

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RICHMOND, VA., February 1st, 1882.

There is one question that now engages the attention, chiefly, of not only the Legislature but the public generally, and that is "what will be the result of the effort of Mr. MASSEY and his very few followers to dictate to the Readjuster party, and the large majority of the representatives of that party in the General Assembly who have decided against MASSEY?"

Yesterday the joint resolution with regard to repealing the poll-tax qualification for voting came up in the House of Delegates upon its passage. It was amusing to see how the Funders conducted themselves upon this occasion when compared with their conduct in 1879, when the same resolution was before the House of Delegates.

The smallpox scare is constantly diminishing, as there is evidence that the disease is on the decrease in the city. On Monday night a heavy snow fell here and the ground is still covered with a thick sheet of white.

The N. Y. Herald says: "A London journal discusses the question why on the average so many more commercial men than physicians attend church, and says that the physician has the excuse of his everyday duties. But we regard it as every day duties. But we regard it as every day duties."

It seems to satisfy a family want, and I wonder how we ever got along without Parker's Ginger Tonic. It cured me of nervous prostration, and I have used it since for all sorts of complaints in our family.—Mrs. J. S. Albany.

THE CONVICTED.

Working for a New Trial—Some Affidavits Alleged to Have Been Obtained by Mr. Scoville—A Statement that the Jurymen Read a Newspaper.

Last evening there were some mysterious movements in an office in the neighborhood of Sixth street and Louisiana avenue, and the gas was lighted therein to a very late hour. Mr. Scoville was in this office for a long time, and in the early part of the evening Mr. Hayden, formerly assistant district attorney, was present, with a Mr. Snyder, an employe of the National Hotel.

"Because I cannot ask these officers to violate their duty," said John, explaining to his brother the nature of the order that had been made. "I object to any such order as that," said the prisoner. "I will have it overruled."

Mr. Guiteau then withdrew. "Of course, my brother has forfeited his rights now," he said to the reporter. "I think it is proper that no member of his family, nor any one else, should be allowed to see him alone. We might take him poison, or something of that kind. Of course we do not intend to do any such thing, but the principle is the same. I think my brother looks anxious—more anxious than I ever saw him. He spoke very gently to me—in a way much different from the way he would refer to me in court."

Warden Crocker did not arrive at the jail until this afternoon, and was not there when John Guiteau called. He said afterwards that he did not intend his instructions to exclude members of the prisoner's family. The prisoner spent his day in a very quiet manner, seeing no one but his guards.

John W. Guiteau was asked by a Star reporter to-day if he thought his brother would not lose his courage when he lost his confidence in escaping the legal penalty of his act. "He will not lose his confidence till the last moment," said Mr. Guiteau. "After his motion for a new trial is overruled he will be confident in his appeal to the court in banc. When that is disposed of he will never lose faith in the expectation that President Arthur will pardon him. I believe that his conscience is all right. He thinks it was right for him to shoot President Garfield. Sometimes I am in doubt about the case myself. I don't know whether it is lunacy or depravity or what it is. It is a strange case."

Mr. Scoville was found in his room this afternoon busily at work on his papers. When asked about the affidavits referred to above he laughed and said evasively: "We'll file a lot of affidavits about newspapers and everything else. Some of them may be signed by a man named Snyder and some by other people. Tomorrow you can get all the information you want."

A Star reporter went down to the jail this morning in company with John W. Guiteau. On the way John read the assassins address to the American people. "I can't tell what to think of him," he observed. "I do not wonder that people think him too smart to be insane. Scoville thinks he is incoherent. Is there anything incoherent about that address? Sometimes I think there is a good deal of fraud about him. He says Porter was right, because Porter was right when he said that this man was always after money. There is hardly a letter he ever wrote to father or Scoville that he didn't ask for money. Whenever he wanted money he was always very pleasant and agreeable."

was in his reply. He said he had never studied Shakespeare with reference to this case. He did not think that he never studied Shakespeare. When Guiteau arrived at the jail he was met in the ante-room by the announcement that the warden had given instructions not to admit any one to the cell, making no exceptions. He was permitted, however, despite this rule, to shake hands with his brother through the grated door. "I slept well last night," the prisoner said when he greeted his brother, "and I feel well this morning. Why don't you come in?" asked the assassin.

"Because I cannot ask these officers to violate their duty," said John, explaining to his brother the nature of the order that had been made. "I object to any such order as that," said the prisoner. "I will have it overruled."

Mr. Guiteau then withdrew. "Of course, my brother has forfeited his rights now," he said to the reporter. "I think it is proper that no member of his family, nor any one else, should be allowed to see him alone. We might take him poison, or something of that kind. Of course we do not intend to do any such thing, but the principle is the same. I think my brother looks anxious—more anxious than I ever saw him. Motion for a New Trial to be heard on Friday.

WASHINGTON, January 30.—In the Criminal Court this morning the court fixed upon Friday next as the day for hearing arguments upon the motion for a new trial for Guiteau.

Mr. Scoville called attention to the fact that one of the affidavits in support of the motion had annexed to it a copy of the Critic. The allegation was that during the trial the paper had been read by the jury, and that it bore on the margin what purported to be the signatures of four of the jurors. The jurors denied that they saw any newspaper or put their names upon any newspaper during the time they were empaneled. He thought it important to cross-examine the jurors in connection with their admission that they had during that time given their autographs to various persons; he asked that the jurors be produced in court, or that the court appoint a commission to take depositions, and that he be allowed to produce further testimony as to the genuineness of the handwriting.

The District Attorney said he did not intend the jury should be put on trial, that the gentleman who filed the affidavit and had purloined the paper had already been bound over for forgery in the district. He would show that this was a clever attempt at forgery.

The court said he thought he would avail himself of the discretion of the court, and question the parties making the affidavits, and suggested to the District Attorney that the jurors be present on Friday.

Smallpox Spread by Carriages.

PHILADELPHIA, January 28.—Some excitement was caused to-day by the publication of a letter addressed to the Board of Health by D. H. Schuyler, an undertaker who writes that smallpox is being spread over the city by means of carriages. He says that it is largely the custom here to have the bodies of children who die of smallpox or other contagious diseases carried to the cemetery in a carriage, instead of a hearse as a carriage costs less. Very often, after a carriage returns to the stable after such a funeral, it is immediately sent to take a family shopping, to the theatre, or elsewhere. Inquiry among the undertakers of the city corroborates Schuyler's statements. The undertakers say there is no doubt but that many cases of smallpox found among well-to-do families and for which no cause has been assigned arose in this way. This practice is said to prevail more or less in every large city and one undertaker said that in New York he knew it prevailed, because he had been in business there at one time. Schuyler's reason for writing the letter is, he says, that he could not bear to see death spread so certainly any longer. He admits having been guilty of the practice himself.

Baltimore in Luck.

Baltimore is a lucky city. It already has a fine library of reference, through the liberality of the late Geo. Peabody, and now comes Mr. Enoch Pratt with an offer to provide a free circulating library on condition that the city will pay $50,000 a year for its support and maintenance. This proposition includes a central building, and the lot on which it stands, the edifice having already been begun, and to be capable of holding 200,000 volumes; four branch libraries in different parts of the city, and an endowment fund of $833,333.33. All the city has to do is to raise every year what is equivalent to six per cent. on this sum. Mr. Pratt is intelligent as well as benevolent. He recognizes the use of both reference and circulating libraries, and the difficulty of combining them in one institution. Hence, as Baltimore's scholars are already well furnished with literary ammunition, he is looking out for the interests of the people at large. Moreover, he seems to have a healthy appreciation of the incompetency of municipal bodies to maintain trusts like that which he proposes to create. He therefore claims the right to select the first Board of Trustees, and that future vacancies shall be filled by the remaining members of the board itself. It is an interesting fact he is not a native of the city for which he proposes such a splendid benefaction. He has shown, however, his right to call himself one of her sons. If she does not hereafter become noted as an intellectual centre, it will be proved that she is wedded to coffee and oysters, and is utterly unappreciative of her two libraries and the progressive John Hopkins University.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Mrs. Garfield called at the Mayor's office in Cleveland, O., on Tuesday and examined the elegant bronze plate just received from Tiffany & Co., of New York, to be attached to the bronze coffin containing the remains of the President. The plate is of heavy, solid design, and possesses such intricacies of carving that over three months were consumed in its conception. Its size is 18 by 8 inches, and bears, in raised letters, the inscription "Garfield, 1881." The carving, to an unpracticed eye, presents simply a bas-relief of leaves and acorns, and at each end an open lily; but each stem, twig, leaf is emblematic of the life and character of the dead President. Mrs. Garfield expressed her unqualified appreciation of the work. The plate was attached to the coffin yesterday.

A bill has been introduced in the House of Delegates to alter the charter of the city of Richmond. A bill introduced to authorize the corporation of Fredericksburg to establish a poor-house and grounds outside of the corporate limits, and a bill passed to provide for the election of two commissioners of the revenue for the counties of Fluvanna and Stafford. The Governor's veto of the bill to consolidate the Richmond and Southwestern and other railroads was sustained by a unanimous vote.

James F. White, who killed James Rose, a farmer, at Barnesville, Pike county, Ga., three months since, and for whose arrest $1,000 reward was offered by Gov. Colquitt, of Georgia, was apprehended at Mobile, Ala., Monday, and is now in jail awaiting a requisition from the Governor of Georgia.

STATEMENT Under Oath

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease called by some M. D.'s Psoriasis, and others Leprosy, commencing on my scalp, and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skillful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any work, and suffered intensely all the time. Every morning there could be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of the winter my skin commenced cracking open, tried everything, almost that could be thought of without any relief. The 13th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One day I treated me about two weeks but did not get good. I thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracks through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs, feet badly swollen, toe nails came off, finger nails dead and hard as stone, hair dead and lifeless as straw. Oh, my God! how I did suffer."

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said 'we will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief, stopped the terrible burning sensation from the world. They immediately got Cuticura Remedies (blood purifier), Cuticura and Cuticura Soap (the great skin cures). I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Resolvent three times a day, after meals. Had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura morning and evening. Result, returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper."

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Farm Notes.

The compost heap—look well to it! Have the horses a dry warm stable? Are your sheep properly cared for?

Wealth is only the value of that which labor creates.

Are your cisterns and wells protected from slop-water from cess-pools?

Is the barn-yard well drained and the stock supplied with a dry enclosure.

Are all the farm implements and tools securely housed against the inclemency of the weather?

How about the hogs? Have they a suitable run? A woods pasture with plenty of running water is the best for them.

Salt your stock well, and remember that watering live stock is an essential to their success as watering stock is to the mammoth corporations.

Are your wheat, rye and meadows protected from stock during wet weather.

Don't keep poor stock of any kind. Sell, kill or give away all that you cannot provide for comfortably, and feed well.

How about the straw stack? Much of it that has heretofore been allowed to go waste can be utilized in feed and adding to the manure pile.

On the deposits to the manure pile depend the farmer's profits and wealth.

How about the gullies and washes on your hill-side fields? Have them attended to before spring work begins.

If you have never tried ditching and draining your damp and wet lands, commence at once. A trial, ever so small, will convince you of the benefits and remove all doubts you may have entertained on the subject.

The only leisure for a successful farmer is the day of rest—the Sabbath,—and harvest time "between the rounds."

Keep your stock in good growing order, but not to fat. Colts should have all the exercise they want. The time to break them is before they are weaned. Colts thus handled are never difficult to manage, and are seldom addicted to vicious habits.

In breeding any kind of stock, never take an imperfect or faulty sire. If you would improve your stock and have the best, breed only to and from the best.

Never allow a goose in your barn-yard, or house-lot, or in water used for your stock.

Never use a poor or indifferent plow or farm implement. The profit and economy to the farmer is in using the best implement of every kind that is made.

Let the people give the demagogue to understand that capital is the servant and not the master of labor.

Let our law-makers enact laws to protect the weak; the strong can take care of themselves.

If you have not done so, lay the foundation now for a compost heap for the truck-patch next spring.

Jack Frost is the original and greater of sub-soilers. His work is thorough, and does not cost a cent.

Don't forget nor neglect to harrow your wheat crop in the spring if you would increase the yield.

Never let pigs get poor at any stage of their existence. The smoke-house in the place to winter all hogs except those kept for breeding purposes.

Take your county paper. Every county should have a good county paper. If you can afford but one, let it be your county journal. The people are judged more by their newspapers than anything except their churches, school-houses, farm buildings and public roads.

What would be thought of a doctor who never reads a medical journal; and yet we find many farmers—men wearing out their lands and their lives because they will not spend a few dollars for an agricultural paper.

A hog that is to be killed in the morning should go to bed on an empty stomach.

Terrible itching and scaly humors, ulcers, sores and scrofulous swellings cured by the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap (the great skin cures) externally, and Cuticura Resolvent (blood purifier) internally. Ask about them at your druggists.

Death to rats, mice, roaches and ants; Parson Exterminator. Burns granaries and households cleared in a single night. No fear of bad smells. Best and cheapest vermin killer in the world. Sold everywhere.
