is packed almost to suffocation. When Wise spoke here it was closely packed and the Bourbons estimated his crowd at about three hundred, now they claim that the house had a much greater capacity than it had when Wise was here. The Democrats say they are pleased with the day's work. The Republicans were more than pleased with it, and would like to have many more such. Now let the Republicans of Smyth go to work and all will be well.

If the Bourbon leaders think they can deceive the people by such fume and froth as Lee and Daniel got off last Saturday they are very much mistaken. If they could hear the curses, both loud and deep, of the common people heaped upon Bourbon pretense and duplicity, they would feel that the day of judgment is not far off. The manufactured enthusiasm, affected for the purpose of deception, not only of this who were grotesquely engaged in it but of the rank and file is having quite a different effect from what was hoped and intended. The people have been deceived and duped so often by this same class of leaders that they have become familiar with their tactics and fully awakened to the pretense and false assumption to which they resort to mislead and beguile the masses. Let all who are opposed to ring rule and demagogism buckle on their armor and firmly and courageously go into the fight, and such a Waterloo to the Ring faction in Augusta county will be realized as will astound the fess and feather brigade.—Valley Virginian.

State Republican Platform.

We, the Republican Party of Virginia, faithfully adhere to the National Republican Party's principles and platform...

We maintain a resolute antagonism to the National Democracy as a conspiracy for spoils, without any wise or definite convictions of its own...

We declare our resolute opposition to the present Federal Administration as the fit creature of the immoral and faithless relations of apostate Republicans...

Holding these attitudes toward the national parties and their politics, and sure that these are both right and expedient for the civil, political and material welfare of this State and her citizens...

For the enforcement of the Readjuster settlement of the State debt as covering every dollar of Virginia's equitable share of the debt of the United States...

For Free Labor and its just share in its contributions to the power and wealth of the Nation, against the Bourbon policy which subjects honest labor not only to the most unjust and humiliating competition with convict labor...

For Free Books for free schools, as a proper and necessary completion of our system of public education, against the present Bourbon policy, which forces many children to plead pauperism or stay from the schools...

For a liberal support and extension of all our asylums, against the Bourbon system of incarcerating our insane of both sexes in the common jails.

For the protection of our oyster-beds and fisheries from non-resident invaders, and the due regulation of these great interests in accordance with the rights and views of the people directly concerned...

For the execution of all public work by the direct employment and payment of labor against the system by contracts under which both government and workmen are fleeced by speculative and unnecessary middlemen.

For every possible encouragement and aid to promote the construction of railroads and other facilities to open up the immense mineral and other resources of the Western, Southwestern, and other portions of the State...

For the protection of the paramount obligation of the various works of internal improvement to the people of the State, by whose authority they were created, by whose money they were constructed...

For money wages for labor against the Bourbon store-and-order system, whereby corporations and other employers control the expenditures of their employees...

For a State Bureau of Labor Statistics, to reach a fuller knowledge of the condition of the laboring people, with a view to their welfare and elevation.

For a legal provision securing to all mechanics, laborers, and other workmen employed by corporations, firms, and individuals the first lien on the assets of these where they are forced into liquidation...
