THE MANSION HOUSE; OR AN ODD STORY OF THE JUSTICE-ROOM.

CHAPTER III.
Crisp's omission to return to his books may have blunted his moral sense; or it may have been mere chance that led him to be nearly a quarter of an hour late on Monday morning. As he hurried up the alley he was surprised by the sight of a group collected about Parkman's door. Among them was one or two of Parkman's clerks looking unlike themselves, and one or two policemen unable to look anything but themselves.

"What is up?" he asked lightly; but though they all seemed to be looking at him, no one answered. Instead, a clerk one of the jurors, said audibly:—

"That is Mr. Crisp?" and a strange voice answered emphatically:—

"That is he man."
This seemed to cause a sensation amid which a short, stout person, with a blunt, hearty voice and a humorous eye pushed through the group, and said:—

"This way, sir, please," in a voice of authority.
"What in the world is the matter?" asked Crisp.

"Tell you in a moment, sir. Please to step with me in Mr. Parkman's room."
And he took Crisp by the arm, in what the latter thought an odd fashion, and so led him up, and swiftly through the clerk's office, which was half full of staring gapers, and into the junior partner's room.

Crisp looked around him in utter bewilderment. On the hearthrug sat Mr. Parkman, pale and agitated. By the window two gentlemen were talking. At the table, apparently making some notes, sat a policeman.

"Watson," said the conductor, shutting the door firmly behind them, "do you take him?" and fell back into a corner of the room where he seemed to busy himself with an old Joe Miller, so very facetious that it rendered him oblivious to all going around him.

While Crisp stood looking from one to the other the superintendent rose abruptly and stepped close to him: "Mine is a painful business, sir, you are Mr. Earnest Crisp, I think?"

It darted into Crisp's mind that the chief had put the police in motion in the matter of that little discrepancy in his accounts; but a single glance to Mr. Parkman's pale, sympathizing face sufficed to dispose of that.

"Yes," he said "I am. That is my name."
"You may or may not know then, that a great crime was committed here on Saturday afternoon. The cashier, Mr. Critchlow, has been found dead in his office, stabbed to the heart from behind."

"Mr. Critchlow," the head clerk whispered with white, shaking lips. "And you have been identified as the person last seen to leave the house. I am sorry to say that I must take you into custody on suspicion; I must warn you too, Mr. Crisp, that anything you say will be given in evidence against you."

"On Saturday afternoon?" muttered, Crisp in awed accents, looking around him with eyes that did not see. But why—why am I suspected?"

"All that you will hear at the Mansion House. I am anxious to take you there at once, and with as little unpleasantness to yourself as possible."

"It is a formality. Crisp, Mr. Parkman volunteered, speaking for the first time with earnest kindness. "I will attend myself and say how perfectly ridiculous your conduct for years makes this charge appear."

The color came back to the clerk's face. "Thank you, sir," he said. "Perhaps you will let yourself be searched here?" asked the policeman. Crisp nodded acquiescence, and did not flinch when the operation began. But the first articles to appear were two keys. The policeman looked carefully at the first; but his face lit up wonderfully as he held up the second.

"This is the missing key!" he exclaimed, and a thrill of intelligence seemed to pass around the room. "That key," said Crisp, still bewildered and grappling with the memory of things which seemed to have happened so long ago, "that is Mr. Critchlow—"

He stopped with trembling lips. He had gone so far outthinking; and then his position in all its bearings flashed across his mind. He remembered all that the presence of that key upon him, all that the words he had uttered, might mean for him.

"Umph!" the detective said. "This advertisement is another thing which I had not when I gave you my opinion this morning."

He said it meaningly, and paused as if expecting to be questioned. But Mr. Parkman had not marked the drift of his last words, and let them pass unchallenged.

Shortly afterwards, the merchant, pale, but collected, had to be present at the Lord Mayor's inquiry at the justice-room of the Mansion House. We need not attend him thither, for only such evidence was taken as would justify a remand; and the reader can guess what that was. The policeman was examined, who had seen Crisp go into the house on the Saturday afternoon, and had likewise seen him leave it a little later with a lady. Then the superintendent of police produced the key found upon the prisoner, and proved that it was the key of Critchlow's office, the door which was found locked upon the outside. And two of Parkman's clerks reluctantly described the bad terms upon which the prisoner and deceased were, and the quasi threat with which the former had left Critchlow upon the last occasion, when the cashier was—so far as could be proved, seen alive by any except the murderer.

This amply sufficed; and Ernest Crisp, clerk, was formally remanded—bail, being, of course, refused—until the following day. Thursday, upon the charge of willful murder. The inquest, opened the day was adjourned to await the result of the magisterial inquiry.

Matrimonial Item.
"I am very sorry that I did not get acquainted with you until I had become a widower," said Col. Percy to his second wife, with whom he does not live very happily.

"What do you mean by that?" asked the partner of his joys.
"Nothing, except that I would much rather that you had been my first wife," replied the fond husband, carelessly.

"Why do you wish that I had been your first wife?"
"Because some other woman would be my present wife, darling."

A Wonderful Hog.
A newly married lady who recently graduated from Vassar College, is not very well posted about household matters. She said to her grocer not long since:—
"I bought three or four hams here a couple of months ago, and they were very fine. Have you got any more like them?"
"Yes, ma'am, there are ten of those hams hanging up there."
"Are you sure that they are off the same pig?"
"Yes, ma'am."
"Then I'll take three of them."

The President Was Pleased.
Among the crowd at the White House the other day was an old man called Deacon Richard Smith. He shook the President's hand heartily, and said:—
"I am 83 years of age, and am glad to see you."
"How many Presidents have you seen," deacon P asked Mr. Cleveland.
"Every one since Madison," replied the deacon.
"Did you see Washington?" asked the President.
"No, sir," said the old man.
"Well, it is refreshing," said the President, "to see an old colored man who has never seen George Washington. Sure you did not nurse him?"
"No, sar; nebber saw him."
The President laughed as he shook the old man good-bye.
As the deacon was leaving the room some one asked him: "Are you a Democrat or a Republican, deacon?"
"I am a Baptist, sar."

JOHN W. DANIEL TO SUCCEED MAHON.

The struggle between Barbour and Daniel for the caucus nomination of the Democratic party for U. S. Senator from Virginia was concluded on Monday night. Most every body was astonished at the strength developed by Daniel and the weakness of Barbour. It was natural to suppose that the forces of these two leaders of the Virginia Democracy would be pretty evenly divided, but the result demonstrated that this was a mistaken idea. To a disinterested looker-on at Richmond, it was soon evident after the Legislature assembled that Daniel had the lead and would certainly win the prize. The friends and supporters of Mr. Barbour, however, continued to work with energy and hope until the last. Both of the candidates had numerous workers and able managers on the field. Daniel's victory was not due so much to the skill of his managers, for in this respect he was equally matched by Barbour, as to the strong hold he has upon the masses of the Virginia Democracy.

It was acknowledged by most every one with whom we talked that Mr. Barbour deserved much at the hands of his party, that its success was due in a great measure to his superior management and leadership, and but that for him, perhaps, the Republicans would yet be controlling the State.

In the face of these acknowledgments came the assertion that the people were for Daniel, and the representatives, in answer to the demands of their constituents, would have to give their support to him. There is no denying the fact that John W. Daniel is the idol of the Virginia Democracy. He has gotten deep down in the hearts of the masses. So deep seated in this affection that frequent defeats could not even shake or destroy his popularity. But nothing has yet been done by the Virginia Democracy that so forcibly demonstrates its devotion to Daniel, as the uttering of the name of Mr. Barbour, their Moses, for the idol, which had so frequently brought disaster instead of victory.

One of the strange results of the recent Democratic triumph in Virginia will probably be the assignment to private life of the leaders of both parties. This is not only strange, but heretofore unheard of in political history. Failure generally brings retirement for one who fails, but success has heretofore placed the successful leader more prominently to the front. We shall await with curiosity the developments that are to follow this anomalous example of political gratitude in Virginia.

A proposition has been made to divide this judicial circuit into two circuits. We have for a long time contended that such a course should be followed. The work of the present circuit is too heavy for any one man, without he does it at the entire sacrifice of health and rest. Some years ago, upon an investigation we found that the combined dockets of all the counties which constitute Judge Kelley's circuit gave him about twice as much work to do as any circuit Judge in the State, to say nothing of the large territory over which he had to travel to hold his courts. There is work enough for two Judges, and certainly territory enough.

While at Richmond, during the past week, we interviewed a number of the representatives in the Legislature from this judicial circuit, and found that they were for a division of the circuit. By all means let it done.

WILLIAM H. VANDEBILT the wealthiest man in America died suddenly at his home, in New York, on Tuesday. The cause of his death was paralysis, occasioned by the bursting of a large blood vessel at the base of the brain. His estate is estimated at two hundred millions of dollars.

The Close Election. LONDON, Dec. 7.—The result of the English balloting is still very even. The liberals, according to the latest figures obtainable this evening, are two members ahead of the combined opposition of Tories and Irish.

Extraordinary Robbery. LONDON, Dec. 7.—A dispatch from Vienna states that an extraordinary robbery of jewels has taken place in that city. The burglars, who have not yet been captured, succeeded in carrying off £20,000 worth of jewelry.

The bronze Baccus recently found in the Tiber has not silver eyes, as was said, but eyes of ivory.

A necklace of monkey's teeth was found around the neck of a mummified Peruvian Princess dug near Lima recently.

A French Spoilation Claimants.

A Washington special says: Dallas Saunders, who represents a large number of the claimants for the French spoliation fund, appeared before the court here to-day and presented the claims taken in charge by the Insurance Company of Pennsylvania and the Insurance Company of North America. There were thirty in number and represented separate claims of Philadelphia residents aggregating nearly $200,000 in amount. The preliminary papers only in each case were filed and the proofs and affidavits of losses will follow as soon as the court is ready for actual business. There are a number of other individual claims from Philadelphia which have been coming in from time to time, and the indications are that the aggregate will be greatly in excess of those filed from any other city. Commissioner Broadhead, who has been in Europe collecting facts relating to the seizures of the vessels, has brought home a report which is understood to be very favorable to the claimants, and which will simplify considerably the work of proving the Company.

Death of Wm. H. Vanderbilt.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—William H. Vanderbilt died at his home in this city of apoplexy this afternoon, aged 65 years. The news of this sudden death caused a profound sensation throughout the city, and as soon as the announcement was made the newspaper offices and other news centers were besieged by anxious enquirers clamoring for details.

A United Press reporter, who called at the house shortly after the sad news became public, found the house tightly closed against all visitors except relatives and the most intimate friends of the family. Mr. Depew said: "It is safe to say that William H. Vanderbilt was the richest man in the world."

A Georgia colored society has tried and expelled a dead man for offenses committed in his life.

The board of agriculture of South Carolina has appropriated $1,800 for the purpose of encouraging the cultivation of tobacco in that State.

The movement to establish the common council of Boston gathers strength. Two of the daily papers have declared in favor of one branch.

A small house in Jacksonville Fla., which sold for $2,500 three years ago, was resold last week for $7,000. This exemplifies the rise in Jacksonville property.

It used to be a humor of Sarah Bernhardt, when she felt particularly hateful and sour of soul, to get in a coffin and pretend to take a nap. But Bernhardt's playfulness seems trifling, indeed, in view of the dreadful misadventure of Mme. Natalie, who also tried the French stage. While Mme. Natalie was playing in pantomime at the Felie-Dramatiques she swooned and passed into the state of rigidity that marks who is dead. So they put the poor girl in a coffin. But, lo! at the first rap of the hammer on the lid Mme. Natalie awoke and stood up to the amazement and terror of all at the grave. That was in 1836. She reappeared upon the stage in 1838, and acted for thirty years retiring then on a pension of 6375 francs. A few days ago this noted woman was again placed in the narrow, hard-wood crib that receives us all, nor did she start when the lid, with melodramatic solemnity, was tapped three times.

Attorney General Ayres and Hon. Waller R. Staples will argue the coupon cases before the United States Supreme Court January 4th.

Major John W. Daniel's mother was a daughter of Mr. John M. Warwick, of Lynchburg, and the Major was named after him.

The nomination of Major Daniel was made unanimous in the caucus on motion of Mr. Kouer—a leading Barbour man.

Happy Thought in the Night. For years Mr. Jas. R. Ackley, of 163 West Fayette street, Baltimore, had suffered with neuralgia so that he could hardly sleep. But he writes: "One night I was suffering very much, and the thought struck me that Brown's Iron Bitters would do me some good, and perhaps cure me. It was a happy thought, and to my great joy it has cured me after two bottles. After three months I have had no return of the symptoms. I cheerfully recommend it as the best tonic I have ever used." Neuralgia sufferers, take the hint!

Capture of Thomas Collins.

In August, 1884, the colored people in the vicinity of Saltville had a picnic, and during the day a party of white men came upon the ground and a difficulty ensued, which resulted in the killing of George Pearce, a colored man, and the wounding of several white and colored men. Thomas Collins, Chapman Shipp and Lee Shipp were accused of killing Pearce. The two Shippes were captured and tried for the offense and acquitted. Collins left the country, but recently returned. Sheriff Leonard, having learned that he was in the county, went to Saltville on Monday, the 17th inst, and succeeded in arresting him. He was taken before C. D. Carter, a Justice of the Peace, for R. H. Valley district and sent to jail. He had been formerly indicted and was arrested on a bench warrant. Collins was brought to Marion on Tuesday, and is now in jail.

Blind Tom.

The phenomenal negro pianist gave an entertainment at Seaver Opera House last night. It was the first time he ever appeared in Marion, and he was greeted with the largest and best paying audience that has ever been drawn in our town by any one. We had not heard Tom for a number of years; but with an increase of years his wonderful gift seems to improve and advance. Not only are his imitations of sounds and various musical instruments entertaining, but his rendition of the most difficult classical music can hardly be equaled by the most skillful and intelligent pianists of the day.

For pains and aches use Hart's Great Relief.

A Strange Bee Story.

We are told that one day last week a fire was kindled in a fireplace at the house of Mr. John Shannon, near Broad Ford, the fire place having been unused during the summer. Soon after the fire was kindled it was found that a swarm of bees had made their home in the chimney, and the honey and bees taking fire the house was in danger of being destroyed, but prompt measures were used and the danger averted.

Birthday Party of our Olden Citizen.

On last Monday Capt. F. P. Seay made a birthday dinner at the residence of his son, M. W. S. Staley. A number of his acquaintances were invited to join with him in the celebration of his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary. Among the guests were Judge G. W. Jones, Richard Johnson, Esq., Mrs. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Veal and Mrs. N. P. Pendleton. The occasion, we are told, was an enjoyable one for these venerable persons, and the entertainment was gotten up in the most excellent style for which Mrs. W. S. Staley is noted.

A BEAUTIFUL SCENE.

LIKE DISTANT THUNDER.

The Roar of a Sea of Flames Sweeping Over a Texas Prairie.

A prairie on fire is a sight seldom seen by people at the present time. Mr. B. P. Gardner, of the county auditor's office, tells of a thrilling experience he had not long ago while hunting on the plains of Texas.

"We left the railroad and journeyed into the interior of the great State on horseback," said Mr. Gardner, "with the tall, waving grass on every side as far as the eye could reach. We saw evidence of small fires from time to time, but we had made up our minds that we would see none of the fiery element itself. One Sunday we stopped for the day at a point about five hundred miles from any railroad. We proceeded to make ourselves comfortable for the day, for we were very tired and we intended to take a good rest. After breakfast stretched ourselves out on our blankets, with the ponies tied a short distance away, and were talking it easy as we could.

"All at once we heard a terrible noise like distant thunder, and jumping up we saw a sight we shall never forget. The prairie was on fire. For miles and miles, as far as we could, the flames shot up in the air with a deafening roar. The wind was blowing fresh and the fire was coming toward us with the swiftness of a railroad train. Looking in the opposite direction from the fire there was nothing to be seen but grass, grass, grass. There was no way of escape. The roar of the fire became louder and louder every minute. Birds went screaming, cawing for nothing but to get out of the way of the fire, which was eating them at a rapid rate, although it was yet many miles away. Our old guide, who had been around the prairie all his life, was frightened, much to my surprise. He cast his eye upon the fire and then away upon the waving sea of grass beyond, and said we must mount our ponies quickly and ride away before the fire as fast as we could. There was a trait about ten minutes away, he said, and when we reached that we would be alright. We mounted our ponies, but I knew well enough we could not go five miles before the fire would catch us.

"The roaring increased, and it began to get warm. Birds and animals used by us more frantic than ever. A fire struck me. Jumping from my pony I rushed out into the tall grass several hundred feet, and scoured a fire. I went with a whim, and in a minute or two a space of three or four hundred feet had been burned. We worked with a will, and soon had our ponies and effects in the middle of the bare spot. It was none too soon, for, looking in the direction of the fire I saw it pass at the point where we stood a few minutes before, and then it went by us with a terrific roar. It was terribly smoky and hot, but we were not burned to death, as we would have been if we had not followed the old guide."

Barbar Bally Beaten.

RICHMOND, VA., Dec. 7.—At the caucus of the democrats last Thursday the nomination of United States Senator was made the special and continuing order for the session caucus to-night. The Barbar men flustered and tried to stave off the vote, and after a tedious delay Maj. John W. Daniel was nominated by Marshall McCormick, senator from Clarke. Mr. Barbour was nominated by Senator Taylor Berry, of Acherester.

Delegate Stuart made a forcible and almost bulldozing speech for Barbour, but it did not avail anything, and upon a vote of 66 to 31. This exceeded the expectation of the most sanguine Daniel men. The democrats harmonized at once on the result and the best of feeling prevailed.

Speaker Stuart withheld the appointment of his committees until to-morrow, but this even had no effect.

Sickness in the Country. Reports from the country indicate that there is at this time more than the usual amount of sickness prevailing. Most of these troubles seem to arise from an impure condition of the blood caused by an excessive secretion of bile. This causes fevers of a bilious character, and we regret to say in some places it has proved very fatal. We therefore offer this gratuitous advice to those not yet afflicted: Keep your liver in a healthy condition, and your blood rich and pure. Good blood means good health, whilst bad blood bad health. Hart's Blood and Liver pills are entirely vegetable and are just the pills needed at this season of the year.

We have placed in our store a Bargain-Counter, ladies will find on it—Zats, Fans, Parasols, Hosiery, Gloves, Braids, &c., &c., at about half of the original cost, it will pay all to see these genuine attractions. G. F. CRUSH & CO.

A Clear Head and a Strong Heart.

If you muddle your brains with any of the whiskey compounds which are sold under the name of "bitters," and which topers delight in for stimulants, you do your system irreparable mischief. Brown's Tonic Bitters is not one of these. It promotes healthy action of the heart, liver and stomach. It cleanses and enriches the blood, and fits the brain for the best mental work. The best physicians prescribe it, and it is worthy of a trial by all.
