"You I Love, not Another."

"Tell me, Nellie, is it true, Jamie comes a courting you? I have loved you many a year, I still love you. Never fear, My devotion can decay. Do you love me, Nellie, say! Others may their passion rue, Changing one love for another; But my heart is ever true, You I love, and not another."

II.

"Tell me when the summer goes, Nellie—and the summer rose— When the twilights shorten down, And the fields are tinged with brown, If thy love I may not win, Gather Love's sweet harvest in? Others may their passion rue, Changing one love for some other; But my heart is ever true, You I love, and not another."

THE MAIDEN'S REPLY.

"Jamie is not courting me, Dearest Tom—we don't agree; He is only my first cousin, You of him are worth a dozen! I invited him one day, Just to see what you might say, So if your heart is kind and true, And you do not love some other, There'll be little left to do, But quickly go and ask my mother."

III.

"The sun, setting in the golden amber, flung its beams in a parting caress over the rippling blue waves of the bay of Naples. Near the water's edge, all embowered in vines, was a tiny cottage, and on its only low porch, before her spinning wheel, sat Rosolyte, the daughter of Flavio the vine dresser.

As she turned her wheel she sang in a low voice dreamingly to herself. Suddenly her song ceased, as from the cottage door issued the figure of her father. He was a very old man and his features betokened thought and intelligence beyond his humble station. Just now he seemed greatly excited; for, as he came to his daughter's side, his eyes flashed and his face worked convulsively.

"Father, what is it? what has happened?" she cried, in evident alarm. To her question the old man answered nothing, but held out to her his hand, in which rested a small, round object.

"Father, speak, and tell me the reason of your excitement. I do not see aught in this you show me to cause it.

The old man seated himself by his daughter's side, and began a long and earnest explanation; and as she listened the girl's mobile features lighted up with a fever equal to his own. For then and there, in the humble vine dresser's cottage was explained for the first time the properties of that wonderful magnetic needle which has since been the guide of every mariner on the great deep.

"My daughter," said the old man at length, "I have labored and thought long, and now success is near at hand; but my work is not done until some one high and powerful sees and understands its importance."

"Father," exclaimed Rosolyte, "in three more weeks will be a fete day, and the king and queen will be in the city. Shall we not go and lay your discovery at their feet? I have heard that they delight to honor all who, like themselves, love learning."

His daughter's proposition found favor with Flavio; and the time passed slowly on until the impatiently looked for morning dawned.

"Make yourself fair, my child," said Flavio, laying his aged hand proudly upon his daughter's head. "For who knows but that to-day may be the turning-point in your destiny? Some noble lord may see and love my Rosolyte."

The girl grew very pale as she said: "Father, you know that neither loving nor marrying are any more in my thoughts. You refused your consent to Paulo, and drove him from my side by your stern decision; and now I shall never see any one else who will have the power to touch my heart."

"Rosolyte," Flavio said, "what I did was for the best. Paulo was but poor; and I foresaw that in the future Flavio's daughter might be a bride for the richest and noblest. You will not repeat having sacrificed your feelings to your duty as an obedient child."

Rosolyte did not reply, for at her father's words came vividly back the memory of her young lover's passionate, pleading tones as he besought her to leave all and come with him who loved her so well and truly.

Rosolyte's instinctive good taste taught her that her simple muslin dress would become her; and, attired in white, brightened only by a sash and belt of rose-hued ribbon, she started with her father on the way to the great city, where Flavio was to learn whether his ambitious dreams were to be realized, or whether as a poor vine-dresser he was to end his fast declining days.

As Rosolyte had said, it was fete day. Down the street, beneath the myriad waving banners, came the royal cavalcade. Foremost rode King Ferdinand, and by his side, on a snow-white palfrey, his lovely wife, Queen Jeanne.

Then followed the nobles, who had been honored by being allowed to form the immediate escort of their sovereigns. Conspicuous among the glittering throng was one youth, taller and nobler than the others. As he passed the porch from beneath which Flavio and his daughter were gazing out upon the scene, novel spectacle, his eyes suddenly rested upon Rosolyte. A crimson flush sprang to his very brow. In another moment he had passed, and Rosolyte had not seen him.

It was late in the day, and the time had arrived when the king received the petitions of his subjects. In the line awaiting their turn was Flavio, a simple vine dresser, who held in his hand a precious discovery which contained his precious discovery, and the other resting upon his daughter's shoulder.

Suddenly a page, clad in the royal colors, approached.

"Is your name Flavio?" he said. "If so, you and this maiden are to come with me."

Wonderingly, Flavio and Rosolyte followed their guide.

Quickly beat the heart of the village girl as she found herself in the presence of royalty; and, with her eyes timidly veiled beneath their dark fringes, she stood while her father, in few but clearly expressed words, laid before his sovereign his invention.

As King Ferdinand listened interestedly, Queen Jeanne rose and beckoned to Rosolyte to come forward. Tremblingly she advanced, looking, in her simple robe in that gorgeous assemblage, like a pure white rose-bud amid a setting of dazzling tropical exotics.

Queen Jeanne noticed her agitation, and, gently laying her hand upon her arm, she drew her close to her side and looked penetratingly into her face.

"Truly, our nephew has a good taste," she murmured softly to herself.

By this time Flavio had finished his explanation, and, with eyes whose light age had no power to dim, he was receiving his king's commendations and congratulations. It was a proud moment. The success he had dreamed of was his.

Suddenly Queen Jeanne's soft voice interrupted her husband's words.

"My liege," she said, "have I your permission to carry out at this present and most opportune moment the intention of which I told you some time back?"

Then, as her husband signified his consent, she turned to Rosolyte.

"Sweet one," she said, "I have long known of you—of your beauty and great goodness—and had intended ere now to have summoned you to our presence; but hearing of your father's discovery, and that he intended to lay it before the king, have waited until now."

"Some time ago, while passing through the village in which you live, a young and favorite kinsman of ours saw and lost his heart to you. He told me of his passion and besought my help, which (for I love him as a brother), I promised.

"I ask you, in the presence of our selfes and these witnesses, will you consent to be united in holy matrimony to our nephew, the young Lord D'Abigny?"

Rosolyte had listened, almost uncomprehendingly, to the above startling words. Now she drew back, and the delicate color excitement had brought faded from her face, as, in low, but resolute tones, she replied: "Pardon me, most gracious Queen, but I shall never marry!"

As he heard, Flavio started to her side, and, low in her ear, whispered: "My daughter did I not promise you that this day would be the turning-point in our lives? Do not now ruin all by your foolish clinging to the past. Accept this great good fortune which is laid before you."

But the maiden was firm.

"Your majesty," she said, "I know of no noble lord whom I have ever seen; but there is one, and only one—a humble artist—who has my heart even though I shall never meet him more; for he left me in anger, deeming me cold, because I refused to disobey my father's commands."

With an arch smile curving her lovely mouth, Queen Jeanne turned to a group of courtiers who stood in a distant corner of the audience-chamber.

"My Lord D'Abigny, come near, she said.

Suddenly Rosolyte felt her hand clasped, and her eyes rested upon a handsome, pleading face she well knew.

"Paulo!" she ejaculated.

"Yes, Rosolyte; can you forgive me my deception? I wished to win my wife for love of myself alone, and I, the Lord D'Abigny, am the Paulo—the humble artist—whom you sent away so coldly and cruelly. I was deeply angered at first; but I soon learned that it was only filial obedience which had caused your actions, and then I laid my desperate case before my aunt—our gracious queen—and in this romantic manner it has pleased her to fulfill her promise of assistance."

Thus, with the marriage in the full blaze of court glory, of the Lord D'Abigny and Rosolyte, the daughter of Flavio, the discoverer of the magnetic needle, was completed a romance which, wherever the liquid Italian tongue is known, has been sung in the ballads and told in prose and verse.

A Stricken Journalist.

A recent issue of the Texas Trombone contains a touching tribute to the memory of Mrs. Spinner, the talented wife of the editor.

He says feelingly: "Thus my wife died. No more will those loving hands pull off my boots and part my back hair as only a true wife can. Nor will those willing feet replenish the coal shed or water pail. No more will she arise amid the tempestuous storms of winter and hie away to build the fire without disturbing the slumbers of the man who doted on her so artlessly. Her memory is embalmed in my heart of hearts. I wanted to embalm her body, but I found that I could embalm her memory cheaper."

"I procured of Eli Midget, one of my neighbors, a very pretty gravestone. His wife was consumptive, and he kept it on hand for several years in anticipation of her death, but she rallied last spring, and his hopes were blasted. Never shall I forget the poor man's grief when I asked him to part with it."

"Take it, Spinner, and may you never know what it is to have your soul disappointed as mine has been!" and he burst into a flood of tears.

"I had the following epitaph engraved upon the tombstone: "To the memory of T A BITHA, Wife of Moses Spinner, Esq., gentlemanly editor of the Trombone.

CAN THEY DODGE THEIR RECORD?

In State and National elections the Democratic party has heretofore developed a wonderful capacity for dodging and evading important issues before the people. This dodging capacity of the Democracy not only gave it control of our State but in 1884 enabled them to elect a President of the United States and get a decided majority in the House of Representatives. The people were deceived by the positions of the Democracy on all the great leading National questions. Human ingenuity could not have devised a more thoroughly mythical paper than the last platform of the National Democracy. Only those who were well versed in the tricks and ingenuity of that party could detect the deceptions of that most remarkable so-called platform of principles. It was so worded that the "free trader" was confident that it was intended to place the party on the position he occupied, the incidental protectionist was quite as well satisfied while the ultra protectionist of American labor could read its lines and gather a measure of comfort therefrom. The platform of the National Democracy was equally as uncertain and delusive on the educational question. Mr. Morrison who was the projector or author of the platform recently declared on the floor of the hall of the House of Representatives that the platform was never designed to pledge the Democratic party to the passage of the Blair Educational Bill or any similar measure. He spoke the truth, no doubt, but in the campaign of 1884 the Democrats in all sections where the Blair Educational Bill was popular with the masses of the people undertook to prove that the party was in favor of Federal aid to the cause of popular education, and they cited the platform to show that it was. On the question of the Internal Revenue the platform was less vague, but the Democratic promise in that particular has not been made good, so its pledge was a fraud. Since the election of 1884 the Democracy has made a record that, we believe, cannot be evaded. A Democratic administration and House of Representatives have placed the party in a position that will render it unable to further deceive the people, unless they want to be humbugged. President Cleveland has not hesitated to show his hand as a "free trader." All the power and influence of the administration have been brought to bear upon recalcitrant Democrats in the House to bring them into a support of Morrison's new free trade measure. For the past few days the pressure has been very great. On the first effort to call up the tariff reform bill the Democrats voted nearly solidly with Morrison, while a small minority voted with the Republicans, who were quite as nearly united against free trade as Morrison and his Democratic followers were for it. The record is about made for the Democratic party in the coming campaign on the tariff question. Can they dodge it? On the educational question the dominant party has made a very plain record. The Democratic House of Representatives has again refused to pass the Blair Bill. It is now a dead measure, killed by the Democratic party. The South has been deprived of dollars that were greatly needed to aid in the enlightenment of the masses of the people. The Democrats in Virginia pledged the National party to the passage of the Blair Bill. How will they escape the wrath of the people they have so grossly deceived? Will they try to dodge the record? The Democratic party has stood absolutely pledged to the abolition of the Internal Revenue. How long has it been since Democratic speakers were declaiming against the revenue iniquity? It was to be repealed as soon as their party got control of the government. This pledge has not only been violated, but the corps of revenue officers has been greatly increased. There used to be one officer for each three counties but now they have three officers for each county and a countless host of spies. How are they going to explain this to the people? Can they dodge the record? The new council takes charge of the town to-day and will, no doubt, administer the affairs of the population in a satisfactory manner.

By virtue of my appointment and commission as Superintendent of Public Schools of Smyth county, I this day assume the duties of said office. All persons having business with me as such Supt. can see me at my law office on Reservoir street in the town of Marion.

Hon. Jeff Coffee has distinguished himself by becoming a member of that great dude brigade. We are glad to hear of this grand move which Mr. Coffee has taken.

Good News.

At last a work has been published that meets the wants of everybody. Cram's Family Atlas of the world fills the bill. It contains 200 pages, 12x14 inches in size, consisting of beautiful colored maps of every country in the world, a separate map for each country and for each State in America, with all railroads, stations and island towns clearly shown, exhibiting all the changes that have occurred in the world, down to the present year. These maps would cover 50 square feet of surface, if placed side by side. Besides maps, the Atlas contains a large number of valuable diagrams and tables of Statistics, showing everything by comparison, so that it can be seen at a glance, a condensed outline of American History from 986 to the present time, a History of the colonization of America, and the principles of every political party that has ever existed in the United States. Last, but not least, are index, giving the population and location of every city, town, village and postoffice in the United States. This work, the most complete of its kind ever published, and which ought to be in every house in the land, sells for $3.75. C. H. Maury, Marion, Va., is Agent for this section, and desires to employ Agents for Wythe, Pulaski and Grayson counties. He also sells Dr. Talmage's 13 Sermons on the "Wedding Ring," neatly bound in cloth, for 50cts.

That Fishing Party

Which has been so long talked of, left Marion on Monday morning last, according to appointment, for the waters of New River, Grayson county, Va., and Alleghany county, N.C., traveling all day in rains and over muddy roads, to a country where there are many good and clever people, but as yet the question of local option has never been voted upon. Our fun-loving people of this place, we hope, may be successful in their efforts to catch the forty-pound Cat and the six-pound Bass, which our friends dreamed about, provided they don't get too wet during this rainy season. There was much anxiety manifested by many to see the party start off, but as the brass band failed to give notice by their music, set to the words, "tramp, tramp, the boys are coming." But few had the pleasure of witnessing their start. When they return, no doubt, it will be in the dark hours of the night of some day not fixed for their arrival, but when they do get back they give will their own account of their doings, which, of course, will not be questioned. The following are the names of the gentlemen who composed the party: W. P. Francis, Geo. Seaver, Thos. Pruner, Geo. R. Rider, R. M. Goodell, G. W. Wright, and E. J. Halter. They took provision with them and do their own cooking. They join the party which left here last week.

Temperance Column.

JULY - - - 1, 1886.

D. C. MILLER, EDITOR.

The organization of Good Templars is steadily growing in the world—notably in the United States and particularly in the South. Nothing in our opinion is going to benefit trade and commerce so much as the abolition of the liquor traffic. A permanent good results to communities and to society by the banishing of the wine cup. That is the experience and history of all places where the traffic does not exist. Law, order and peace are all advanced by its disuse. Bad temper and quarrels are kept down wherever we have sober men at our public gatherings. Men are beginning to see and to realize these facts, and to act accordingly. We are satisfied that 19/20 of every community will admit this upon serious reflection.

Wherever the question has been thoroughly canvassed and submitted to the people it has rarely failed to carry. In our own State, at a recent election in Goodson township, Washington county, it was favorable to the anti liquor party. North Carolina, some years ago, voted largely against the temperance party. Recently the city of Raleigh, the State Capitol, went for prohibition, and a large number of precincts in the country and in the towns went the same way. So we congratulate ourselves that the Order is in a flourishing condition.

Our Obligation.

We fear a great many of our members do not sufficiently grasp our obligation. Let us remind you that the word Lodge does not occur in it, but we do pledge ourselves that we will do all in our power to promote the good of our Order, and in the failure of the members to remember that they are working for a cause and not wholly for their Lodge, we believe lies the greatest hindrance to our success. We have often observed with pain the feeling of jealousy which sometimes exists between different Lodges, and the disposition to find fault with anything new suggested by others. There should at all time be a healthy rivalry each striving to excel in good words and works, and should we chance to fall behind some others, we should not envy them their success, but only regret our inability to keep up with them. There is too much work to do and too few workers to do it, for those few to waste their time and strength on one another. Let each one while striving to make their own Lodge the very best, remember that they are only a portion of the one great army marching by different directions toward the one common enemy.—Templar at Work.

A profit of evil—The rumrunner's gain. In Lowell, Mass., there are 400 liquor saloons and only twenty-four bakeries.

Through the introduction of scientific temperance instruction into the public schools of St. Louis, 20,000 children are daily taught the effects of alcohol and tobacco upon the human system.

In Great Breat there are 3,133 Wesleyan Bands of Hope, with 348,357 enrolled members. There are also 308 temperance societies, with 24,450 members.

Prof. Wilkens, Superintendent of the Washington Home, Chicago, says: "This year the liquor drunk by the victims seems to have been more adulterated than ever before. The more saloon-keepers have to pay for their license the more they adulterate their liquor."

A National Temperance camp-meeting, under auspices of the National Temperance Society, will be held at Ocean Grove, N. J., commencing July 28th, and continuing five days. George W. Bain, Edward Carswell and Mrs. Emily L. McLaughlin will be among the speakers.

The agricultural editor of the Daventry Telegraph, has this good piece of advice to offer: We wish to call the attention of the farmers that if they drop a soup bean or two in each hill of potatoes when they plant them that the pesky potato bug will never bother them, besides the protection of your potatoes you will get the crop of beans as well. Mr. John Duffy, an Iowa friend of ours, has tried this experiment for five years and has never been bothered with bugs while his neighbors just their crops. There is a smell about beans that keeps them away.

Miraculous Escape.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Barton, Randolph Co., Ind., was a long sufferer with Consumption, and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it. Free Trial Bottles at J. S. Pendleton's Drug Store.

Diarrhoea.

We are informed that this disease is now very prevalent all over the country, and in some cases has proved fatal by being allowed to run on into cholera morbus, dysentery, &c. Dr. Lytle's Elixir is acknowledged to be the best remedy in the market. Physicians who have examined the formula say it can't help being a first class medicine. Every one who has tried it knows it to be so.

An old Citizen Speaks.

Mr. J. M. Norris, an old resident of Rome, Ga., says that he had been badly troubled with Kidney Complaint for a great many years and with Eczema for three years; at times could scarcely walk and had tried many remedies without benefit, until he began taking Electric Bitters and another his hands and feet with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. This treatment afforded him great relief and he strongly recommends Electric Bitters to all who suffer with Kidney Complaints, or need a Blood Purifier. Sold by Jno. S. Pendleton.

In the olden times Achilles, the leader of the Greeks, chased Hector, the champion of the Trojans, several times around the city of Ilium and finally killed him. This would look as if Hector lacked backbone, but in truth, such was not the case; he wasn't well. For unfortunately he had lost his bottle of Dr. Hart's Great Relief. If this sad occurrence had not happened, the issue would have been different.

Royal Blood.

We are all kings and queens in this country, and we have a right to as good blood as that which courses through the veins of emperors. If the blood is poor and the cheeks are pale, it is well known that Brown's Iron Bitters is the great tonic which will give color, vigor, and vitality. Mr. M. K. Last evening at 8 o'clock, Frank L. Fornsell, foreman of the Commercial news room, and Mrs. M. S. Kennedy were married at the residence of the bride, on Gilmer street, Rev. Dr. G. C. Rankin officiating. The wedding was a quiet one, only a few friends of the contracting parties being present. The bride is a very estimable lady and has a wide circle of friends who will be highly pleased to learn that she has secured a husband who will make her a worthy companion. The groom has been at the head of the news room of this office since the Daily Commercial was started, and is one of the most efficient foremen in the south. The happy couple were the recipients of some very handsome gifts from their friends. They start out in life with bright prospects and the Commercial extends to them its hearty congratulations and expresses the hope that the pleasant surroundings which attended their marriage last evening may be but the augury of the many happy days which await them on their pathway through life together.—Chatanooga Commercial.

We extend most hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Fornsell, and wish them a long and happy life. Mrs. Fornsell is a daughter of our esteemed townsman, Mr. R. J. Venable.

Death of Judge John A. Campbell.
Monday evening, of last week, a gloom was cast over town, even while the wedding bells were ringing, when the announcement was made that Judge Campbell had had a sudden relapse, and his attending physician, Dr. G. E. Wiley, thought his lease of life could not last but a few hours, at the farthest. Thursday morning, the sad news was learned that he was no more. The angel of death had spirited his soul to that country beyond the river, from which none ever return. Early in March his condition was found to be alarming, when he was advised to take a trip to Washington, not that strong hopes were entertained of his ultimate recovery, but that life, if possible, might be lengthened. In Washington he was stricken with paralysis, and as soon as could be, was brought home by his ever faithful and noble wife, since which time his death was at any time expected.

Judge Campbell's last sad funeral rites were held from St. Thomas Episcopal church, Saturday evening, and his remains were interred in Sinking Spring cemetery, to rest with his noble ancestors, to await the coming of that eventful day, when the grave will give up its dead.

Memorial services were held at the hotel at 10 o'clock, a. m., Monday, conducted by Rev. W. M. McPheters, her pastor, after which the remains were taken to Roundhill Cemetery for interment.

G. A. Sullivan left Tuesday morning for Liberty, where he goes to hold cases on one of the papers of that place.

We learn from the Richmond Dispatch that Fred W. Boatwright, son of Rev. E. B. Boatwright, of this place, has been awarded a medal for proficiency in reading, at the Richmond College. We congratulate our young friend on his success, and we express our very best wishes for his future success.

'Tis Said—

Base ball fever has struck Marion hard.
Some of our farmers have cut their wheat.
Billy Hester was in town this week.
Asylum hill is a Sunday resort for visitors.
Our meat market are doing a good business.
Depty' Henry Hull is rapidly completing his residence.
Nine Gipsy wagons passed through town Saturday evening.
There must have been a little "blockade" round Saturday night.
The colored B. B. Club will play the Blacksburg boys Saturday evening.
A number of Smyth county teachers will attend the normal school at Salem.
There is a great deal of sickness in the surrounding neighborhoods.
There was no preaching at the Methodist church Sunday morning or at night.
Two-for-a-nickle would be dudes were plentiful Sunday with their high hats.
A string band has been organized under the title of "The Serenaders," and with little a practice the boys can discord good music.
Farmers are busy working with their hay, though the weather has been unfavorable for hay-making.
An entertainment of some sort would be enjoyable now, as we have had nothing of the kind for a long while.
The picnic and exhibition at Mt. Carmel, under the supervision of Prof. Davenport was an enjoyable occasion.
Pink dresses comes to the front again, and a certain young lady looks too "utterly utter for anything" in that color.
"Darling Kiss My Eyelids Down," is the latest moonshine song; and he kisses them down, and up, and crosswise, and all around, and then settles on her mouth as a steady thing.
Some boys are very fond of taking strolls several times during the day, and when asked the reason, they say "I'm looking for Long Press Francis. Didn't you see him down about the bridge?" Press don't stay at the bride all the time.
That he—that is, you know—continually plays on a cornet, and his favorite piece used to be, "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer." A maiden lady living not far from the cornetist sent word, with compliments, that she heard his prayer, and would pay a month's wages for him in advance if he'd move to another part of the town.
A telephone line has been established from Saltville to Abingdon.
She's home at last and her heart is gay;
She opens her wardrobe, black! black!
She finds that while she's been away
The moths have devoured her seal skin sacque.

Death of Mrs. Walthall.
Mrs. Placie A., wife of Mr. S. L. Walthall, died at home (Central Hotel) in this place on Sunday last, in the 34 year of her age.

Mrs. Walthall was a member of Royal Oak Presbyterian church in this place, and was an exemplary christian. She was respected and beloved by all who knew her.

She leaves a kind and affectionate husband, three children, besides three other small children, who were in her charge, and one sister and two brothers to mourn their loss.

Her affliction was of long duration, which was borne by her patiently and without a murmur. Every attention was given her by skilled physicians, and no want of kindness of and relief was ever withheld by any of her family or others, but she is gone to receive her rewards in the sweet fields of paradise.

Memorial services were held at the hotel at 10 o'clock, a. m., Monday, conducted by Rev. W. M. McPheters, her pastor, after which the remains were taken to Roundhill Cemetery for interment.

Mt. Carmel Exhibition.

The closing exercises of Prof. Davenport's school on the 29th inst. was a very interesting and pleasant occasion. His pupils acquitted themselves with credit, and in some instances it was difficult for the Judges to decide who had won the prizes. The Mechanics Band furnished music for the occasion, and was complimented especially by the ladies. A picnic added to the comfort of the exhibition, the table being loaded with the best eatables, and, notwithstanding the large crowd, there was plenty

Save Your Ashes.

An Indiana farmer says: A ton of wood ashes contains a larger proportion of mineral matter than many may suppose.

Household Hints.

If meat bakes too fast cover with buttered paper. Unslacked lime near meat preserves it by keeping the air dry.

Parboiled old potatoes, putting them on in their skins in salted boiling water for ten minutes more, or until they show mealy when one is broken apart.

Maxims for Young Housekeepers.

Holding a pin between the teeth while peeling onions will prevent smarting of the eyes.

Buy bar-soap by the quantity. Keep it where it will dry, and it will go much further in using.

Prick potatoes before baking, so that the air may escape; otherwise they may burst in the oven.

Put fresh fish in salted water half an hour before cooking it. It hardens the fish and improves the flavor.

In paring fruit for canning, use a silver knife, so that the fruit may not turn dark-colored.

One third of a tea-cup of molasses is a good substitute for a wine-glass of brandy in fruit-cake or puddings.

If one or two pigs of a litter are smaller or weaker than the rest, allow them to suck a week or two after the stronger ones are weaned.

Stirring the cream frequently will make more butter. Churn at sixty-two degrees to get the cream quickest into butter.

Save the heifer calves from the best cows and raise them.

How to Succeed.

- Don't worry. Don't overwork. Keep a high vitality. Sleep well, eat well, enjoy life.

It is better for your credit to postpone payment squarely than to pretend to pay by giving a check dated ahead.
